NOTIFICATION.

Minister in charge: The Hon'ble Sir S. N. Banarji, Kt.

No. 1716Medl.—The 30th June 1921.—It is hereby notified for general information that the Government of Bengal (Ministry of Local Self-Government) are pleased to issue the following revised rules for the management, admission and training of students in the Government Medical Schools in Bengal, in supersession of the rules published under notification No. 47T.-Medl., dated the 6th May 1920 :—

Rules for the management of the Government Medical Schools in Bengal.

Section I.—General.

1. Control.—The control and management of the Government Medical Schools in Bengal are vested in the Superintendents of schools under the general supervision of the Surgeon-General with the Government of Bengal.

2. Names of Government Medical Schools.—There are at present three Government Medical Schools in the Presidency, viz. :—

(1) The Campbell Medical School at Calcutta.
(2) The Dacca Medical School at Dacca.
(3) The Ronaldshay Medical School at Burdwan.

3. Both men and women are trained in the Campbell and Dacca Medical schools for the "Licentiate Examinations" of the State Medical Faculty, Bengal. In the Ronaldshay Medical School, only men are so trained. Students passing the final examination of the Faculty receive the diploma of "Licenciate of the State Medical Faculty, Bengal."

4. Length of Course.—The Course of study for the Licence of the State Medical Faculty in the Schools extends over four years.

5. Sessions.—The summer session shall commence on the 1st July and the winter session on the 1st November. Students shall join by the opening day of the summer session. As a special case a student may be permitted to join within a week of the commencement of this session, provided that (1) he is able to satisfy the Superintendent that the delay was unavoidable, and (2) that he pays a late fee of Re. 1.

6. Number of Students.—The number of students in each school shall ordinarily be as follows :—

Campbell Medical School	...	...	... 500
Dacca Medical School	...	...	... 400
Ronaldshay Medical School	...	...	... 200

To guard against excessive depletion from casualties of all kinds, 5 per cent. over the numbers above specified may be taken on the rolls at the beginning of the summer session.

Section II.—Admission.

7 Certificates.—Male candidates for admission to the schools shall produce the following certificates ;—

(1) Certificate of having passed the Matriculation Examination or any higher examination in Arts or Science of a recognized University—The School Final Examination for Indian Schools and the High School or Scholarship Examination for European Schools or any examination which is accepted by the Local Government as equivalent thereto will be accepted as equal to the Matriculation Examination.

(2) Certificate of character—From a Deputy Magistrate or a gentleman of equal position, or from the Principal or Head Master of the college or school in which the candidate last studied.

(3) Certificate of age—Candidates shall be over 16 years of age before commencing their studies.

8. Women candidates for admission shall produce the following certificates :—

(1) Certificate of general education : either—

(a) Certificate of having passed the Middle English Scholarship Examination ; or

(b) Certificate of satisfactory completion of the full course in a Middle English School ; or

(c) Certificate of having passed the primary examination held at the end of standard VI under the vernacular scheme of education and of being qualified in English up to that stage ; or

(d) Certificate from an Inspector of Schools of having passed the annual class examination held at the end of standard VI in a recognized High School or Middle English School in all the subjects of the prescribed curriculum including English.

(2) Certificate of character and residence—From a Deputy Magistrate or a gentleman of equal position, or from the Principal or Head Master of the school in which the candidate last studied, or from some other authority satisfactory to the Superintendent.

(3) Certificate of age—Candidates shall be over 17 years before commencing their studies.

N.B.—Women students are not admitted in the Ronaldshay Medical School at Burdwan.

9. If there are more candidates than vacancies, preference shall ordinarily be given (1) to those who are natives of the Presidency, and (2) to those who possess better educational qualifications.

10. Application for admission.—An application for admission into the Medical School shall be submitted in Form A appended to these rules, together with the certificates laid down in rule 7 or 8 ; and shall reach the Superintendent's office at the Campbell Medical School on or before the 10th June in each year, at the Dacca Medical School and the Ronaldshay Medical School (Burdwan) on or before the 25th June or within ten days of the publication of the results of the Matriculation Examination.

11. All candidates shall appear before the Superintendent, on the date notified, for examination as to their mental and physical fitness for the study of medicine ; this shall ordinarily be during the third week of June at the Campbell Medical School and the 30th June at the Dacca and Ronaldshay Medical Schools.

12. All women students of the Campbell Medical School shall reside in the Lady Elliot Hostel ; only under very exceptional circumstances shall permission be given for residence elsewhere. Any woman student who is requested by the Superintendent of the Medical School to leave the hostel shall automatically cease to be a student of the Campbell Medical School.

13. Women students of the Dacca Medical School are required to reside in the Government boarding house attached to the school : they shall be permitted to reside elsewhere under exceptional circumstances only.

Section III.—Transfer of students to other Medical Schools.

14. Transfers.—Transfers are allowed only at the beginning of the session, and then only under very special and exceptional circumstances. A student applying for transfer shall submit his application to the Superintendent of the school to which he is attached, stating the reasons in full, by the 1st June.

15. The Superintendent, after first satisfying himself (1) that the applicant's conduct in the school has been good, and (2) that he has sucessfully passed the school test examination in the previous session, shall forward the application to the Superintendent of the school which the student is desirous of joining, with his recommendation. On receipt of sanction from the latter, he shall grant the certificate of transfer to the applicant, directing him to join not later than the 1st July.

Section IV.—Fees.

16. Admission.—Every male student before admission shall pay an entrance fee of Rs. 6 and the first quarterly instalment Rs. 18-12 of tuition fee. He shall also pay the annual sports and athletic club-fee of Rs. 2. In the Ronaldshay Medical school, the sports and athletic club-fee will not be charged till the hostel is built.

17. Muhammadan students are required to pay full fees, but a certain number of Muhammadans will obtain on application certain scholarships from the Mohsin Fund, the value and number of which will depend on the amount of the grant available from that fund.

18. Tuition Fee.—The tuition fee of Rs. 75 a year shall be paid in quarterly instalments of Rs. 18-12 in advance on or before the 15th of the first month of the quarter for which it is due. Should the 15th fall on a Sunday or school holiday, the fee shall be payable on the re-opening day. In the case of Durga Puja and Summer vacations the fees shall be paid in full before departure. Otherwise a late fee of Re. 1 shall be paid in the case of payments not made up to the 20th, and a late fee of Rs. 2 in the case of payments not made up to the end of the month. Failure to pay all fees due in full by the last day of the month shall automatically entail removal of the student's name from the rolls until the commencement of the next summer session.

N.B.—Students admitted before July 1919 will continue to pay their tuition fee at the old rate of Rs. 4 a month subject to the conditions set forth in this rule.

19. Exemption.—Students holding scholarships awarded under these rules by the Government of Bengal and free students shall be exempted from the payment of the tuition fee, but shall pay the entrance fee and the sports and athletic club fee.

20. Readmission.—A fee of Rs. 6 shall be payable on readmission by a student (1) who has been rusticated; (2) who has left the school without the permission of the Superintendent; or (3) whose name has been removed for non-payment of fees; provided that in the two latter cases his conduct and attendance while in the school have been good. In no case shall such a student be eligible for a scholarship or free-studentship after readmission until he has passed the next school test examination.

21. No readmission fee shall be payable on readmission by a student who left the school with the permission of the Superintendent.

22. A readmission fee of Rs. 6 shall be payable on each occasion by a first-year student who has failed in the March or subsequent school test examination and whose name has been automatically removed from the rolls—vide rule 69—and subsequently obtains permission to have his name retained. He shall not be eligible for a scholarship, free-studentship, or prize until he has passed the school test examination.

23. Refund.—No fees paid and credited in the school books shall be refunded under any circumstances, except in the case of a student who has been awarded a scholarship or free-studentship, with retrospective effect.

Section V.—Scholarships and Free-Studentships.

24. Men Students.—The following scholarships and free-studentships are open to male students at the schools, provided that they are natives of the Presidency :—

Name of School.		First-year class.	Second-year class	Third-year class.	Fourth-year class.
		Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.
Campbell Medical School	Scholarships—9 of ...	8 each	8 each	8 each	8 each
	Free-studentship—	9	9	9	9
Dacca Medical School.	Scholarships—6 of ...	8 each	8 each	8 each	8 each
	Free-studentship—	6	6	6	6
Rolandshay Medical School (Burdwan).	Scholarships—4 of ...	8 each	8 each	8 each	8 each
	Free-studentship—	4	4	4	4

25. Method of Award.—Scholarships shall be awarded to first-year students on admission in order of merit on the basis of the certificates of general education as laid down for admission (rule 7). Scholarships shall be awarded thereafter to first, second, third, and fourth-year students, respectively, in order of merit, on the results of the half-yearly school test examinations at each school.

26. One special scholarship of Rs. 15 shall be awarded each year to a poor student of the first-year class by the Surgeon-General with the Government of Bengal. Preference shall be given to a member of a depressed class. Subject to the scholarship-holder's good conduct, satisfactory progress and poverty, the scholarship is tenable for four years.

27. Free-studentships shall be awarded at the discretion of the Superintendent to deserving students requiring financial assistance. Any balance shall be awarded in the order of merit on the results of the half-yearly school test examinations.

28. Free-studentships are tenable in the first-year class from July to April following and in other classes from May to April. Failure in any school test examination shall involve forfeiture of the free-studentship during the subsequent session.

29. A student who has been awarded a scholarship on the results of the school test examinations shall forfeit his scholarship if he fails on two successive occasions at the respective examinations of the State Medical Faculty.

30. Women Students.—Twenty Government scholarships of the value of Rs. 20 each per month are available for women students at the Campbell Medical School, and thirteen of Rs. 20 each per month at the Dacca Medical School. A student who is granted a Government scholarship shall give a written undertaking, signed by her father or guardian, that on receiving a diploma she will serve Government or a local authority for a period not exceeding four years, if required to do so by the Surgeon-General with the Government of Bengal.

31. Scholarships are also given by district boards, municipalities, Countess of Dufferin Fund, and other approved associations or individuals—vide Appendix B.

32. Holders of scholarships awarded by other local Governments or local bodies or the Dufferin Fund shall not be eligible for scholarships awarded by the Government of Bengal, nor shall they be allowed free tuition. [This rule does not prevent the holders of the Muir, P. K. Mullick, Sarala and Walter Thompson scholarships (vide Appendix B) from obtaining Bengal Government scholarships and free-studentships, provided they are inhabitants of Bengal.]

33. Medals and Prizes.—A list of the prizes and medals available at the Campbell, Dacca and Ronaldshay Medical Schools and the conditions on which they are awarded are given in Appendix C.

Section VI.—Discipline and punishments.

34. Discipline.—For the maintenance of discipline the punishments set forth in the rules immediately below shall be enforced at the discretion of the Superintendent of the school, according to the nature of the offence.

35. Punishments.—The punishments shall be verbal reprimand, written reprimand in the order-book, extra duty, fine, stoppage of leave, deprivation of scholarship or free-studentship, rustication for the remainder of the school year, dismissal and expulsion from the school.

36. Expulsion from the school shall be enforced for offences of a serious nature, such as (1) disgraceful or dishonourable conduct, (2) persistent or wilful infringement of the school rules, and (3) gross insubordination or disrespect to the constituted authorities of the school.

37. When a student is expelled, a full report of the case, with as much information as may be available for identification, shall be submitted to the Surgeon-General with the Government of Bengal, who shall take measures to prevent the student's admission into any other Medical School.

38. The Superintendent can refuse readmission to or dismiss any student on account of incompetence or misconduct (vide rule 20).

39. Students rusticated may be readmitted after their period of punishment is over, on payment of a readmission fee of Rs. 6 (vide rule 20).

40. Scholarships and free-studentships shall be liable to forfeiture at the discretion of the Superintendent for misconduct, want of progress, or irregular attendance.

41. Fines shall be paid by the 15th of the month following that in which they are incurred. The penalty for late payment shall be the same as for late payment fees (vide rule 18).

Section VII.—Leave of absence.

42. Definition.—The leave admissible to students shall include the regular vacations and casual leave ; all leave other than vacation leave shall be shown as casual leave, whether granted on medical certificate or for other reasons.

43 Vacations.—The regular vacations shall be notified in school orders and are as follows :—

	Days.
(a) The Summer vacation	60
(b) The Puja vacation	22
(c) The X'mas vacation	12

44. Students employed in the wards shall be divided into two batches for vacation leave. One batch shall proceed on leave first, and on its return the other batch shall proceed on leave.

45. A student who either absents himself immediately before the commencement of, or overstays, the authorised vacation leave, without a medical certificate or permission of the Superintendent of the school, shall thereby incur a fine of eight annas for each day of absence and shall forfeit any scholarship or free-studentship (if he is a holder thereof) for the remainder of the session.

46 Casual Leave.—Casual leave may be granted to a student by a teacher under whom he works up to a maximum of seven days at a time, or by the Superintendent of not more than 30 days at a time. Not more than 30 days' continuous casual leave is admissible, except on medical certificate.

47. Application.—Application to the Superintendent for casual leave or extension of leave shall be submitted in writing through the teacher under whom the student works. Such application shall ordinarily be submitted not later than the day previous to that on which leave is desired.

48. Leave Register.—No student shall depart on sanctioned leave without signing his name in the casual leave register with the date of departure. On return he shall enter the date also with his signature. Failure to comply with this rule shall entail the absence being treated as absence without leave (vide rule 49).

49. Absence without leave.—No student shall absent himself from School or Hospital attendance without leave, except in case of sudden indisposition. Any student who disobeys this rule will thereby incur a fine of 2 annas per diem for every day's absence unless he can furnish a medical certificate as provided in Rule 53.

50. Absence without leave for more than 30 days shall automatically entail removal of the student's name from the school rolls.

51. Any students who in the opinion of the Superintendent have combined to absent themselves without leave with the intention of defying or defeating discipline shall be liable so expulsion under rule 36

52. Inadmissibility.—No leave except on medical certificate shall be granted to a student—

(1) when he is on special duty in the ward ;
(2) when there is any matter pending in connection with which he has been directed to appear before the teacher or the Superintendent ;
(3) when he is under stoppage of leave ;
(4) when he is on duty during the regular vacation ; or
(5) immediately before the commencement of or in extension of vacation leave.

53. Medical certificate.—A medical certificate in support of an application for leave or for an extension of leave shall be obtained from a member of the Hospital staff, from a Government Medical Officer, or from a Registered Medical Practitioner ; when its receipt in the school office is delayed beyond one week from the first day of absence the absentee shall be considered as absent without leave and shall automatically incur the penalties provided in Rule 49.

Section VIII.—Course of Study and attendance.

54. The curriculum is arranged to meet the requirements of the schedule attached to the statutes of the State Medical Faculty of Bengal for the examination for licence as follows:—

First year.	Second year.	Third year	Fourth year.

They will however, be eligible for the same in the higher classes.

DACCA MEDICAL SCHOOL.

Medals.

1. A gold medal of the value of Rs. 35 shall be annually awarded for general proficiency to a fourth-year student of the Dacca Medical School who obtains the highest aggregate marks in all the subjects at the school test examination in March, provided that his conduct has been uniformly good.

2. A silver medal of the value of Rs 13 shall be awarded annually to the third-year student who obtains the highest aggregate marks in all the subjects at the school test examination in March, provided that his conduct has been uniformly good.

3. A silver medal of the value of Rs. 13 shall be annually awarded to the second-year student who obtains the highest aggregate marks at the school test examination in March, provided that his conduct has been uniformly good.

4. A silver medal of the value of Rs. 13 shall be annually awarded to the first-year student who obtains the highest aggregate marks in all subjects at the school test examination in March, provided that his conduct has been uniformly good.

5. Six silver medals of the value of Rs. 13 each shall be annually awarded to the fourth-year students who obtain the highest marks in each of the following subjects: viz., (1) Surgery, (2) Medicine, (3) Midwifery, (4) Medical Jurisprudence, (5) Pathology, (6) Hygiene at the school test examination in March.

6 Three silver medals of the value of Rs. 13 each shall be annually awarded to the second-year students who obtain the highest marks in each of the following subjects: viz., (1) Anatomy, (2) Physiology, (3) Materia Medica at the school test examination in March.

7. One silver medal of the value of Rs. 13 shall be annually awarded to the first-year student who obtains the highest aggregate marks in Chemistry and Physics at the school test examination in March, provided that his conduct has been uniformly good.

8. A silver medal is presented annually by Rai Sahib Guru Nath Sen to the fourth-year student who has obtained the highest aggregate marks in the school test examinations during the fourth-year course.

8(a). The Ronaldshay Gold Medal of the value of Rs. 35 shall be presented annually by Babu Gournetai Shaha Sankhanidhi to the fourth-year student who obtains the highest aggregate marks in the Final Licentiate Examination of the State Medical Faculty, Bengal, held in May every year.

Prizes.

9. Two pocket instrument cases of the value of Rs. 20 each shall be annually awarded to the second-year students who have acted as prosectors during the year.

10. Two certificates of honour may be annually awarded in each subject of examination to the next two most meritorious students of the first, second and fourth-year classes respectively after the students who secure medals under paragraphs 5, 6 and 7.

MEDALS AND PRIZES OPEN TO WOMEN STUDENTS OF THE DACCA MEDICAL SCHOOL.

Medals.

1. One silver medal of the value of Rs. 13 shall be annually awarded to a first-year woman student who obtains the highest aggregate marks in the school test examination of the first-year class in March among the women students, provided she obtains not less than 66 per cent. aggregate marks.

2. One silver medal of the value of Rs. 13 shall be awarded to the second-year woman student who obtains the highest aggregate marks in the school test examination of the second-year class in March among the women students, provided she obtains not less than 66 per cent. aggregate marks.

3. One silver medal shall be annually awarded to the third-year woman student who obtains the highest aggregate marks in the school test examination in March among the women students, provided she obtains 66 per cent aggregate marks

4. One silver medal shall be annually awarded to the fourth-year woman student who obtains the highest aggregate marks in the school test examination in March among the women students, provided she obtains 66 per cent. aggregate marks.

5. One silver medal of the value of Rs. 13 shall be awarded to a fourth-year woman student who obtains the highest aggregate marks in the school test examination in March in Midwifery and Gynæcology among the women students, provided she obtains not less than 75 per cent aggregate marks.

Prizes.

Two special prizes of Rs. 10 each shall be awarded annually to women students for good conduct, progress and regularity of attendance in class. Preference will be given to students living in the Government boarding house for women students attached to the Dacca Medical School.

MEDALS AND PRIZES OPEN TO STUDENTS OF RONALDSHAY MEDICAL SCHOOL (BURDWAN).

Medals.

1. Six silver medals of the value of Rs. 13 each shall be annually awarded to the fourth-year student who obtains the highest marks in each of the following subjects, viz., (1) Surgery, (2) Medicine, (3) Midwifery, (4) Medical Jurisprudence, (5) Pathology and (6) Hygiene.

2. Three silver medals of the value of Rs. 13 each shall be annually awarded to the second-year students who obtain the highest marks in each of the following subjects, viz., (1) Anatomy, (2) Physiology and (3) Materia Medica at the school test examination in March.

3. One silver medal of the value of Rs. 13 shall be annually awarded to the first-year student who obtains the highest aggregate marks in Chemistry and Physics at the school test examination in March.

4. One gold medal of the value Rs. 35 shall be annually awarded to the fourth-year student who obtains the highest aggregate marks in all the subjects at the school test examination in March, provided he passes successfully the final examination of the State Medical Faculty in the same session.

5. A gold medal of the value of Rs. 35 shall be awarded to the second-year student who obtains the highest aggragate marks in all the subjects at the school test examination in March, provided he successfully passes the intermediate examination of the State Medical Faculty in the same session.

Prizes.

6. Two pocket instrument cases of the value of Rs. 20 each shall be annually awarded to the second-year students who have acted as prosectors during the year.

7. Two certificates of honour may be annually awarded in each subject of examination to the next two meritorious students of the first, second and fourth-year classes respectively after the students who secure medals under paragraphs 1, 2 and 3.

NOTE.—Medals, prizes and certificates of honour will be awarded only to students who pass in all subjects of the examination at the same time, and students failing at a school test or promotion examination of any class will not be eligible to compete for any of the above awards from that class. They will however be eligible for the same in the higher classes.

APPENDIX D.

SYLLABUS OF THE SUBJECTS FOR STUDY.

CHEMISTRY.

Lectures.

Chemical and physical changes. Indestructibility of matter. Elements and compounds. Mechanical mixtures. Chemical symbols and formulæ. Laws of chemical combination. Atomic theory. Simple methods of preparation and principal properties of the following :—

Oxygen, Hydrogen, Nitrogen, Carbon, Chlorine, Bromine, Iodine, Flourine, Sulphur, Phosphorus, Ammonia, Nitrous oxide, Nitric oxide, Nitric perokide, Nitric acid, Carbon monoxide, Carbon dioxide, Hydrochloric acid, Hydrobromic acid, Hydriodic acid, Hydrofluoric acid, Sulphur dioxide, Sulphuric acid, Sulphuretted hydrogen, Oxides and Sulphides of Arsenic, Boric acid, Hydrocyanic acid.

A study of the following: Water, Air, Marsh gas, Bases, Acids and Salts.

General properties of the following metals and the preparation and properties of their undermentioned compounds :—

Potassium : its Hydroxide, Carbonate, Nitrate, Chlorate, Iodide, Bromide, Permanganate and Cyanide.

Sodium : its Hydroxide, Carbonate, Bicarbonate, Chloride and Sulphate.

Calcium : its Oxide, Hydroxide, Carbonate and Chloride.

Magnesium : its Oxide, Chloride and Sulphate.

Zinc : its Oxide, Chloride and Sulphate.

Mercury : its Oxides and Chloride.

Lead : its Oxides, Nitrate.

Iron : Its Oxides, Chlorides and Sulphates.

Preparation and properties of the following organic compounds :—

Alcohol, Ether, Chloroform, Chloral hydrate, Acetic acid, Oxalic acid, Carbolic acid.

A study of the following: Starch, Dextrin, Cane sugar, Grape sugar, Fermentation, Soaps and Saponification.

Simple qualitative examination of urine and urinary calculi.

N B.—The whole subject of Chemistry will be treated in an elementary way.

PHYSICS.

Lectures.

(a) States of matter.—General properties of solids, liquids and gases.

(b) Hydrostatics.—Floating bodies, Specific gravity, Hydrometers, Osmosis.

(c) Pneumatics.—Atmospheric pressure, Barometers, Boyle's Law, Air pumps, Syphon, .

(d) Heat.—Sources and effects of heat, Temperatures, Measurement of temperature. Thermometers: maximum and minimum thermometers, the clinical thermometer, Radiation, conduction, convection. Latent heat

(e) Light.—Sources of light. Reflection, refraction and dispersion of light. Plane and concave mirrors. Simple lenses and prisms. The solar spectrum. The eye as an optical instrument. Long and short sight. The microscope.

(f) Sound.—Production and propagation of sound. Reflection of sound. Velocity of sound. Musical sounds.. Intensity. Pitch and quality. Tuning forks.

(g) Electricity and Magnetism.—Elementary properties of magnets. Electrification by friction and induction. The electrophorus. Gold leaf electroscope. The Leyden Jar. Electric conductors. Dynamic electricity. Voltaic cell. Electro-magnet. Simple galvanometer. Induced currents. Medical batteries.

N.B.—The subject of Physics will be treated in an elementary way.

Practical Course in Chemistry and Physics.

Use of simple instruments: such as syphon, thermometer, barometer, microscope, induction coil, magnets, batteries, burettes, pipettes. Chemical analysis of urine: tests for sugar, albumen and bile.

MATERIA MEDICA AND PHARMACY.

Lectures.

1. (a) Definition of various technical terms used in describing the action and preparation of medical agents and drugs.

(b) The uses and methods of preparation of the more commonly used official pharmaceutical preparations.

(c) Knowledge of apothecary's scales and weights; also the various measures, signs and symbols.

2. The sources, preparations, composition, doses, physiological action, therapeutic uses, and incompatibilities (physical, chemical and physiological) of the more commonly used drugs and their preparations according to the British Pharmacopœia and the Indian and Colonial addenda.

Practical Course.

1. Recognition of crude drugs and their more important preparations.
2. Reading and writing of prescriptions in English, labelling and marking doses and writing of directions, etc.
3. Practical Pharmacy and exercises in Dispensing.

PHYSIOLOGY.

Lectures.

I. Histology—The animal cell. Epithelial tissues, Connective tissue (Dentine and development of Bone excluded), Muscular tissue, Nervous tissue.

II. Contractile Tissues.—Simple contraction. Tetanus. Fatigue. Principal changes associated with contraction. Differences in function between voluntary and involuntary muscles. Rigor mortis.

III. Dietetics and Digestive System.—Foodstuffs Classification of, principles of dietetics. Structure of the Esophagus, Stomach, Small and Large Intestines, Salivary glands, Pancreas and Liver. Composition of Saliva and its functions. Composition and functions of the Gastric juice, Pancreatic juice, Bile and Succus entericus. Function of the Large Intestines. Absorption of foodstuffs. Functions of Liver. Mechanism of Deglutition. Peristalsis. Defæcation.

IV. Respiratory System.—Structure of Trachea, Bronchi and Lungs, Mechanism of respiration. Exchange of gases during respiration. Tidal air. Complemental air. Supplemental air. Residual air. Vital capacity. Apnœa. Asphyxia and its stages. Effects of Respiration on Circulation.

V. Circulatory System.—

(a) Blood.—Composition of red and white corpuscles. Varieties of white cells: their functions. Coagulation of blood.

(c) Blood Vessels.—Histology of Arteries. Veins and Capilleries, Mechanism of blood flow. Pulse: its normal characters. Interpretation of pulse tracing. Blood pressure, Vascular tone.

VI. Lymphatic System.—Structure of Lymphatic Glands and Vessels. Composition of Lymph. Mechanism of Lymph flow.

VII. Urinary System.—Structure and functions of Kidney.

VIII. Cutaneous System.—Structure of Skin. Function of Skin. Sweat Glands: their structure. Composition of Sweat.

IX. Animal Heat.—Its regulation in warm-blooded animals.

X. The Ductless Glands.—Structure and function of Thyroid. Spleen, Supra-renal and Pituitary bodies.

XI. Nerves and Central Nervous System.—

(a) Classification of Nerves.

(b) The Central Nervous System—

(i) Brain.—Structure and functions of Cerebral Cortex Rolandic area. The Cortical centres.

(ii) The Cerebellum.—Functions of Cerebellum.

(iii) The Medulla.—Vasomotor, Respiratory and Cardiac centres.

(c) Vasomotor Nerves.

XII. Special Senses.—

(a) Vision.—Formation of retinal image. Mechanism of accommodation. Iris: structure and function. Common errors of refraction.

(b) Hearing.—Anatomy and structure of middle and internal ear. Conduction of sound waves. Mechanism of hearing.

(c) Taste and Smell.—Varieties of papillæ of the tongue and their structure. Nerves of taste. Olfactory nerves.

(d) Cutaneous and Motor Sense.—Varieties of the end organs. Varieties of cutaneous sense. Muscle sense.

XIII. Reproductive System.—The male reproductive organs. The female reproductive organs. Fertilization of ovum. The mammary glands.

Practical Course.

(a) Identification of histological specimens of Epithelium, Connective tissues, Muscular tissue. Medullated nerves. Specimens of Spleen, Kidney, Liver, Thyroid, Human blood, Frog's blood, Lung, Stomach.

(b) Staining and mounting of sections of tissues mentioned above.

(c) Use of the Hæmoglobinometer and Sphygmograph and Sphygmomanometer.

(d) Preparation and staining of blood films Recognition of leucocytes.

(e) Estimation of Glucose. Tests for Glucose, Albumen, Bile.

GENERAL PATHOLOGY.

Lectures.

I. A knowledge of—

(a) Process of inflammation and repair.

(b) Process of fever.

(c) Process of infection and immunity (elementary).

(d) Disorders of blood and circulation.

(e) Disorders of nutrition and auto-intoxication.

(f) Degeneration and retrogressive changes.

(g) The progressive tissue changes including Neoplasms.

II. Elementary Bacteriology and Parasitology.—To embrace the study and morphology of the following :—

Pyogenic Cocci. Bacillus Coli-communis. Bacillus Pestis. Bacillus Tetani. Bacillus Tuberculosis. Vibro Choleræ. Hæmatozeon malariæ Amœba coli. Parasite of Kala-azar, Ascaris Lumbricoides. Oxyuris vermicularis. Ankylostomum Duodenale. Filaria Sanguinis Hominis. Tænia Solium. Acarus Scabiei. Pediculi.

III. Morbid and Histology.—The more important structural changes produced in organs and tissues by the more common diseases.

Practical Course.

(a) Identification of pathological specimens from microscopical sections the commoner affected organs and tissues.

(b) Preparation of blood films.

(c) Recognition of malarial parasites.

(d) Preparation and staining of sputum for tubercle bacillus.

(e) Technique of collection and pathological examination of urine and pus.

MEDICAL JURISPRUDENCE.

Lectures.

I. Unnatural and sudden deaths.—Giving of medical evidence, medico-legal reports, and certificates.

II. Deaths.—Chief forms of unnatural deaths : accident, suicide, homicide, poisoning. Signs of death. Post-mortem lividity. Rigor mortis. Putrefaction. Mummification. Time elapsed since death. Post-mortem examination in medico-legal cases.

III. Identity of the living and dead.—Age in its medico-legal aspect. The teeth, ossification; union of important epiphyses. Sexual characteristics of the skeleton.

IV. Wounds and mechanical injuries.—Definition and varieties. Distinction between ante and post-mortem. Suicidal and homicidal wounds. Results following wounds Causes of death from wounds. Injuries of special regions. Examination of weapons and identification of materials adjacent to weapons.

V. Deaths from asphyxia.—Hanging, strangulation, suffocation, and drowning.

VI. Deaths from burns, scalds, heat, cold, electric discharge and starvation.

VII. Signs of virginity, rape, and sodomy.

VIII. Signs of Pregnancy.—Quickening. Period of human gestation. Prolonged gestation. Superfœtation. Viable age. Signs of delivery: recent and remote.

IX. Criminal abortion and infanticide.—Signs of live birth. Signs of death from violence and criminal neglect or omission.

X. Poisons, Actions of.—Diagnosis and treatment of cases of common poisoning. Post-mortem appearances in cases of poisoning. Preservation and transmission of vicera for analysis from suspected poisoning cases.

XI. Toxicology.—Mineral acid. Alkaline corrosives. Corrosive sublimate. Carbolic acid. Oxalic acid. Phosphorus. Arsenic and its compounds. Lead. Alcohol. Chloral Hydrate. Carbon monoxide. Carbon dioxide. Kerosine oil. Opium. Cannabis Indica. Datura. BeHadonna. Cocaine. Strychnine and Nux vomica. Aconite. Oleander. Snake poison.

HYGIENE VACCINATION.

Lectures.

I. Air, Composition of.—Vitiation and impurities, suspended and gaseous Examination of air. Ventilation: natural and artificial methods. Diseases due to overcrowding.

II. Water.—Sources, collection, and storage. Uses. Impurities and Origin. Purification, wholesale and domestic. Water-borne diseases.

III. Climate and soil.—Varieties. Rainfall. Subsoil water. Building sites. Drainage.

IV. Food and Diets.—Classification and varieties of subsistence diets. Disease due to over and under-feeding. Preserved and tinned foods. Fermented beverages. Milk and its relation to infectious diseases.

V. Personal Hygiene.—Cleanliness, clothing, exercise, rest and sleep.

VI. Conservancy.—Methods in villages, jails, towns and cities. Septic tanks. Dry earth latrines. Water-closets. Disposal of sewage. Sewage farms. Disposal of dead.

VII. Communicable Diseases and their Prophylaxis.—Endemic and epidemic; Plague, Cholera, Enteric, Tuberculosis, Malaria, Kala-azar. Elephantiasis, Rabies. Anti-rabic inoculation. Rôle of flies and suctorial insects in spreading diseases Rôle played by human carriers on spread of disease.

VIII. Disinfection.

IX. Small-pox and Vaccination.—Prevalence, inoculation, dangers of vaccination. Practical details of vaccination and methods of same. Sources of vaccine lymph; preparation of skin, aseptic precautions. Phenomena of successful vaccination.

Al Bida Approach—Shoal water reported ; Beacon being erected.

No. 147 (third publication).—The following particulars, etc., relative to the above, issued by the Director of the Royal Indian Marine, Bombay, in Notice to Mariners (No. 66M. of 1921), are republished :—

(1) (a) Position (approximate).—At a distance of about 8½ miles 061° from Al Bida Fort Lat. 25° 21¾′ N., long. 51° 40′ E.

Depth.—1¼ Fathoms (S.M.Crl.).

(b) Position approximate.—At a distance of about 9 miles 069° from Al Bida Fort. Lat. 25° 20¾′ N., long. 51° 41′ E.

Details.—A depth of 2¼ fathoms at M.L.O. has been found in the above position and it would appear that the 1½ fathoms shoal charted may be extending northward.

Remarks.—The soundings obtained on entering and leaving the harbour revealed that the depths in the approach have altered and shoaled in places to the extent of ¼ to ½ fathoms.

The greatest depth that can be carried at L.W., is 2¼ fathoms instead of 2¾ fathoms, as might be expected from the plan on the chart No. 2837*b*, and that the 2½ fathoms charted on the same chart should be altered to 2¼ fathoms.

(2) Beacon being erected.

(a) Position approximate.—At a distance of about 4½ miles 071° from Al Bida Fort. Lat. 25° 18½′ N., long. 51° 36′ E.

Details.—A circular masonry beacon is in the process of construction on the north end of the south reef in the above position.

At present the beacon only uncovers about one foot at H.W.

Remarks.—"Cyclamen" passed through the narrows about 1½ cables north of this beacon, obtaining 4 to 4½ fathoms as charted.

The south reef is clearly to be distinguished, but the north reef is difficult to define.

"Cyclamen" thence steered 065° with Sheikh's House astern. This house which has a flagstaff near it is the most conspicuous in the town. The least depth on this course is 2¼ fathoms at M.L.W.S.

Charts affected.—No. 2837*b*, Persian Gulf, western sheet, with plan.

Publication.—Persian Gulf Pilot, 1915, page 106.

Authority.—The Commander-in-Command, H.M.S. "Cyclamen", H.N. No. 5, dated 6th May 1921.

DISTRICT REPORTS ON WEATHER AND CROPS.

For the week ending on the 29th June 1921.

Summary.—During the week under report seasonable rain fell throughout the province. Ploughing for winter paddy and its transplantation are in progress. More rain is wanted for the operations in parts of Western Bengal. Sowing of broadcast autumn paddy is finished. The prospects of the standing crops are generally reported to be fair. The average price of common rice for the province is almost stationary as compared with that of the previous week.

CALCUTTA, THE 5TH JULY 1921.

RESOLUTION—No. 2401Com.

AT the request of Messrs. Martin and Company and of the representatives of their employés on the light railways under the management of the firm, the Governor in Council has constituted a special Conciliation Board to examine the causes of the recent strikes on these railways. The Board will consist of the following gentlemen :—

Mr. C. W. Rhodes, C.B.E.	President.
Rai Chuni Lal Bose Bahadur, I.S.O., Sheriff of Calcutta Mr. Krishna Chandra Roy Chaudhuri, M.L.C. ...	Members.
Mr. D. Gladding, I.C.S.	Secretary.

In accordance with the terms of reference, which have been agreed to by both parties, the Committee will enquire into the following points :—

(a) The alleged inequitable effect of a recent rule regarding the calculation of overtime ;
(b) The alleged insufficiency of the supply of uniforms ;
(c) The alleged hardship caused by fines imposed for slow running said to be due to the use of bad coal ;
(d) The demand for extension to the Engineering Department of the full increase of 45 per cent. granted to other departments in 1920 ;
(e) Alleged insufficiency of the house-rent allowances ;
(f) Alleged deliberate transfers of the officers of the Railway Workmen's Association and the dismissal of one man ;
(g) Demand for improved terms of service for lady ticket collectors ;
(h) Demand for treatment of all the employés in the workshops as permanent hands ;
(i) The justification for the recent strikes and the conduct of the strikes and proposals for the improvement of the relations between the Company and its employés in the future.

The President will settle times and places for the meetings of the Board, which, it is hoped, will be able to commence its enquiries immediately.

By order of the Governor in Council,

A. MARR,

Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

MARINE DEPARTMENT.

NOTIFICATIONS.

No. 99Marine.—The 4th July 1921.—Mr. N. E. Garnett, 1st Mate Leadsman, is granted privilege leave for one month with effect from the 9th June 1921.

No. 100Marine.—The 8th July 1921.—The following draft of amendment which with the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, the Governor in Council proposes to make in the rules under section 9 of the Indian Petroleum Act, 1899, for regulating the importation, possession and transport of carbide of calcium in Bengal, is published for the information of persons likely to be affected thereby.

2. The draft will be taken into consideration on or after the 15th August 1921, and any objections or suggestions with regard thereto, which are received by the undersigned before that date, will be duly considered :—

Draft amendment.

For rule 5 of Part III of the said rules substitute the following as rule 5 :—

"5. If any carbide of calcium becomes wetted while in the possession of a railway for transport, it shall be destroyed by immersion in deep water. If, however, deep water is not available, the wet carbide of calcium shall be spread out in the open in an isolated position, all precautions being taken to prevent lights being brought near until the material has given off all its gas."

Note.—The fact of carbide of calcium having become wet will be indicated by the outward appearance of the drum and probably by a disagreeable odour, showing a leakage of gas.

No. 101Marine.—The 8th July 1921.—In exercise of the power conferred by section 6, sub-section (1) of the Indian Ports Act, 1908 (XV of 1908), the Governor in Council is pleased to make the following amendments in the rules made under the said section for the Port of Calcutta and published with notification No. 96Marine, dated the 5th October 1894, as amended by notification No. 144Marine, dated the 30th November 1908.

Amendment.

After rule 60 of the said rules insert the following :—

"60A. (1) No cargo boat shall be employed for the conveyance of carbide of calcium within the limits of the Port of Calcutta unless covered by a special licénse issued by the Port Commissioners."

"(2) Such license shall only be issued to cargo boats classified in class 1 of rule 60 which have no copper or brass in their construction and are provided with a tarpaulin which in the opinion of the Port Commissioners' Boat Surveyor will completely cover the hold and protect its contents from moisture."

"(3) It shall be certified in the license that the conditions in sub-rules (1) and (2) have been fulfilled. Every license shall be renewed at intervals of not more than six calendar months."

No. 102 Marine—The 11th July 1921.—Mr. E. A. Ward, Branch Pilot, is granted four months' furlough on medical certificate by His Majesty's Secretary of State for India, in extension of the leave notified in Bengal Government notification No. 111 Marine, dated the 3rd December 1920.

ASHU TOSH BANERJEE, for Collector.

Midnapore, the 19th May 1921.

Advertisement of Sale.

NOTICE is hereby given that the undermentioned plots of land no longer required by Government, situated along the Eastern Bengal Railway, in the district of Rangpur, will be put up to sale at 12 o'clock on the 16th August 1921, corresponding with the 31st Sraban 1328 B.S., at Rangpur Collectorate.

The purchasers of the several plots of land will be subject to the following conditions :—

1st—The purchasers will have no power to make any excavations on the land nearer than fifteen feet from the railway boundary, or to plough the land nearer than three feet from the same.

2nd—If the amount of purchase-money does not exceed Rs. 100, the whole amount must be paid down at once.

3rd—If the amount of purchase-money exceeds Rs. 100, one-fourth of the amount must be immediately deposited. If the balance be not paid by noon of the fifteenth day after the sale, reckoning the day of sale as one, or if that day be a close holiday, then by noon of the first succeeding office day, the sale shall be cancelled, the sum deposited being forfeited to Government, and the lot again put up for sale at the risk of the defaulting purchaser, after issue of advertisement, as in the case of original sale.

4th—The plots of land will be sold revenue-free to the highest bidders.

5th—The sale will become final on receipt by the Collector of the orders of the Commissioner confirming it, and a regular conveyance will then be granted to the purchaser.

FOREST DEPARTMENT, BENGAL.

Stipendiary Studentships for the Ranger class, 1922-24.

APPLICATIONS for two stipendiary studentships for the Ranger class will be received by the Conservator of Forests, Darjeeling, up to the 15th August 1921.

2. Applicants must be not less than 18 and not more than 25 years of age on the 1st April 1922.

3. Applications should be made in the applicant's own handwriting and sent to the undersigned through a Divisional Forest officer of rank not below that of a Deputy Conservator or through a Collector or officer in charge of a district; they must be accompanied by the following certificates (in original) as well as by a declaration whether or not he has at any time been pronounced unfit for Government employment by the Medical Board at the India Office, or any other duly constituted medical authority :—

(a) A certificate that the candidate is a "Native of India" within the meaning assigned to those words by section 6 of 33 Vict., Cap. 3.

(b) A certificate of age.

(c) A health certificate in the form prescribed by article 49 of the Civil Service Regulations, 5th edition, signed by the Civil Surgeon of the district in which the said Divisional Forest or district officers' duties lie and testifying to the candidate's sound constitution, good vision and hearing, and general physical fitness for a rough outdoor life in the Forest Department, and to the fact that he bears on his body marks of successful vaccination or of small-pox.

(d) A certificate of respectability and good moral character from two or more persons whose social or official position can be accepted as a guarantee of reliability.

NOTE.—The certificates (c) and (d) must bear date not further back than the 1st April 1921.

If any person giving certificates as above under (c) and (d) is in a position to mention anything more to the credit of the candidate than the certificates actually called for, he may do so.

(e) A certificate of having passed one of the following examinations, viz. :—

The B.A., F.A., B.Sc. or Licentiate of Agriculture.

The Matriculation, where no School Final Examination or school-leaving certificate exists.

The School Final Examination, provided the candidate can show that he has qualified in English and Mathematics up to the Matriculation standard, or, for European candidates, a certificate of having passed the High School examination, with a similar proviso.

The school-leaving certificate as prescribed in the United Provinces, Central Provinces and Bombay.

(f) A certificate that each candidate has a sufficient knowledge of colloquial English to assimilate lectures delivered in that language without the aid of dictation.

4. From the applications received and in respect to which the preceding conditions shall have been observed, the Conservator will make a preliminary selection of not more than four candidates, and these candidates will be required to undergo a course of preliminary training for not less than three and-a-half months, commencing 1st November 1921, during which the candidates will receive a monthly allowance of Rs. 25.

5. The final selection of candidates for deputation to the Forest College will be made by the Conservator in accordance with the results of the preliminary training, preference being given to the men who are considered likely to make the best Forest officers. Selected candidates will be obliged to execute the agreement and security bond prescribed by Government.

6. While at the Forest College, the selected candidates will be granted a monthly stipend of Rs. 35 (which will be supplemented by a bonus of Rs. 360 at the end of the course to those candidates only who pass the course with "Honours").

THE Bengal and Madras Service Family Pension Fund which is provisionally managed and assisted by Government has for its object the provision of monthly pensions for the maintenance of the widows and children of subscribers and is open, with certain exceptions, to all active and pensioned members of the Uncovenanted Service of Government (except those serving under the Government of Bombay), and to Local Fund servants earning pensions from Government. Some of the special features of the fund are—(1) that widowed daughters incapable of remarriage or children labouring under such mental or bodily infirmities as incapacitate them from earning their livelihood or preclude the possibility of marriage (in case of a daughter) are admitted to its benefits; and (2) that subscribers to the Widows' and Daughters' branches are entitled to a refund of 30 per cent. of the premia paid, should the nominees predecease them after five years of admission. The second quinquennial valuation of the fund has been completed by the Actuary to the Government of India and his report discloses very favourable results. For forms of application and rules of the Fund apply to the Accountant-General, Central Revenues, Imperial Secretariat Buildings, Calcutta.

REPORT ON THE EXPANSION AND IMPROVEMENT OF PRIMARY EDUCATION IN BENGAL.

GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL.

EDUCATION DEPARTMENT.

Education.

RESOLUTION—No. 1284Edn.

CALCUTTA, THE 2ND JULY 1921.

THE late Government of Bengal, convinced of the necessity for the expansion of primary education in the Presidency and desirous of bringing the Bengal Primary Education Act, 1919, into effective operation, placed Mr. E. E. Biss, of the Indian Educational Service, on special duty in August 1920, with instructions to scrutinise the returns received under the Act, to make a careful survey of the conditions of primary education both in municipal and rural areas and to formulate a programme for its expansion throughout the Presidency. The report of Mr. Biss has been received by the Minister for Education, who desires to acknowledge the capacity with which Mr. Biss has discharged his task. His report is a valuable contribution to the literature on the subject, and his suggestions merit careful consideration. It has been decided to publish the report and to invite the opinion on it of local bodies and also of public associations and individuals. The Government of Bengal (Ministry of Education) will welcome criticism both of the general principles enunciated in the report and of details connected with the schemes suggested in it. In particular, they will be glad to receive constructive proposals with reference to specific local conditions and in regard to the cost of carrying out these schemes and the sources from which the necessary funds, capital and recurring, are to be derived.

2. There can be no doubt that a wide expansion and definite improvement of primary education is necessary to the welfare of the country, and the Government of Bengal (Ministry of Education) are of opinion that the time has come for the organization of a complete national system of primary schools for Bengal. The object in view is the formation of a network of schools so placed as to be within the reach of every household. To this end the populated portion of any given locality would be divided into fixed "school areas," each served by a central school designed to accommodate the great majority of the boys of primary school age within the "school area." The Bengal Primary Education Act of 1919 proceeds on the assumption that a child of primary school age can walk one mile to school. Mr. Biss has suggested a circle of half a mile radius as a rough guide to the size of a "school area," the exact size and shape of each being settled in accordance with local conditions. It has to be remembered in this connection that the larger the area served by one school, the smaller will be the number of schools and the smaller the cost of establishing and conducting them. These schools would be publicly controlled by the local authorities, i.e., the municipalities and the district or union boards. The teachers would be paid salaries instead of making what they can, as at present, from small grants and fees. Opinions are invited upon the best size of the "school area," and also on the subject of the re-establishment of a public examination at the end of a primary school course (cf. paragraphs 30 and 65-69 of the Report).

3. In some localities, it may be possible to exercise compulsion in order to secure the attendance of boys of 6 to 10 years of age, as is contemplated by the Bengal Primary Education Act of 1919, but it is recognised that for the present it is not possible to make its application universal. Expressions of opinion as to whether the adoption of compulsory primary education in the future should be taken as a directive idea would be welcomed.

4. The question of the desirability of giving religious instruction in primary schools, with which Mr. Biss has dealt in Chapter IV of the Report, is a difficult one calling for careful consideration, and it is hoped that well-informed views, capable of practical interpretation in actual school conditions, will assist Government in formulating a policy.

5. Mr. Biss has advised that primary and middle schools should together be regarded as the elementary schools of the future. He advocates the gradual rising of the former to the status of the full elementary school as rapidly as may be possible, though he recognises that the process will necessarily take a long time. At present there are five Government normal (or 1st grade training) schools in Bengal and 22 guru-training schools of an improved type, as well as a number of less efficient institutions which are slowly being replaced by training schools of the new type. Mr. Biss suggests the combination of normal and guru-training schools, and the training together at convenient centres of all elementary teachers, i.e., teachers for primary and middle schools, and for the lower classes of high schools where these continue to exist. In his opinion each district should be provided with a combined institution of this kind. The Government of Bengal realise the great importance of the improvement of the training of teachers, but have not as yet come to a decision on the matter. They would value expressions of opinion upon the subject from those who are conversant with it.

6. It is obvious that if there are to be an expansion and improvement of primary education more money must be made available for the purpose. It is beyond the power of Government to bear the whole cost, and the present policy of dividing it between the central and local authorities must, therefore, be continued The Government of Bengal (Ministry of Education) are not yet in a position to fix a definite proportion as between these contributing parties, either as a general rule or in relation to local bodies individually. It will take some time to ascertain fully and give effect to the national will in respect of the lines on which the development of primary education should proceed ; and in the meantime Government will sympathetically consider any individual schemes that may be put forward, taking into account the circumstances of the locality concerned and the degree of self-help displayed by the local authority. At the same time they invite reasoned opinions as to the manner in which the question of proportion should finally be determined both in regard to capital and recurring expenditure.

7. It is also a matter for careful consideration whether it will be possible to forego the income from fees, which in the past have bulked so largely in the receipts of the schools. While Mr. Biss's proposals make a far larger demand on the Provincial Government, they do not on an average demand more but, on one alternative plan, substantially less than is now being paid in fees, local grants and contributions. His suggestion is that the money should be paid on a different method, i.e., by the rate-payers as a whole. In this way heads of large families would be relieved of some of their expenses, while people who have no children and have fewer expenses would be called upon to pay a small sum for the national good : the average incidence per head in the municipalities for which calculations have been worked out is less than three annas per month. This is, he urges, a form of co-operative effort for the common good. which is calculated to produce far better results, by the provision of a better organisation, a better staff and better buildings and equipment, than is possible in present circumstances. While Mr. Biss strongly advocates this plan he does not exclude the possibility of finding a part of the local contribution from fees, nor do his proposals depend upon making primary education free.

8. Expressions of opinion are invited on the suggestions set forth in the Report in the matter of loans to finance programmes of development. and it may be stated here that the Government of Bengal are prepared to consider the possibility of allowing local bodies to raise loans locally from sources other than Government and of themselves contributing towards the charges involved in the payment of interest and the re-payment of capital.

9. The Government of Bengal are already putting the ideas of the Report to a practical test by experiments in certain areas. They will welcome detailed proposals for additional experiments from local bodies who desire to make sure of their ground before going forward with a new policy throughout the areas under their jurisdiction.

10. The new primary system will undoubtedly have to be linked closely with a larger organisation of higher institutions which, together with it, will form a co-ordinated national system designed to meet the requirements of all sections of the people in respect not only of general or cultural instruction, but also of vocational education, i.e., a training primarily intended to fit its recipients for earning a livelihood in some definite industry, trade, or profession. The development of this larger organisation is receiving the attention of the Government of Bengal (Ministry of Education).

By order of the Government of Bengal

L. S. S. O'MALLEY.

Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

CHAPTER I.

Introduction.

1. Orders.—In his letter No. 505 T.—Edn., dated the 3rd August 1920, to the Director of Public Instruction, Bengal, the Hon'ble Mr. L. S. S. O'Malley, C.I.E., I.C.S., Secretary to the Government of Bengal, conveyed the orders of Government that I should be placed on special duty for six months to draw up a programme for the expansion and improvement of primary education in Bengal. These original orders were that the special officer was to examine and scrutinise the returns received from municipal bodies under the Primary Education Act of 1919, section 3 (vide Appendix A); to visit each municipal and district board area with a view to ascertaining the condition of elementary education; and to work out definite and detailed proposals for expansion, which might extend over ten years. It was recognised that new expenditure would be necessary and instructions were given that the report should indicate how much of this:—

(1) should be borne by the ordinary income of the local bodies,

(2) what assistance would be required from Government, and

(3) what amount should be raised by the imposition of an education cess.

2. It was subsequently realised that these orders would involve the preparation of detailed schemes for 115 municipalities as well as for 25 district board areas after personal visits paid to each, and that the time allotted was far from sufficient for carrying out these instructions, especially in view of the approach of the Puja holidays, when all schools and educational offices close for the best part of a month. I was therefore ordered to draw up schemes for typical municipalities and to consult district board authorities at the headquarters of each district, the object being the presentation to the then future Education Minister of such data as might form a basis upon which a policy for the improvement and expansion of primary education might be built. I was also to offer facts which would suggest the approximate cost of carrying out the proposed policy, and to arrive at general conclusions, of which the details were to be worked out later. The question of primary education in Calcutta was specifically omitted from the scope of my enquiry, as was also that of the primary education of girls.

3. I was also instructed (Director of Public Instruction's letter No. 2810 P., of 23rd August, 1920), to make proposals regarding the expenditure of one lakh of rupees that had been set aside in the budget for primary education outside Calcutta for the year 1920-21. Unfortunately Rs. 50,000 out of this had to be utilised for other purposes, while Rs. 25,000 was allotted to the municipality of Darjeeling for a part of its educational programme. Out of the balance had to be found the cost of the enquiry, so that little remained with which to experiment in this matter of primary education in which so much experiment and research is required before we can feel secure in advancing along any particular line of policy.

4. Before my deputation began, all municipalities in Bengal had been instructed by Government to send in returns under the Bengal Primary Education Act of 1919. A copy of the letter containing these orders, with the statements required, will be found in Appendix B. The value of the returns which were secured by this means was much smaller than had been hoped owing to several contingencies:—

(i) They are still, even at the moment of writing, incomplete.

(ii) The Municipal Commissioners were in doubt as to whether the estimate that was to be prepared regarding the probable number of children who would attend school "voluntarily" was to be taken as on a free basis, or on the present basis on which fees are charged.

(iii) All calculations of the numbers of children were of a most doubtful kind. In some cases they were based on percentages taken from the 1911 census returns and calculated in different ways. These returns are themselves ten years old and obviously cannot now be relied upon. Other authorities made an attempt at an informal house-to-house census of the child population, and this, as far as I could gather, could not be considered to be accurate. Some authorities resorted to the simple expedient of demanding an unprepared estimate from the local inspecting officers.

(iv) In most cases the constructive proposals sent in were mere paper and arithmetic schemes having little relation to the needs of a municipality. One municipality proposed the establishment of 46 schools (which represents 9·2 schools per square mile), at a capital cost of Rs. 94,400 and a recurring cost of Rs. 20,200. It was found in consultation with the Commissioners that 8 schools would amply meet the needs of the town, representing 1·6 schools to a square mile (including unoccupied areas), at a capital cost of Rs. 43,650, and a recurring cost of only Rs. 16,650, though the remuneration of the teachers was to be substantially increased. Another municipality proposed 40 schools, or 6·5 schools per square mile, at a capital cost of Rs. 21,906 and a recurring cost of Rs. 9,120. The number of schools had to be reduced to 7, or 1·1 schools per square mile, and the cost raised to Rs. 31,500 capital, and Rs. 11,490 recurring.

(v) There is no system of individual birth registration.

5. In view of the number and extent of all these varieties of error, I have not thought it worth while to pay very great attention to the figures resulting from such returns as we have obtained in this way. It appeared to be preferable to obtain afresh from the departmental officers such figures as are available and to check them while examining the whole question on the spot in consultation with local officers and the municipal authorities. The results will be found in various statements in the appendices at the end of this report and in the conclusions of the report itself. Even now no guarantee can be given that they are more than approximately correct.

6. Method of Work.—A detailed scheme, with a covering letter showing the principles underlying the proposals, and tabular statements showing the Capital and recurring expenditure involved in adopting them, was drawn up and submitted to each of 35 municipalities with separate copies of the covering letter and of the statements for each Commissioner, so that their consideration might be leisured and full. A specimen scheme which has been unanimously accepted by Rangpur municipality is attached in Appendix C together with the statements which were put before Howrah Municipality.

7. The method adopted for the development of these schemes was as follows. With the consent of the Divisional Inspectors of Schools, the District Deputy Inspectors of Schools were asked to send in a report on the municipality at their district headquarters as one educational problem. The lines to be followed were indicated in a printed skeleton report. First was to come a short description of the locality as regards its physical features, especially with reference to obstacles to locomotion and as regards its population and its social and industrial conditions. Next was to come an examination of the number, character and position of all schools of every class, graded according to their efficiency in four grades, of which the differentiating points were laid down. This was to be accompanied by a tabular statement and a map. A critical description of the weakness of the existing conditions and their causes was to follow. Next were demanded full financial details regarding schools, showing the sources of their income and the cost per child. The local inspecting officers were asked to submit a second map showing the position of what they considered to be the best places to put municipal schools, so as to serve the whole population most effectively, with estimates for each school under the headings of " Site, buildings and equipment " on the capital account, and " Staff, contingencies and repairs " on that of recurring expenditure. Suggestions were offered as to the possible kinds of buildings that might be suitable and as to what might be considered, if not a satisfactory, at least a reasonably improved scale of payment for teachers. All this was well done at a cost of great labour to the officers concerned.

8. Having studied the detailed account thus obtained, and having considered it in connexion with the municipal budget, a personal visit was paid to the municipality concerned, where a consultation was held with the inspecting officers. A provisional scheme was drawn up with the help of a map The existing schools and proposed sites were then visited as far as time permitted. The number of schools so visited was about 583. Many parents of children in the schools were consulted as to their wishes; and the teachers were closely questioned as to their pay, drawn from the school and from outsides sources, and as to what they would consider a fair remuneration if they were offered posts in municipal schools. Enquiries were also made as to how far children of primary school age could reasonably be expected to walk in the local circumstances. The District Magistrates and other interested officials were consulted informally as to their views on the resources and requirements of the municipality. In the evening I met the Chairman, Vice-Chairman and as many Municipal Commissioners as could be gathered and, with the aid of blackboards and maps, explained the nature of the existing state of affairs, and of the proposals which I was about to make. The gentlemen present then asked questions and offered criticisms which were noted and the scheme revised as far as possible according to their views. The scheme was then sent to the municipality in the way that has already been indicated (paragraph 6 above). Copies of the schemes were also sent to Divisional Commissioners, District Magistrates, Divisional and District Deputy Inspectors of Schools, and any gentlemen who had expressed special interest in the matter. On two occasions I was honoured by a request from the local Bar Library to address its members and those whom they desired to invite to the meeting.

9. A general method of examining the non-municipal areas was not so easy to arrive at as that which is suitable in municipalities. The rural population is naturally far more scattered, the physical conditions vary more in different parts of the province, the people are less homogeneous in their standard of interest through having received outside stimuli in a less degree, there are fewer people proportionately who can be relied upon intellectually to grasp the issues of the question in hand, and somewhat narrow religious and social prejudices have a firmer hold. Besides this, one is bewildered by the immensity of the area and the extent and hugeness of the population to be dealt with. One district can reasonably be compared with the whole of Ireland; the whole province contains about the same number of people as the British Isles.

10. All Bengal is divided into five divisions, each under a Commissioner, and containing a varying number of districts. Altogether there are 25 districts in the Province each controlled by a district board which, in the majority of cases, is now under a non-official Chairman. Each district has its own Magistrate-Collector. Speaking generally, it may be said that these districts are divided into subdivisions, controlled by local boards and magisterial officers called Subdivisional Officers. The subdivisions are in turn divided into thanas, which are mainly units of police administration, though they are also convenient for other purposes. Within the thanas are groups of villages and hamlets called unions, each of which contains a small number of mauzas. Originally these unions were called panchayeti or chaukidari unions and existed largely to deal with the pay of the rural police of these small areas which, on an average, contain about ten square miles. The Local Self-Government Act of 1885 made it possible to create union committees, who were given certain powers in a more or less experimental manner. In 1919 the Village Self-Government Act made it possible to create union boards, to whom are being entrusted very substantial powers, among which are the control of the primary schools. These boards are only now being organised, and it is too early as yet to be certain how they are going to work. It is expected that 1,500 will be working by the end of March 1921. In the whole of Bengal when, if ever, it is so divided up, there will be between 6,000 and 7,000 of such union boards.

11. I personally consulted the District Board Chairmen and Vice-Chairmen, and any members who could easily be gathered as to the state of their finances and as to the condition of primary education in their districts. All were agreed that any real hope of improvement must be based on the development of the union board activities. I therefore visited a good many union board areas to work out educational schemes for them and had others worked out by my staff. We have schemes prepared in detail for 23 union board areas. These were prepared in each case on the spot with reference to local conditions and in consultation with the inhabitants. A specimen of one of these schemes is attached in a summarised form as Appendix D. The Khulna District Board has offered to carry out an experiment in organisation in three of its union board areas.

12. A General Social Problem.—The broad result of all this investigation " in the cottage where the nation dwells " is to bring out the fact that the question of the expansion and improvement of primary education is only one phase of a general social problem of an immense extent among people who are for the most part at a somewhat rudimentary stage of development. It is a problem of bodies to be filled and fattened, of minds to be enlightened, and of lives to be set free. At this early stage of limited specialisation, it is possible and necessary to consider together the psychological, ethical, social, economic, political and financial factors which are so closely interwoven in the situation. The man we are interested in is not divided into departments. The Government Department of Industries may discover that there are plenty of bones available for crushing into manure, the Agricultural Department may discover that a 30 per cent. increase of crop can be obtained from land treated with bone manure; but, if the farmer is in debt and cannot borrow money for less than 30 to 60 per cent. per annum (a common state of affairs), this knowledge becomes useless unless he can become connected with a co-operative credit society that can give him money at (say) 12½ per cent. The development of the co-operative credit system depends in its turn to a large extent upon the improved intelligence of the people through the schools. Discussion of the respective importance and order of precedence as among education, sanitation, co-operation, agricultural and industrial research and propaganda is utterly vain. They must advance together supporting and supported by each other.

13. The people are poor, and unfortunately believe themselves to be poorer for purposes of taxation than they really are. This is not the place to attempt to go thoroughly into the causes of this poverty, but it is worth while to indicate that it is of two kinds. There is an apparent poverty which is caused by a change in the standard of living. Fountain pens, gold-rimmed spectacles, bicycles, wrist watches, various glittering trifles, complicated clothes, foot-wear and so forth, are becoming so fashionable that every one feels poor if he cannot afford to buy them for himself or his family. Society existed without these things until quite recently, but they have become necessities to-day. There is also a real poverty of which the immediate cause is the rise in the price of food-stuffs and of cloth. The real problem before the country is the cure of both these kinds of poverty. It may seem possible to cure the first by persuading the people to do without these products of modern life, but it does not seem probable that this persuasion could be successful. It is not the drinking that has to be cured, but the drought. The second kind can only be cured through greater, more intelligent and more skilful production. A part of the trouble at least is caused by the increase of population and consequent subdivision of the land; a part is due to the discovery that the big towns are frequently healthier than the country districts, and the resulting emigration of the more intelligent classes to urban areas, their land being left in the hands of people whose short tenancy does not encourage its improvement. There is a stir among the people and a demand that something should be done. This demand needs to be estimated, defined, directed and satisfied. There is a feeling that the time has come to stop whining and "to doe the nexte thynge," but people do not know what the next thing is and they hate the idea of taxation, not realising, that taxation in a democratic sense is properly only a form of mutual co-operation, and that without taxation nothing can be done. Various Government departments are engaged in activities connected with sanitation, industry, agriculture, co-operative banks, education, veterinary work and so forth, but the people demand immediate results and these activities do not appear to them to be effectively co-ordinated. There is an impression that these departments are costing more than they are worth; as one Indian expressed it:—"It is not the weight of the burden that we complain about, but that of the saddle." Such criticism is possibly not enlightened, but it can only be stilled by success, by intelligent propaganda work, by economy and by close co-operation between the representatives of the various departments on the spot in the rural areas, and in the Secretariat. A recent investigation into the question of primary education in Indian villages stated the most common causes of poverty to be debt, with high interest, laziness, exploitation, ignorance and lack of skill, drink, extravagance, and conditions resulting from famine, epidemics and sickness. Amongst these indebtedness is put first, while climatic difficulties and increase of population are also mentioned. It should perhaps be added that this estimate had not a direct reference to conditions in Bengal.

14. Dangers of Primary Education.—This report is not directly concerned with economic matters, though they are of necessity referred to in Chapter V in connection with vocational education. We are here concerned specially with the educational problem, and the recent District Board Conference passed a resolution "that it is desirable to press forward the expansion and improvement of primary education in Bengal." A writer in the Encyclopædia Britannia (11th edition), has truly stated that "the organisation of the higher grades of education constitutes a task of less formidable magnitude than the organisation of elementary education." The Government of India have also emphasised its importance and have proclaimed that it should have a "predominant claim on public funds." The Sadler Commission declared that "the way to what is wise and far seeing in the planning of primary education for India is the most inspiring and most perilous of tasks," and Mr. P. J. Hartog, C.I.E., though of opinion that it is "the largest educational problem now before the world," and that "for the majority, or all. primary education is coming, must come," still asks: "What is primary education going to do for the people? Is it merely going to sensitise further an already impressionable people? or is it going to give them that power of self-determination and judgment demanded by the Montagu-Chelmsford Report, but which it is so difficult to give in practice in any country?"

15. Some people wish to settle the matter by endeavouring to realize an imaginary picture of an idyllic past when everybody was efficiently taught all they needed to know under the village tree; the teacher, we are told, contrary to the sordid customs of the present day, not only gave his services free, but actually supplied his pupils with free food and clothes. However that may have been, no one now seems able in the ordinary conditions of life in Bengal to return to that happy state; and it is of no use to any one for us to spend time in hankering after it. We have got to go forward to mould our destiny, remembering that "character is destiny," and that character is not formed in vacuo, but only through right action courageously directed by intelligent purpose.

16. There are, however, points of view from which the spread of primary education may appear to be of doubtful value and even to carry with it elements of serious danger:—

(i) In moving about the country one sees little children playing happily in the fields and villages, or suitably and easily employed in the minor duties connected with their fathers' means of livelihood; and often one asks oneself whether it is kind or just to take them from so simple, useful, real and enjoyable a form of education to trouble them with the weariness of attaining literacy without which their ancestors have lived and died for many generations.

(ii) Some would maintain that to bring the sons of agriculturists into the school is to lessen their power of resistance to sun and disease, and to expose them more than ever to infection from hookworm and other evils, unless those sanitary and hygienic precautions are taken in the neighbourhood of the schools which now seem to be impossible.

(iii) Some anticipate that as soon as the country boy becomes literate he will despise his father's craft and will tend to become an ill-paid clerk in a town, entering into competition with the already ill-paid sons of the middle classes.

(iv) Others expect that the country parts will thus be drained of their best brains.

(v) Others again foresee the " spoiling " of their servants; or (vi) an increase of " apparent " poverty, and a struggle to remove it.

(vii) The Bengal Administration Commission spoke of the " dangers of spreading among an eastern people a western education, cut down to the lowest possible cost, with no regard to religious training, and with little regard to moral training."

(viii) The individual now supported in definite social conventions by his caste or his community has a clear path through life. If this support is shaken for large numbers of individuals among the masses, whither will the resulting disturbance carry us?

(ix) If the peasant begins to read and to think he may become a prey to the unscrupulous agitator, and to add a discontented proletariat to a disturbed and disappointed middle class would indeed be folly.

(x) It is said further that, having no need for reading and writing in their simple lives, the " lower " classes do not desire education; and

(xi) that the school deprives them of the labour of their children in field or mill, as well as the amount of the fee or cess that may be levied, which can ill be spared from their meagre resources.

(xii) Lastly, it is urged that a system of education on a useful scale would be expensive, and that Government has no money to spare for its development.

17. It is to be admitted that there is ground for fear—

(i) that, until our teachers are really properly trained in happy school methods, the school will continue to cast " shades of the prison house " about the child's life;

(ii) that there are certain risks to health at schools, which cannot be lessened in the present welter of small, almost uncontrolled pathsalas and maktabs;

(iii) that, until literacy is universal, the unusual literate ploughboy or artisan will imagine himself too good for manual labour;

(iv) that, until there is scope for educated intelligence in the rural areas, the best boys may turn towards the town;

(v) that literate menial servants may prove somewhat intractable till they are properly treated;

(vii) that, if we regard neutrality in, as synonymous with indifference to, and even neglect of religious instruction in our schools, we shall leave undeveloped one of the most powerful safeguards of good conduct in our children.

(viii) that, unless the intelligence of the community as a whole rises and supplies renewed rationality to existing or revised sanctions for conduct, there will be serious stresses set up within its body corporate through the progress of some individuals and the superstitious conservatism of others;

(ix) that, unless our education confers the power of clear thinking and skilful action, and is followed up by a supply of good reading matter, the irresponsible agitator will find the field prepared for his sowing;

(x) that, while the peasant sees only the kind of schools that are now before his eyes, he will decline to sacrifice his children to them; and,

(xi) if he does use them, he will continue to pay only what the schools are worth;

(xii) that, if the present resources of Government and local authorities are not sufficient, new methods of raising money will have to be devised.

Each of these undoubted dangers arising out of free primary education carries its own safeguard in our knowledge of the condition that is attached to its existence. Knowing in what the danger lies it must be our endeavour to construct a system which will supply the expected deficiency, and avoid the lurking peril. One more unspoken objection to universal education is perhaps well answered in the words of Diderot: "There is no doubt but that it is more difficult to oppress a peasant who can read than any other man."

18. Necessity for Primary Education.—The fact is that Bengal, as part of the great country of India, is faced with a world situation which is insistent in its demand for attention, and the ignorance of the masses throws upon the "intelligentsia" the greater responsibility for the decision they have got to make in this question. No longer can barriers even of remoteness save the peasant in his hamlet from the invasive forces of modern life. The war has proved by the conclusive logic of its operations on the price of food, of cloth, and of silver that many "valleys have been filled" and many "mountains brought low," and that Bengal is nearer Europe, America and Japan to-day than it was to Bombay a hundred years ago. The closing of mills in distant Dundee would spread ruin in the plains of Bengal; and anarchy in Russia has caused havoc in the tea industry of its hills. As well might you equip the armies of India with bows and arrows to meet troops supplied with modern lethal weapons, as expect to compete in modern trade and commercial activities with only the present primary schools behind you. The sons of Bengal have got to prepare themselves and their motherland to face the rest of the world on equal terms, or to remain nurslings, or to become the spoil of the strongest. "Get rich," "Be prosperous," these are the watchwords that are needed to-day, provided they are followed with honour, and their fulfilment linked with true, unselfish service for the community as the corollary of success. To this end every man should do a man's day's work every working day. If this were done there would be nothing to fear from high wages, or high prices, or freedom itself. The greatest asset of the country is the hitherto undeveloped intelligence and unorganised strength of its masses.

19. From another point of view the matter is of urgent importance. The country has embarked on a course of political development which seems likely to be accelerated as time goes on. The very villagers have now substantial powers of self-government. The results of even the first elections for the Councils have shewn that representatives of the masses are likely to find places in them. If this is so, the sooner we "educate our masters," the better we can hope to be governed by them. The popular vote must be made an intelligent vote, or trouble and misery must result from any further extension of popular government. It may perhaps be noted in passing that the attainment of literacy is only the first step towards progress, and that at present only 7·5 per cent. of the population of Bengal are literate. A reference to Appendix E (a), will show that, though there has been a great increase in the number and percentage of the children at school, still the number of illiterates in the country to-day is larger than it was twenty years ago. Ignorance is, in fact, a disease that is far more prevalent and, indeed, far more dangerous and destructive than even malaria. The need for sheer enlightenment is alone a sufficient reason for pressing forward the expansion of primary education.

20. The Purpose of Elementary Education.—If, therefore, it is decided to go forward in the determination to solve the psychological and financial problems that are involved in persuading the people of Bengal to make arrangements for offering free primary education to all their children, and in preparing the way for making it compulsory within a reasonable time, which may be reckoned at from five to ten years, we shall embark on an educational adventure which will call for a great ideal, a fixed purpose, a wide grasp of existing conditions, a sane policy, ingenious expedients, persuasive tongues, firm administration, and sound finance. The ideal may perhaps be stated as submission to the Highest Good in the service of an economically sound community by efficient and prosperous citizens. The purpose would then be to make the largest possible number of individuals efficient and prosperous for the service of the widest community of which they can be made effectively to realize that they form a part. The following chapters constitute an attempt to indicate the lines upon which this purpose can perhaps be fulfilled on the educational side of the question. In the meantime the following percentages of the population enrolled in elementary schools (Progress of Education in India, 1912-17, page 4), will indicate to some extent how far India is behind in the race:—

CHAPTER II.

History and Existing Conditions.

21. Introductory.—It is impossible to grasp the meaning of the present position of educational affairs in Bengal without knowing what has led up to it. The story of the secondary schools and of the University of Calcutta has recently been written by the Sadler Commission, that of the "vernacular schools" by Mr. H. A. Stark (now a member of the Legislative Council of Bengal). It is therefore unnecessary for me to do more than enumerate the main lines along which development has taken place in the administration of elementary education, to endeavour to state the nature of the difficulties that have been encountered in each phase of the problem, and to show how matters stand at the present moment. The different aspects of the question, whether specially related to policy, or finance, or control, or the training of teachers, or the actual instruction in the schools, must all be considered in their bearing upon one object, namely, the "child" in himself and in his future membership of the community.

22. Policy.—It has to be borne in mind at every step that all notions of a public system of free State education anywhere at all are the creations of but yesterday, and that it was not till towards the middle of the nineteenth century that such an idea began to take shape with any definiteness in any country in the world. It is therefore vain to regret that a system of village schools in Bengal was not, in the earliest days of British administration in Bengal, made an essential part of the village system. All through history there have been special classes, generally religious in character, that have held the stores of book knowledge and the finer forms of skill in their exclusive circles. Schools were conducted, whether in India or in Europe, by religious castes for special purposes. Other classes had their own forms of education for the field of battle, or at the plough tail, or in the mart; but in early days literacy was not an essential accomplishment for books were few and printing not invented. There are outstanding examples of human greatness who were utterly illiterate and apparently not much the worse for it in their own time and condition of society. Generally speaking literacy has to-day become the first step towards, and the prior condition of great or even moderate success among the complexities of modern life. Recognizing then, that in other circumstances, there are, or may be, better forms of education, we are bound now in Bengal to use the term "Education" as involving as a first minimum the attainment of literacy which is defined for census purposes as the ability to read and write a letter.

23. In the desolating wars which preceded the consolidation of the power in India of the East India Company, learning had been reduced to dire straits and was even in danger of dying out. The new rulers felt this at first in the courts of law. They therefore established the Calcutta Madrassah in 1782 and the Sanskrit College at Benares in 1791, so that there should be trained a number of men competent to quote Muhammadan and Hindu law. This was followed in 1814 by an annual grant from the Company of one lakh of rupees for "the revival and improvement of literature, and the encouragement of the learned natives of India, and for the introduction and promotion of a knowledge of the sciences among the inhabitants of the British territories of India." This declaration contains the seed of that struggle between the views of the "Orientalists" and the "Anglicists," which was to continue for many years, and of which in a modified form one hears echoes even to-day. The question was settled in favour of the Anglicists by Lord William Bentinck after considering Macaulay's Minute of 1835. While making no attempt to suppress existing schools, it was decided that "all funds appropriated for the purposes of education would be best employed on English education alone." To carry out this policy schools, which still exist as Government High Schools, were established at the headquarters of districts, and called zilla schools. These were to be the nucleus of "a system of national institutions," which was to spread to the villages. They were to be " normal schools, " that is, schools shewing the correct form of instruction or organisation, and teachers were to be trained in them before being sent out to found similar schools further afield. The indigenous schools of the rural areas were in the meantime to carry on their traditional activities finding their own support.

24. In 1835, the very year of Macaulay's Minute, as a result of another line of thought, Mr. Adam began his four years' survey of education in Bengal. He found that the teachers were " for the most part simple-minded, but poor and ignorant." They reflected as little honour on their occupation as they derived emolument from it. " They do not understand the importance of the task they have undertaken; they do not appear to have made it even a subject of thought; they do not appreciate the great influence which they might exert over the minds of their pupils; and they consequently neglect the highest duties which their situation would impose if they were better acquainted with their powers and obligations; . . . . they produce chiefly a mechanical effect upon the intellect of their pupils. . . . As to any moral influence of teachers over pupils, any attempt to form the sentiments and habits, and to control and guide the passions and emotions, such a notion never enters their conceptions." Mr. Adam recommended the encouragement of these schools by the payment of grants, and that they should be co-ordinated with the central " Anglo-Vernacular " schools which have already been mentioned.

25. We thus see two clear and clearly opposed views of the policy that should be adopted. Macaulay despaired of these indigenous schools, saying: " We do not at present aim at giving education directly to the lower classes . . . We aim at raising up an educated class who will hereafter, as we hope, be the means of diffusing among their countrymen some portion of the knowledge we have imparted to them." He says further: " I do not see how we can either make the present teachers of elementary knowledge more competent, or supply their places as yet with fitter men. The evil is one which time only can remedy, our schools (zilla) are nurseries for school masters for the next generation. If we can raise up a class of educated Bengalis, they will naturally, and without any violent changes, displace, by degrees, the present incompetent teachers." Mr. Adam's view, on the other hand was that improvement would be effected by a system of payment by results, by assigning small grants of land to teachers trained in the zilla schools, and by the distribution of vernacular text-books. The Committee of Public Instruction considered carefully these two policies, viz., the spreading of a good education which was to include the teaching of English and the knowledge of the West outwards and downwards from well-organised centres, as against the view that money should be spent in improving the existing indigenous schools; and decided in favour of the former, declining even to experiment with the latter.

26. In 1848 Lord Hardinge, the First, endeavoured to reconcile the two ideas by starting 101 schools of a type between the zilla schools and those that were indigenous. The attempt appears to have been premature, for in ten years only 26 of these schools remained in existence.

27. Meanwhile Mr. Thomasson had experimented with Mr. Adam's scheme in a modified form in the United Provinces, and Lord Dalhousie determined to introduce it into Bengal since the downward filtration was making but slow progress. The Commission of 1882 blessed the dual system, but desired that provision should be made for boys from the primary schools to go on to the higher ones.

28. These two types of school are still in existence, but owing to pressure on the limited accommodation provided in them, the zilla schools and a good many of the aided high schools have abandoned their lowest classes. No public substitute has yet been provided for them. The children who use the zilla schools either come from the private and aided primary schools, or receive their early teaching from private tutors. In the next chapter proposals will be put forward for the acceptance of a policy aimed at establishing a public and national system of schools that is designed to meet all the needs of the situation.

29. Finance.—From the original grant of one lakh of rupees for education in 1814, until the present time, the expenditure of Government has been steadily increasing until in 1918-19 that on primary education alone reached the total of Rs. 23,01,585. Of this Rs. 16,60,467 was actually spent on the recurring expenses of the schools themselves and the balance on supervision, inspection, capital costs, etc. (vide Appendix F). It has been shown how after Macaulay's Minute it was considered necessary to spend all public educational funds on schools designed mainly for the upper classes. It was soon found that this policy alone would not meet the needs of the case, and in 1839 Lord Auckland returned to institutions for oriental learning the funds they had lost, and supplied additional funds for English education. At first Government was responsible for the whole expenditure on English schools, except what was obtained from fees, but it was soon found to be economical to substitute for this a system of grants-in-aid to schools under private management. After Mr. Adam's plan was adopted, this method of finance was applied to the primary schools, and took the form principally of " rewards corresponding in value to the progress made by the pupils, " in other words of " payment by results." This plan was definitely accepted in 1871-72 and afterwards approved by the Commission of 1882. Expansion under it was so rapid that funds ran short. The amount of the reward was reduced and the conditions of its attainment made more difficult, but the expansion continued.

30. In 1901 " Payment by results " was abandoned on the recommendation of a Conference in Simla, and it was decided to pay teachers " subsistence allowances " quarterly, and extra payments at the end of the year, the latter depending on the numbers in the school and its general character as judged by inspection. In 1911 this was modified so that the subsistence allowances were to be paid twice a year and the grants earned by merit marks the following year. The practically unanimous opinion of the country is in favour of the reinstitution of a primary school examination and of some reward being given to the teachers on its results, not as part of, but in addition to their pay. In 1904-1905 the Burdwan District Board passed the following resolution, which appears justly to sum up the universal opinion:— " The abolition of public examination has entirely taken away the impetus from teachers, pupils and their guardians, and it has generated a greater evil than it was intended to remove. Now the guardians have become quite indifferent in sending their boys to primary schools, and the gurus, instead of being anxious to show results by teaching the boys, are now only anxious to secure the sweet will of their Sub-Inspectors, on whom they now entirely rely for their reward."

31. The great despatches of 1854 and 1859 aimed at a wide diffusion of elementary education, which was to be carried out by Government agency through the levy of a compulsory rate. The Government of Bengal, unlike the Government of India, took the view that the Permanent Settlement made the levy of a cess impossible. It also contended with more force that, if a cess was to be levied, it should be imposed on both agriculturists and non-agriculturists, since about one-third of the children in the pathsalas belonged to the middle and upper classes. The Duke of Argyll's despatch of 1870 confirmed the view of the Government of India, which was strengthened by the opinion of Mr. Wilson. The cess was, however, never levied, and fees continued to be charged to help out the grants-in-aid, and to-day the expenditure from public funds is still a little less than half the total cost of primary education in Bengal. The question of the financing of primary education has never been put upon a definite and satisfactory basis, and its more recent history has been one long struggle to meet an impossible situation with wholly inadequate funds. The principle of a cess with safeguards has, however, been admitted in the Bengal Primary Education Act of 1919, and it is upon this important principle that the recommendations regarding finance in Chapter IX of this report have been founded, although an alternative has also been suggested.

32. Meanwhile district board schools were being established in backward areas with a view to giving the people a " taste for literacy." It was intended to convert them into aided schools as the people were prepared to undertake their upkeep. This process of conversion was unduly hastened by the financial difficulties of Government, and by 1905 the existing board schools had come to be regarded as obsolete survivals. The Government of the shortlived province of East Bengal and Assam, seeing their importance, revived the scheme, and embarked upon a policy that was intended to place a board lower primary school in every panchayeti or chaukidari union that was not already in possession of an upper primary school which could be regarded as of equivalent standard. The scheme was extended to Western Bengal when the two parts of the province were re-united. The present condition of the scheme will be seen in Appendix G. Over 3,000 unions remain to be provided, and at the present rate of progress it will take periods varying from 3 to 78 years to complete the scheme in the different districts. This scheme makes provision for the payment of Rs. 10 per month between two teachers. The head pandit generally gets Rs. 7 and his assistant gets Rs. 3. The fees usually amount to about Rs. 6 a month, and these are also divided. In the Quinquennial Review for Bengal for 1912-17 (page 56), the Director says: " The merits of this scheme are considerable, but it has not contributed to the expansion of primary education. A considerable number of the schools affected were existing institutions." The completion of this scheme is merely a matter of the provision of funds which have hitherto been found from Imperial grants. Beyond this there does not seem to be any plan in existence for expanding primary education in Bengal.

33. The amounts spent on primary schools, apart from capital sums and those required for control, were in 1919-20—Imperial and Provincial funds, Rs. 17,12,645; District Board funds, Rs. 7,55,864; Municipal funds, Rs. 1,09,186, private sources, including fees, Rs. 23,67,930; or a total of nearly fifty lakhs of rupees (vide Appendix F.)

34. Control.—Much of the early work in primary education was done, and is still being done, by religious societies. At first the comparatively small Government funds were distributed without difficulty, but in 1823 it was found necessary to appoint a " Committee of Public Instruction " with local committees in country districts to assist it. By 1842 the funds to be utilised had reached a sum of over 5½ lakhs and a Council of Education was formed to control all educational institutions, except those of a purely vernacular character. It may be remarked in passing that it was by this fact that the distinction between " Vernacular " and " English " schools arose. No other sound reason for such a fixed distinction has ever existed and even this has long passed away, and is now becoming especially meaningless, as the teaching of English is to be permitted in the primary schools.

35. The local authorities were so apathetic, that in 1844 it was found necessary to supersede them by the appointment of an inspector of schools. One of the results of the celebrated despatch of 1854 was the appointment of a Director of Public Instruction in place of the Council of Education.

36. The first attempt at any organisation of schools in Bengal appears to have been made by the Christian Knowledge Society in 1822. Three " Circles " were established at Tollygunge, Cossipore and Howrah, each containing one central and five ancillary schools, each school being in charge of its own guru, and the circle of schools being superintended by a " Circle Pandit." This was afterwards elaborated into the " Circle System," in which stipends were paid and not grants-in-aid. This system was recognised by the Government of Bengal in 1863-64 and ten years later was much extended by the division of every district into " Circles " for convenience in the examinations that accompanied the acceptance of the plan of payment by results. The " Circle System " developed into the " Chief Guru System," in which the head teacher of the central school became responsible for the schools of his circle, and became the medium of control between the Department and the small scattered pathsalas. Ultimately it was found to be impossible for the chief Gurus to manage their own as well as to visit and supervise the work of other schools. They therefore became the " Guru Instructors " or " Inspecting Pandits," whose successors are still with us. This system was intended to increase the number of schools, and succeeded in doing so, but it ultimately outlived its usefulness, as some of the schools only existed in name, while others rose to a higher standard than that of the central institution. The increase in the number of the schools had been so great under this system that in 1882-83 a halt was called, and it was decided to try to consolidate and improve the existing schools. By 1890-91, the "Circles" seem to have become indistinct and they were finally abolished in 1911.

37. Meanwhile local government was developing and the control of primary education was considered in connection with it at each step. In 1873 Government was empowered to require municipalities to establish and maintain schools. In 1882 the Municipal Act relieved municipalities of police charges, on condition that the money should be devoted to education. The Education Commission of 1882 stated that they attached great importance to the connexion of all agencies of primary education with the scheme of self government which was being developed in India. In 1882 also authority was taken to give the union committees certain limited powers in relation to primary schools. The control of local bodies at first resulted in a decrease in the expansion of primary education relatively to that of secondary schools, but much is hoped from the work of union boards, which are being constituted under the Village Self-Government Act of 1919.

38. In order to make the control of the district boards real, sub-inspectors were at one time made servants of the boards. The District Deputy Inspectors were made ex-officio members of the boards in 1890, but remained Government servants. This plan did not work for two principal reasons. First, the sub-inspectors were given all kinds of non-educational work to do, such as the supervision of pounds, ferries, and the sale of quinine; and second, because the District Deputy Inspectors had not sufficient control over them, for they were not in a directly subordinate position. The sub-inspectors were, therefore, again made into Government servants and remain so now, being subordinate to Deputy, District Deputy, and Divisional Inspectors, and so to the Department.

39. The increase in the number of primary schools in recent years has demanded an increase in the number of sub-inspectors. It was unfortunately impossible to find the funds to finance this large increase. A new class was therefore called into existence, and they were termed "assistant sub-inspectors." These officers are on low pay, but are, in many cases, of similar qualification with the sub-inspectors. They sometimes have separate areas and sometimes are under the general control of a sub-inspector. The only reason for their existence is economy. The average number of schools per sub-inspector (including assistant sub-inspectors) is 172.

40. In order to give Muhammadans every chance to develop educationally, Government has recognised their special schools, called maktabs and madrassahs, by special grants. They are supervised by special sub-inspectors, and other special Muhammadan inspecting officers, while at headquarters there is a special "Assistant Director of Public Instruction for Muhammadan Education." A class of low grade inspecting officers, styled "inspecting maulvis" corresponds to the inspecting pandit mentioned above.

41. To sum up, education of all kinds is in the charge of one of the new Ministers appointed under the Reforms Scheme. Under him is a Deputy Secretary to Government, who is also Director of Public Instruction. The Director controls five Divisional Inspectors, who are assisted by "Second Inspectors" and "Assistant Inspectors," and control primary and middle education through District Deputy, Deputy, and Sub-Inspectors, as well as assistant sub-inspectors, inspecting pandits and inspecting maulvis. On the other hand, the primary schools form a part of the responsibilities of municipalities and of the union boards. These latter will work under the supervision of local and district boards. These in turn will be controlled by a Secretary to Government in the Department of Local Self-Government, which is in the hands of a separate special Minister. The whole scheme may be viewed in the following form:—

42. Teachers.—In 1885 it was the intention that when the zilla schools were started they should be "normal," that is showing the proper form of organisation, standard of work, staff, and methods of teaching. They were to be examples for new schools that might be started, and to them were to be attached teachers for training. If the "filtration" policy had been retained as the sole guide, this plan would perhaps have succeeded, but in the wide increase of the numbers of schools for which some responsibility was taken under Mr. Adam's scheme, it became necessary to adopt some plan for turning out trained teachers more rapidly. In 1854, therefore, "normal schools" were started and have done good work in training teachers for middle schools and the lower departments of high schools.

43. Later on it was found necessary to proceed still more rapidly with training, and the "guru training schools" were started. These have taken in any teachers they were able to secure, the qualification often being only that of the lower primary school, viz., bare literacy, though a middle school standard is aimed at, and they do with this material what is possible in one or two years. All the guru training schools were staffed till recently by a head pandit on Rs. 18 and two others on Rs. 10 each, while the students could only be secured by the payment of Rs. 11 a month! These schools are being replaced by a more ambitious type under teachers trained in the Secondary Training Colleges assisted by two pandits on Rs. 30—1—50. Unfortunately in many cases these schools have been built where land was cheap because population was thin. The result has been that this fact, combined with the natural aversion of the people to having their children practised on by 40 gurus in training, has destroyed any chance of a real practising school. These "practising schools" are often the merest pretence having not more than a dozen on the rolls. Recently recourse has been had to practising students in neighbouring schools, but the distances to be walked by the students and their supervisors, and the difficulty of securing real school conditions during practice, seem to make the effort exceedingly difficult. Proposals are put forward in Chapter VI of this Report for a fundamental change of policy in this matter.

44. One more matter in this connexion calls for remark and that is the comparatively large percentage of trained gurus who fail to become bonâ fide teachers. Over 20 per cent. are estimated to go away into other work after Government has spent considerable sums on their training. The real remedy lies in improving the prospects of the primary school teacher till he can with certainty earn more than, say, a day labourer. In the meantime I have been unable to distinguish easily between the work of the trained and the untrained teacher, though the former generally receives a monthly grant of Rs. 5 a month in excess of the latter. Indeed, I am coming to the conviction that the old fashioned method of the untrained pandit, who calls up individuals or small groups of children to say their lessons and then sends them back to repeat a new one till called up again, is possibly the most efficient in the existing primary schools, where one teacher often finds himself confronted with the impossible task of teaching 4 or 3 classes of children at once and keeping all occupied at the same time. A column shewing the number and recent increase of trained teachers will be found in Appendix E (b). In 1919-20 there were four "trained" teachers for every 19 primary schools.

45. Schools.—In 1835—39 Mr. Adam estimated that 7½ per cent. of the children of school-going age were at school. A rough estimate now places it at 20·5 per cent. We are therefore still faced with a very serious condition of things in Bengal. Though the number of children at school in the 12 years 1900-01 to 1912-13 increased by 44·8 per cent. while the population only increased 7·9 per cent. and though the numbers in school in 1919-20 show an increase of 64·9 per cent. over those of 1900-01, still the fact remains that in 1919-20 the number of children of suitable age who were not at school was larger than in 1900-01. This appears the more grave when we consider that of the children who go to school only about one in five becomes really literate, and some of these lapse from literary after varying periods.

46. Of the number of schools there is nothing to complain. There is a school to every 1·7 square miles of Bengal, including its immense areas of jungle, water, and cultivation. This sort of calculation is without much value as a measure of the real state of primary education. I have come across subordinate inspecting officers who imagined it was a part of their duty merely to increase the number of schools, and were much less concerned as to the resulting number of children under instruction, or the efficiency of the instruction given. This tendency is shown in Appendix E (b) from which it will be seen that in 1919-20 the number of primary schools had increased by 10,278 as compared with 1914-15, and that of the pupils by only 185,622, or an average of 18 children per additional school, even if the whole of the increase were confined to them. The average strength of a school in 1914-15 was 34, and this was reduced in 1919-20 to 30.

47. The fact is that the starting of schools, with the exception of the Board lower primary schools, is left to private enterprise. A pandit, who may be a person almost wholly without educational qualification, may be needing some addition to a slender living eked out in some small trade or profession. He goes to a place where fees are to be obtained and opens a school, it may be on a benevolent patron's verandah, or in a bamboo and matting hut of his own. He then applies to the Municipality or District Board, and to the inspecting officer concerned for grants of various kinds. If he is financially successful it is quite possible that a rival will set up near at hand and they will enter into a mutually debilitating competition, instead of co-operating in one larger school. A glance at the map of the Union Board area in Appendix D will illustrate this condition of things, unremunerative and unenlightened areas remaining without schools.

48. It is my duty to make a critical survey of the situation, but I do not wish to create the impression that I am distributing indiscriminate blame to these unfortunate and wretchedly paid servants of the community. One cannot blame them, and some of them have justly earned most enviable local reputations for steady, honourable and intelligent work extending over many years. On the other hand it must be admitted that this is exceptional. In general, the position is this. The primary schools of the country are bad.

They are often used as crèches rather than as schools, and parents value them so little that, of 540,000 children in the first year Infant class, they remove nearly 170,000 after the first year, an additional 116,500 after the second year, and over four lakhs before the final year of the primary school is reached. Only a few schools have buildings of their own, and those are generally of poor quality. The equipment is almost always either defective or absent. The teachers are for the most part poorly qualified and worse paid. Indeed they are so badly paid that, in order to live at all, they have to earn outside the school at least as much as they earn inside it. When grants are given to teachers from public funds the people are inclined to consider that there is the less need for them to contribute towards their support and, as prices rise, this tendency is emphasised to the further undoing of the teacher.

49. A brief statistical review is given in this paragraph and the next of the existing condition of primary education in the different provinces of India, and particularly in the presidencies of Bengal, Madras and Bombay.

It will be seen that Bengal has the largest number of primary schools and Madras the largest number of scholars. A comparison between the figures for the two years shows that although there was an increase in the number of primary schools in Bengal, there was a marked decline in the number of pupils. The average strength of a primary school in Bengal is less than that in almost all other provinces of India. Further, the number of square miles (average) served by a boys' primary school in Bengal is 2·2 and is less than the corresponding figure in any other province. This clearly goes to show that what is needed in Bengal is not an increase in the number of primary schools but their proper and systematic organisation and distribution on a well-defined plan. The financial difficulty involved in the acceptance of such a policy in Bengal is the first problem for solution; for in this province the existing expenditure on primary schools is deplorably low, as will appear from the table below.

Table II.

* Now Rs. 15.

It will be seen from the above table that the cost of educating a pupil in either a boys' or a girls' primary school is smallest in Bengal. It has been already shown in Table I that the average strength of a primary school in Bengal is also comparatively low. The conviction that is forced on the mind is that the cost of primary education in Bengal is far below the lowest possible level of efficiency. It is, however, satisfactory to note that the rates of fees in primary schools of Bengal are higher than those in any other province. Thus the people in Bengal voluntarily contribute more to the cost of primary education than the people of other provinces. The expenditure from public sources in Bengal is, however, small in comparison with that in Bombay and Madras. This will appear from the table below.

Table III.

It will appear from the above table that Madras, which has a population less than that of Bengal, contributes 51·5 per cent. from provincial revenues, 17·0 per cent. from district funds and 5·0 per cent. from municipal funds or a total of 73·5 per cent. from public sources to the expenditure on primary school for boys; and Bombay, which has a population less than half the population of Bengal, contributes 66·0, 5·5, 14·9 per cent. respectively, from the same sources, or a total of 86·4 per cent. from public sources; whereas Bengal contributes 32·8 per cent. from provincial revenues, 14·8 per cent. from district funds, 1·8 per cent. from municipal funds, or a total of 49·4 per cent. only from public sources to the expenditure on primary schools for boys. Moreover, the total expenditure on primary schools in Bengal compares very unfavourably with that either in Madras or in Bombay. The cost per head of population from provincial revenues is also very low in Bengal in comparison with Bombay and Madras. It is very desirable that the expenditure on primary schools of Bengal should be increased considerably and that Government should contribute more generously towards the cost of primary education in this province.

It will be seen from the above table that the percentage of publicly managed primary schools in Bengal is only 6·9, in Madras it is 26·9 and in Bombay 80·7. This shows that in Bengal the local authorities have not yet taken up in full their responsibility in regard to mass education. The primary schools in this presidency are mainly of the teacher-manager type. They grow and die at the will of the teachers.

(b) The strongest impression left on the mind after carefully considering the state of primary education in Bengal is the lack of any definite systematisation which might enable us at any time, to judge how far the problem is really being solved and to ensure that the limited funds at our disposal are spent to the best possible effect. It is to the construction of such a system that we must now turn.

CHAPTER III.

System, Curriculum, Examinations.

51. Definitions.—In Chapters I and II an attempt has been made to establish the necessity for pressing forward with a policy which is directed towards securing universal literacy in Bengal as soon as possible, and to show what has been done to this end in the past, and what is being done at present, as well as the weaknesses that stand in the way of efficiency. It is now necessary to direct our attention towards the question as to how that policy can best be given form. It will prevent possible future misunderstanding if, before doing so, a clear meaning is attached to the use of certain terms.

52. " A literate " has been defined for census purposes as " a person who can write a letter to a friend and read his reply." It is probably desirable from the point of view of school purposes to add to that the power to use easily and quickly the first four rules in arithmetic.

53. There is a sense in which " Education " means a life-long process caused by the total experience of life. Again, the acquisition of a certain minimum of efficiency is demanded by the mature in every human society from those who have not yet reached maturity. The process of attaining this minimum of efficiency, whether at the plough-tail, in the shop, office or what not, may be regarded as " Education." A more usual use of the word than either of these is intended in this Report; viz., that education is the conscious, deliberate effort of the State, or of private individuals or societies, to bring to bear upon the child and the adolescent specific and organised influences, moral, physical and intellectual, which will, in the first place, develop their innate powers to the highest point possible in the circumstances; and, in the second, fit them for some definite place and function in the society to which they belong.

54. The terms " primary," " elementary " and " secondary," as applied to schools, are used loosely in various ways. Some regard primary and secondary education as essentially separate and distinct in character from beginning to end with different aims and methods. The children of primary schools are, on this view, of a different social class from the others, and are from the first devoted to a lower destiny. This view was held in England for many years and remains entrenched in the " preparatory " and " public " schools there; but even in England it is gradually being replaced by another, viz., that the earlier parts of school work should be called " primary " or " elementary," and the later parts " secondary." This latter view is commonly accepted in Scotland, and in most of the British nations, as well as in America, though it is, of course, admitted that some schools, whether primary or secondary, will have a wider curriculum, and better teachers and equipment than others at the same stage.

55. The Bengal Primary Education Act of 1919 (hereinafter referred to as the " Education Act ") in section 2(5) leaves the definition to the prescription of the Education Department. It has to be remembered that " middle schools " in Bengal are hardly as high in standard as the elementary schools of the West, yet we have generally applied the term " secondary " to them. It is here suggested that all education up to the top of the middle school should be described as " elementary," and all school education above it (including that given in intermediate colleges) should be called " secondary." Elementary education in this sense might be divided into " primary " and " middle;" while " lower primary " might be regarded as leading on the one hand to an " upper primary " finishing class or classes, and on the other to the middle classes.

56. The teaching of English has now been authorised even in primary schools in which teachers qualified to give instruction in it are found. Middle vernacular schools are rapidly dying away for want of it. The way in which the distinction between " Vernacular " and " English " schools arose has been indicated in paragraph 34 above. The distinction has now no real force. All schools should be truly "vernacular," and in as many as possible English should be taught as a special subject, and possibly used as a medium of instruction to some extent in the higher schools. It may conceivably be the most important of the subjects of school instruction, but there is no reason why its presence or absence should complicate the administrative machinery and differentiate schools into separate categories.

57. Classification.—The existing state of things may be compared with the proposed system in the table shewn below, the "present" part of which is taken from the "Rules and Orders of the Education Department, Bengal" (5th Edition, Chapter III):—

(b) The Calcutta University has passed a resolution that the Matriculation examination should be taken at about the age of 14 years, so as to allow of a 4 years' uninterrupted course before entry to the University.

(c) An Upper Primary, or Primary Final finishing class will be parallel with Class III and will be similar to it in some subjects, but will be semi-vocational in others, i.e., the curriculum will include :—

A. Compulsory :—(i) Vernacular reading of printed matter, manuscripts and documents connected with the boy's future work (e.g. leases, petitions, agreements, circulars on co-operative credit, agriculture, etc.)

(ii) Vernacular composition and letter writing

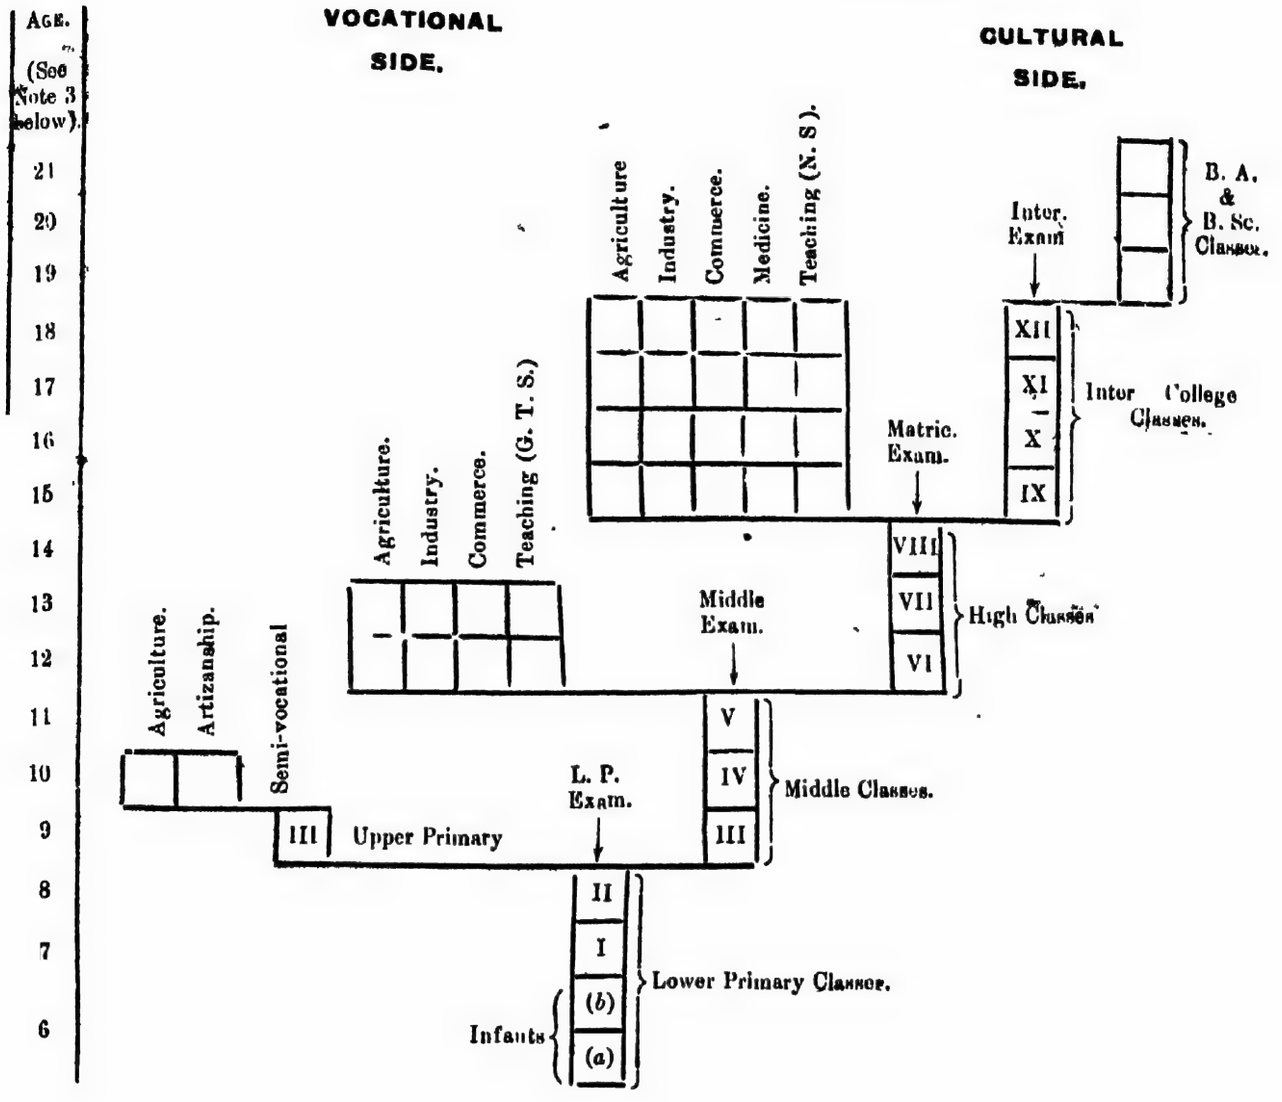
(iii) Tables, mental calculations (Indian and English methods), simple mensuration, bazaar and zamindari accounts.

B. Optional :—English, Agricultural Nature Study, Manual Work, Hygiene, Drawing, Geography History and Physical Exercise.

58. Free and Compulsory Education.—It is perhaps unnecessary in the twentieth century to enter upon a long argument concerning the responsibility of the State in education. It is now universally admitted that the aggregate value of the individuals composing a nation is ultimately the value of that State. It follows that the State should use its best endeavours to destroy ignorance and to create efficiency among its people, and we have seen that the spread of literacy is in these days the first step towards this end. The attainment of literacy by all involves the setting up of a public system of at least primary schools. This does not mean that every citizen is to be forced into those schools, but it does mean that if the minimum is not attained privately, it must be attained in the schools of the nation. But poverty may be pleaded as an obstacle. The schools must therefore be free. The will to attend may still be lacking. In that case compulsion must be resorted to, for it has become "a necessary precaution of prudent statesmanship." The District Board Conference held in January 1921 resolved that "the intention of making primary education free and compulsory as soon as possible be accepted as a directive idea." The Education Act of 1919 has gone so far as to make it possible for a public body to apply for permission to make primary education compulsory in its area, or in any part thereof. This cannot be made effective till parents in such an area can be assured of the existence of a suitable and efficient free school within a mile of their

DIAGRAM I.

A Co-ordinated National System of Schools.



NOTES.

(1) In class II a boy should be literate in his vernacular, and preferably should have some elementary knowledge of English. He should be able to use the first four rules in arithmetic.

(2) In class III (U. P.) on the vocational side a boy's primary education will be rounded off. The character of the class should be semi-vocational and the curriculum should include —

A. Compulsory.—(i) Vernacular reading of printed matter, manuscripts and documents connected with his future work (e.g., leases, petitions, agreements, circulars on co-operative credit, agriculture, etc.).

(ii) Vernacular composition and letter-writing.

(iii) Tables, mental calculations (Indian and English methods), simple mensuration, bazaar and zamindary accounts.

B. Optional.—English, Agricultural Nature Study, Manual Work, Hygiene, Drawing, Geography, History and Physical Exercise.

(3) After the Upper Primary stage a boy should enter a definitely vocational class intended to give him skill and knowledge in his future work. Boys entering these classes will generally be older than is shown in the diagram above.

(4) This proposed arrangement of classes up to X is intended to correspond with that laid down in Volume V of the "Statistics of British India," new Table No. 19.

(5) It is important to distinguish between manual work taught for its cultural value in training brain, hand, and eye for co-ordinated activity on the one hand, and manual work taught with a vocational end in view, i.e., to fit a boy for his calling in after life as a carpenter, blacksmith, etc.

abode. The schools at present arise to suit the convenience of private persons.

59. Four stages of our policy must therefore be contemplated:—

(a) the present plan of private enterprise assisted by grants and largely supported by fees;
(b) a system of public (Union Board or Municipal) control, salaries or stipends being paid, and fees charged;
(c) public control with schools on a free, voluntary basis, the teachers being paid salaries;
(d) public control on a free, compulsory basis.

It is a part of the duty of every citizen to assist in the establishment of a national system of primary schools, and to pay his own small share towards its upkeep even if his own children are sent to other schools for social reasons to which he himself attaches great importance.

60. Systematization.—All this points to that "complete reconstruction of the educational system" of which "no part can be modified without affecting vitally the other parts" which is suggested by the Director of Public Instruction in Bengal (the Hon'ble Mr. W. W. Hornell, C.I.E.,) in the 1912-17 Quinquennial Review (page 61). He adds: "It is impossible to attack the problem by compartments. Secondary education depends upon primary education, and university education upon both. No reform of the university can be undertaken with any hope of success while the secondary schools remain as they are, and no reform of the secondary schools is possible without an entire remodelling of primary education." This is confirmed by the Sadler University Commission who say (Volume IV, page 34): "There is a fundamental unity in national education which should be recognised and strengthened by the system adopted for its administration. The secondary schools should rest upon a sound foundation of elementary teaching; the universities depend upon the work done by the secondary schools in preparing students for their degree courses; technical education in its different grades presupposes a good preparation in the elementary and secondary schools." This is far from being a new idea for "the Despatch of 1854 . . . imposed upon the Government of India the duty of creating a properly articulated system of education from the primary school to the University."

61. In planning such a national system of education in Bengal it must be borne in mind that it is of the most fundamental importance that, while it must be definite enough in outline to enable it to be worked easily from the administrative point of view, it should be elastic enough to admit of provision being made to meet the special needs of any locality, or of any substantial section of the community. Special payment may reasonably be demanded for special requirements, but they should be possible within the system.

62. It is also of very great importance that the purpose of each part of the system should be clearly understood; and that each part should be so articulated with the whole as to form one co-ordinated system, the meaning of which should be comprehended by every family in every village community.

63. The Principle of Co-ordination.—The system will be broadly divisible into two parts according to the character of the instruction given, viz.—

(1) The Cultural side, and (2) the Vocational side. On the cultural side it will be divided into five parts according to the stage of the instruction given, viz :—

(I) Primary,
(II) Middle,
(III) High,
(IV) Intermediate College,
(V) University,

and each of these stages will be followed by appropriate semi-vocational and vocational completing courses intended to fit pupils for some definite work in life. The exact arrangement to be adopted will be a matter for much consideration. Diagram I on page 21 is intended to show a possible co-ordinated scheme of a purely suggestive character in illustration of the sort of thing that is proposed. Too strict attention must not be given to the ages of the pupils especially on the vocational side. The age stated is meant to show what would be normal on the cultural side. In this connexion a reference may be made to the Table in paragraph 57 above.

64. We are here concerned only with the lowest part of the system. The definite aim of the lower primary classes should be to make a child literate. Of course the better schools with Kindergarten departments and well trained teachers will be able to give a child far more than this minimum, but the minimum must be stated. It is the acquisition of that skill in reading, writing and reckoning which is instrumental in the attainment of all further progress in modern education, whether cultural or vocational. The acquisition of this skill should be the duty and right of all the people. The recent Missionary Commission on village education in India were right in saying, "We do not think that agriculture or industry can be rightly taught in the primary grade," though there is no objection to part of their reading matter and their examples in arithmetic being definitely connected with these subjects.

65. A Lower Primary Examination.—The gate from the lower primary school into the upper primary or middle departments should be an examination. In paragraph 30 above it has been stated that the opinion of the country is practically unanimous in demanding the restoration of this examination. The reasons against such a proposal that are generally put forward are three:—

(a) the child is too young at this stage to be subjected to the strain of a public examination, and cramming will be resorted to in order to bring him up to the standard;

(b) the subjects that do not form part of the test will be neglected, and the curriculum sadly narrowed down;

(c) it will be impossible to conduct so enormous an examination.

66. In answer to the first objection it may be said that reading, writing, and arithmetic at this primitive stage are far more matters of skill than of knowledge, and "cramming" can only mean that that skill is more rapidly acquired than would otherwise have been the case, and this is exactly what we desire. The second objection is a more serious one, but as a matter of fact the present system has not had any marked effect in securing any real attention to those subjects which widen the curriculum. The fact of the holding of an examination does not mean that praise and blame after inspection will cease to have their effect, and later on it may be found possible to extend the scope of the examination so as to include a simple oral test in any subjects that may be offered, or to abolish it altogether if such a course becomes advisable. In the proposals now being put forward the teachers are to be placed on the footing of public servants with better pay, and there will be more chance of training them to take a pride in their work, especially in the larger schools with well-qualified head masters in charge of them. As to the third objection, I have consulted a very large number of inspecting officers regarding the practicability of holding the examination. The large majority have expressed the view that with careful organisation it would be possible. In the present miscellaneous condition of primary education I am still inclined to think it would be very difficult. My recommendation is therefore that departmental sanction should be accorded, and rules drawn up for the conduct of the examination, but that permission to hold it should only be given to such municipalities and union boards as shall have instituted a co-ordinated system of public schools of a character that is satisfactory to the department. Only the boys of the highest class in each school would be examined.

67. The method of conducting the examination would be as follows. Centres would be determined upon, probably one in each municipality, and one in each single, or in two or three co-operating union board areas. It would be held in the holidays, preferably in the cold weather when locomotion is easy, at the higher schools with which the primary schools consider themselves to be articulated. The numbers from each school would not be large and the time of examination would be arranged so that the teacher could return home with his boys, who would belong to the top class only, the same evening. The examiners would be neighbouring high and middle school teachers, and several groups of about 15 or 20 boys could be examined at the same time in different rooms. At first all the boys would be set to work out sums, and to write a letter or essay in the vernacular, possibly under headings given by the examiner. While this was being done the boys would be called up individually for oral tests in mental arithmetic and reading. They would all then receive a dictation test together. The whole examination of each batch need not take more than one and a half hours, and several batches could be done in each room by each examiner in a day. The organisation of the affair and the public interest created would in themselves have an educative effect in the neighbourhood.

68. The examination would be organised by the Sub-Inspectors and could be made to pay for itself. I am told that it would be so popular that people would gladly pay eight annas as an admission fee. In some districts a rupee was not considered too much. Two annas might be used for a certificate, two for ink, paper, etc, two as an honorarium to the examiner, and two as a small reward to the teacher. If the money could be found it might be politic for Government to offer an additional two annas for the examiner and for the teacher. This would not be a part of the pay of the latter, but a reward additional to it. All the teachers concerned would be those of the national system, and in receipt of fixed pay.

69. The advantages of the institution of such an examination are obvious:—

(a) It would satisfy a popular demand. The recent District Board Conference passed with acclamation a resolution, " That a primary school examination should be re-instituted."

(b) It would, as it did before, " galvanise the system of education into new life by infusing into it a healthy spirit of competition."

(c) It would expand the numbers at school and form an incentive for keeping them there to the end of the course.

(d) It would take the boys to the higher school for an exciting visit at a critical moment in their lives, and might well fire their ardour to go on further, especially if the scholarships were awarded on the results of the examination.

(e) It would create a common standard by which the teachers could test their own work.

(f) It would serve as a rapid form of inspection of a large number of the top classes of schools.

(g) It would be an inducement to authorities in unorganised areas to deal systematically with primary education so as to qualify to take part in the test.

70. Semi-Vocational Final Class.—But the mere attainment of literacy has been shewn to be dangerous or of doubtful value in itself, and an effort must be made to secure good fruit from the labour and expense involved in producing it. The present upper primary class in Eastern Bengal is occupied with little more than a revision of previous work included in which is a good deal of material that is not suitable for small children. All these semi-vocational subjects (which are admittedly, even at the final primary stage, a little premature from the point of view of a boy's own development but which have to be learned before he goes to his life's work) should be relegated to the final year of the upper primary school. The course of the primary school would be rounded off by this means, and by its usefulness and direct bearing on the boy's future occupation should prove attractive to parents. The subjects referred to are set forth in note 2 of Diagram 4. (on page 21). At the same time the general enlightenment of the boy would proceed for the extra year or years of the upper primary course. Although it is the intention of this Report only to attempt to solve the problem of the systematization of lower primary schools, it is clear that, once the system is established, it will be easy to raise them to the upper primary standard at very little additional cost, and so to give some economic meaning to the schools by the semi-vocational character of the instruction given in the final primary class.

71. But even this is inadequate. The boy who leaves school at so early an age might possibly lapse into illiteracy again and would have no particular reason for keeping up his powers of reading and writing. It is therefore absolutely necessary that he should go on to some definitely vocational (industrial or agricultural) institution if he is good enough to be worth the extra trouble. Whether he should go on at once or wait for a year or two is a difficult question. If he is a big boy accustomed to helping his father at his work, as is often the case, there is every reason for his going on at once so as not to run the risk of losing what he has already learned. If, however, he is only ten years of age he will scarcely be able to manipulate the implements or tools used in his work. If possible, he should go on to the middle stage of school life, and thence to a higher vocational training. Generally speaking, parents will not agree to this, gruding the loss of his help for so long a period. In this case it would better for him to stay with his father for a year or two for, as the Indian Industrial Commission have said: "It is important to remember that theoretical training is doubly valuable when given to a student who has in his mind a definite picture of the conditions under which it will be applied." This period must not be long enough to allow him to form rooted bad habits, or to risk wholly losing his hardly acquired powers of reading and writing. These might be kept up by interesting forms of reading, etc., in night schools (e.g., reading explanatory sentences thrown on a lantern screen in the course of a series of pictures). When big enough he would enter the vocational elementary school and, having polished up his three r's, would be given skill and knowledge to some degree in advance of his father's standard which he himself would by this time have almost reached. In this way agriculture and industry would be continually receiving fresh stimuli from well trained recruits. The nature of these vocational institutions is discussed in the next chapter.

72. It may be that a boy may win a scholarship at the top of the lower primary school, or that his parents may have enough money and goodwill to send him further up the "cultural" or general branch of the national system into the middle classes (see Diagram I, on page 21) after passing the lower primary school examination. Here he will complete his elementary education and will be able to choose once more between a vocational completing, or a general cultural course. It is not necessary to follow him further. Diagram I makes plain what is intended in the system. The general idea is that each school stage shall be definitely linked with some vocational course of training.

73. School areas.—It has been shown that a properly co-ordinated national system of education is needed, of which the function of each part should be clearly understood. The size and nature of the schools in the lower primary part of the system now call for determination. At present the average size of the primary school in Bengal is 30 children. They are mainly staffed by one teacher who has to teach children at every stage of progress at one time. All rural educational systems suffer to some extent from disadvantages of this kind. In some countries they are overcome by the organisation of transport, or boarding arrangements and so forth. In Bengal we can only count upon a small amount of water transport and nothing else, so that our system must be such as to allow of a child walking daily to school. The Education Act contemplates boys of 6 to 10 years of age walking up to one mile. Some, even girls, do this now, but in the majority of cases half a mile is considered about as much as can reasonably be expected in the climatic conditions of the plains of Bengal. School areas comprised in circles of half a mile radius are taken as our standard here, allowance being made for the existence of impassable barriers. The extreme case is the child of six years who is half a mile in a direct line from the school. Most of the children will be more than six years of age and will live nearer to the school than half a mile's distance.

74. In thickly populated industrial towns where there is much traffic on the roads much smaller circles can be taken if it can be shown that within each enough children of primary school age are to be found to form an effective school; but even in such towns the multiplication of schools can easily be overdone. Howrah, for instance, has 87 boys' primary schools where 17 could be made to meet all requirements. In Cossipore-Chitpur, here are no less than 15 schools within a radius of a quarter of a mile, and yet only half the children within that circle are at school. The tradition of the country with regard to primary schools is that they should be quite small and close to everyone's door. The mother likes to watch her little son from behind her purdah, and to see him practically arrive at the school. It is contended, with doubtful correctness, that in a small school the teacher can get to know all the children better than in a large one. A patron who "founds" a primary school, and possibly lends a shed or verandah for it, likes to feel that it is his school, and enjoys his power over the teacher who often acts as private tutor to his children, or renders some other small services in consideration of receiving free board. Further, special religious ideas are sometimes embodied in a particular school, and it is felt that these would be swamped in a larger and more mixed institution. All these considerations have some force and have been duly weighed before the policy of small schools has been set aside. Some such schools must necessarily exist, but generally speaking, they belong to a simple, leisured past, and all concerned will have to come to the point that it is not the past, but the anxious present and the doubtful future that we have to face.

75. The principle of concentration.—In Diagram II (on page 26) will be found two figures which are intended to assist in the comparison of a large school with a smaller one. It is not contended, or even hoped, that schools of 300 can be brought into being everywhere, though a primary school exists in Zinzira Union near Dacca which contains over 300 children. The marvel increases when it is discovered that they are all girls, and rises to amazement when it is realised that they are all Muhammadan girls. It is true that a pious and generous gentleman, Khan Sahib Maulvi Hafez Muhammad Hussain, in addition to many other good works, pays each girl one rupee a month to be present, but that does not alter the fact that such a phenomenon as a school of 300 children is possible even in a rural area in spite of the physical difficulties that have to be overcome. In other countries there is nothing surprising in the existence of a primary school of 300 children, or indeed far larger ones. The general proposition here advanced is that a few large schools are more economical and efficient in many ways than a corresponding number of smaller ones. Referring to Diagram II, attention is invited to the following points of comparison, in each of which the large school has the advantage.

76 Each figure represents a lower primary school of four classes numbered from the bottom upwards. In the large school the lowest class has four parallel sections, the next three, the next two, and the highest one section of 30 children In the smaller school one third of the numbers in the larger school naturally appear in each stage. Forty infants is too large a number for one junior teacher, they have therefore been divided into two sections of 20 each. Infant (b) class has 30 children, class I 20, and class II 10. The comparision should be effected under the following heads:—

(i) Teaching efficiency.—Thirty children may be regarded as an ideal number to be taught by one teacher provided they are all at the same stage of progress. This is fulfilled in each of the 10 sections of the larger school. In the smaller school teaching power is wasted in the two sections of the Infant (a), class, while classes I and II must be taken at the same time by one teacher whose attention is divided between them. From a purely educational point of view the advantage rests with the larger school.

(ii) Number of teachers.—In the larger school each section can be given one teacher making a total of ten teachers. In the smaller school, even after combining two classes under one person, four teachers are required, or 12 teachers in three schools of 100 as compared with 10 in one school of 300.

(iii) Recurring cost per child.—A school of 300 boys will need to be controlled by a good teacher. A well trained Normal School man, a trained Matriculate or even an Intermediate passed man can be found for Rs. 40. Allowing for a Headmaster on Rs. 40, 3 teachers each on Rs. 25, 3 each on Rs. 20 and 3 juniors each on Rs. 15, and allowing Rs. 30 for contingencies, menials and prizes, the total monthly expenditure would be Rs. 250, or Rs. 3,000 per annum. This works out at Rs. 10 per child educated. The smaller school would have a less qualified headmaster. Allowing him Rs. 30 with three assistants on Rs. 25, Rs. 20 and Rs. 15 respectively, with Rs. 10 for contingencies and menials, the monthly cost is Rs. 100, or Rs. 1,200 per annum. The cost per boy educated is therefore Rs. 12. This shows a loss of Rs. 2 per boy as compared with the larger school. (It should be noted that even this higher cost is substantially lower than the average in the Bombay Presidency, see Table II, page 17).

(iv) Sites and buildings.—It is cheaper to acquire a few somewhat larger sites than a large number of small ones. It is also certainly cheaper to build and equip a small number of larger buildings than a corresponding number of small ones. The outside of the plinth, the outer walls and the spread of the roof being proportionately cheaper in the former.

(v) Administration.—An inspecting officer spends proportionately less time in travelling when visiting a small number of large schools, and a greater proportion of his time can be devoted to an actual examination of the work of the teachers and pupils. If the teachers were paid fixed salaries or stipends instead of grants-in-aid the subordinate inspecting staff would save much time and labour in the preparation of bills. From the administrative point of view therefore the large school has great advantages.

(vi) Special requirements.—In schools containing several sections of the lower classes it is easier to arrange for special requirements, such as the teaching of the Quoran, the Hindu Classics, or of the Bible, while the better staff employed in the large school would be able to give instruction in English and other difficult subjects at the top of the school.

(vii) Training.—Where there are several members of a staff the absence of one for training causes far less disturbance to the work of the school, than when one of two, or even the only one has to be taken away.

(viii) Future compulsion.—Lastly, looking forward to the time when compulsion will be applied, concentration gives us the great advantage of a comparatively small number of centralised school areas in which compulsion can be much more easily effected than with a large number of unorganized pathsalas and maktabs.

It is fully realized that these arguments for concentration have greater force in the case of municipal than in non-municipal areas, but the principle applies in rural districts to a very large extent. In many villages there are several small schools where there might be one large, well staffed institution, and an effort towards concentration should always be made in working out systems for Union Board areas.

77. Method of applying policy.—We have seen that two main principles are necessary for building up a national system of elementary education for Bengal. The firts is co-ordination among its parts, the object of each of which is to be clearly defined; and the second is the concentration of the largest number of children in the smallest possible number of schools, with possibly an upward limit of 300 children per school. A third principle which needs to be observed is that of the proper distribution of the schools, This will vary very widely according to the geographical conditions which have so large a determining effect upon the density of the population of each locality. The dry regions of Midnapore are quite different from the water-logged regions of the Sunderbunds, and from the mighty hills of Darjeeling.

in some parts the population straggles along both banks of a river where the ground is comparatively high. the crossing of the stream forming a serious obstacle in the way of concentration; in others at certain times of the year the hamlets are seen standing out like islands in a wide stretch of water. In some parts there cluster crowds of labourers in " lines " or " bustees," in others single families are dotted over a plain that reaches to the horizon.

78. All this shows how vain are paper calculations based on considerations such as that of the number of schools per square mile. In distributing schools we should leave severely alone all places that lack population, even if the land is cheap, and put the schools in centres of population so that every family has a school within half a mile in a direct line. In this distribution we must also make allowance for impassible barriers. The procedure is simple in practice whether for municipal or union board areas:—

(a) On a map of the area all uninhabited parts should be shaded out leaving populated areas plain.

(b) Impassable barriers should be noted and marked in blue pencil, and, having regard to these, the populated area should be covered with circles each of a half mile radius. Each circle constitutes a " school area."

(c) The centre of the circle is the spot in the neighbourhood of which must be sought the site for the school. It must be examined to see whether land is available near at hand, whether it is suitable for a school, and what it would cost.

(d) It is now necessary to determine how many boys of primary school age of all classes and creeds are to be found in each school area. If this number exceeds 300, a subdivision of the area will have to be made with a view to the special needs of the locality. If the number is not more than 300 a decision should be made as to the number for which a building is necessary.

(e) A decision must next be reached as to the most suitable and economical type of building for the locality, and an estimate made of the cost per square foot of plinth area, and of the necessary equipment.

79. The greatest care is required in doing this work as these school areas should be fixed practically for all time. Every further advance in standard, and all expenditure of public for elementary education should be considered almost exclusively in relation to these school areas with their central national schools, and the schools with which they are co-ordinated. The buildings so erected should be used for as many public purposes as possible. Girls' schools could be held in them in the early morning and adult schools at night. They could be used for meetings and lectures by the officers of various departments connected with social welfare.

80. The method outlined above met with the unanimous approval of the recent Conference of non-official representatives of the District Boards. It is to be expected that it will be resisted by some of the existing teachers who are conducting schools for their own private interest and who would not be suited by any attempt to bring them under real control in a public system. Most teachers on the other hand would welcome the change which would give them relief from the carking cares of fee collection and the assessment of grants of several kinds.

81. It is sometimes found on making these arrangements that small patches of population cannot be included within any of the school areas of a particular locality. In such cases small schools could be established for the infant sections, the boys walking rather more than half a mile when they are big enough. Such small isolated schools in poor places might possibly be given grants to enable them to survive, but they should only be encouraged when really necessary. A population of 500 people, or a school roll of 35 might be taken as the minimum for the establishment of a public primary school. In the next chapter the religious and certain other social difficulties connected with the scheme are discussed.

82. Before leaving the subject of the systematization and co-ordination of schools it will be well to refer to its effect upon the middle and high schools. The net having been spread over the whole country, there will certainly be an increase in the numbers going on to the middle classes for the continuation of their elementary education on the cultural side. Some of the weaker high schools, which are found to be unnecessary in a co-ordinated system, might be converted into middle schools, and the three high classes (Diagram I, page 21) centralized for as wide an area as possible. New high schools would be opened in convenient places where necessary. Some of these centralized high schools would have the four intermediate college classes added to them, and some would remain in loose association with one or more middle schools; but the division for administrative purposes would be between the middle and high classes, and not between the high and the intermediate. This point is elaborated in Chapter VIII. The ultimate aim and, it is to be feared, somewhat remote hope, would be gradually to raise all primary schools to the full elementary status by the addition of middle classes.

83. Examples of schemes worked out in detail illustrating the application of these ideas to (a) Howrah, a thickly populated municipality; (b) Rangpur, a typical mofussil municipality—the first in Bengal to adopt the scheme and apply for permission to levy a cess; and (c) Subhadya Union Board area will be found in Appendices C and D, respectively.

CHAPTER IV.

Religious and Other Special Requirements.

84. Popular wishes.—It has been shewn in the preceding Chapter that, if efficiency is to be attained in the elementary schools, a national system will have to be organised. This will have to be so constructed as to meet the reasonable requirements of the people, and not the people forced into conformity with a paper scheme. It has to be remembered that especially in India the religious requirements are among those which claim the foremost place and, in the case of some sections of the people, the very first, if not the only desideratum of an educational system. It would surely be carrying discretion too far to decline to attempt to include in a national system of primary schools for Bengal that which very many of the people most desire to see in them.

85. Recognising how little a foreigner can know of the deepest emotions of another nation, one's attitude in taking up the question at all must be one of apology; but to refuse to deal with it would be pusillanimous in view of its very great importance. The reproach that the schools are "godless" is a common one. It is easy to meet it in argument, but this is not a case for argument; it is a matter in which the strongest and deepest feelings of parents towards their children on the one hand and their God on the other are concerned.

86. A first examination disposes one to recommend separate systems of education for the greater communities. The difficulties of Muhammadans in taking part in a general system of education have been sympathetically discussed by the Sadler Commission (Report, Vol. I, Chap. VI, page 143). The tables quoted by them are reproduced below:—

Chittagong	30·3	·5	4·6	·04
Rajshahi	15·4	·2	4·4	·02

87. These figures are as old as 1911. The figures for the census this year (1921) will probably show a large improvement on the Musalman side, but they are not yet available. The proportion of Musalmans in primary schools was 51·4 per cent. in 1918-19, so that at this stage of education they have nearly reached their proper percentage according to their proportion of the general population, which is 52·7. Much of the primary school teaching of Musalmans is done in small maktabs in which the secular part of the teaching is usually very far from satisfactory. The number of maktabs in 1919 was 11,120; 8,312 being for boys, and 2,808 for girls. In these were 236,808 boys and 73,236 girls. Special grants are made for the benefit of these schools, with a view to making the aid given to them from District Boards 50 per cent. higher than that for ordinary primary schools. The geographical difficulties in the way of concentrating children in large schools, which have already been mentioned, are intensified by this religious difference. Yet it cannot be ignored. The school masters are often officers of the local mosques from which they draw a part of their remuneration, and they like to be near the mosque, for their ordinary religious duties are connected with it, and it is to the mosque that their clients come to see them. We should endeavour to make use of these men as far as can be arranged consistently with sound and regular work in the public schools. They should be encouraged to lead the Moslem boys in their regular daily religious exercises. The problem before us is this. We desire to give the Musalman children every facility to receive instruction in the prayers and tenets connected with their faith, and to exercise the observances which are incumbent upon them, such as praying once during school hours and, in especial, on Fridays. We also wish them to receive instruction through their reading books which shall not merely avoid giving religious offence but which, in part, shall have a definitely Moslem character. At the same time we wish these children to reap the secular benefits which flow from a well-ordered system of schools under efficient teachers.

88. In this connexion Resolution of the Governor of Bengal in Council, No. 1227 Education dated 3rd August 1916, is interesting:—"The development of the country, in political as well as in other directions, is dependent on the uniform educational progress of the two main constituents of the population (Hindu and Muhammadan) and on their equal capacity to take advantage both of the opportunities now open to them and of the fuller opportunities which may be available hereafter. The Government of India are anxious that all reasonable facilities should be provided for the education of Muhammadans, and the Governor in Council is convinced that it is in the interests both of the Government and the people as a whole that the Muhammadans who, in spite of recent efforts, have still much lost ground to make up, should receive such special facilities as may be necessary to enable them to benefit as fully as the Hindus from the educational institutions which are maintained wholly or partially out of public funds."

89. The Advisory Committee for Muhammadan Education which met in 1914-15 (Report, page 16) recommended that it was "undesirable to develop further a system of education for this community separate from that of other communities. The existing systems should be carefully examined to see where they fail to satisfy members of the community, and necessary modifications should be introduced." If the recommendation of my Report is accepted and it is decided to construct a complete national system of schools, the present is obviously the time to comply with this recommendation. The application of compulsion under the Act will be extremely difficult if this course is not taken. What then is the solution proposed?

90. So far as Moslems are concerned, it might be possible for them to arrange for their children to receive the necessary religious instruction in the early morning at the mosque or elsewhere, but they would, in the majority of cases, prefer that provision should also be made in the school. A reference to Diagram II on page 26 and to section (vi) of paragraph 76 above will show that in the larger schools it will be possible to have maktab sections of the lower classes, where this instruction is of the greatest importance. The number of such sections would depend upon the proportion of Moslem boys in the class. In these the Holy Quoran, the prayers, etc., could be taught and special, additional or alternative Moslem readers used. Enough qualified Muhammadan teachers would be employed to meet this need. If these were not available it might be possible to arrange for a special teacher to come from the mosque for one period a day (to be combined with the interval for prayer and recreation), to give the necessary instruction. In small schools the matter would be more difficult, but it could be met in this latter way if there was not a Moslem teacher on the staff. The special maktab grants that are now given might be used in giving allowances to visiting teachers of the kind here suggested.

91. The same arrangements might apply to other religions. I found a good many non-Christian people desirous of having Christian teaching for their children. I even found Hindu teachers giving instruction not only in stories from the Holy Bible, but actually teaching the Catechism of a particular Christian sect. Certain Hindu groups are also desirous of developing religious teaching suitable to school conditions, while many are anxious for their children to become familiar with the great Hindu religious classics.

92. There are certain elements of undoubted danger and difficulty in this proposal but, in view of the great advantages that would accrue from its success, it appears to be well worth a trial. Rules would have to be made to prevent the exhibition of religious symbols, or the use of sounds that might offend the feelings of others, or interfere with the orderly conduct of the school. Some one would have to be definitely responsible to judge of such matters whose authority would be final in any dispute, and to whom any innovation would have to be previously referred. The authority of the head master over the religious teacher while in the school would have to be vigorously maintained.

93. Certain municipalities were found quite willing to approve the conduct of one or more of their municipal schools by missionary societies on condition that certain sections should be organised for the benefit of children whose parents might object to their receiving dogmatic instruction. I found individual missionaries quite prepared to fall in with this proposal, but it would have to be referred to their own authorities before it could be regarded as a definite arrangement.

94. In most parts of the country I found the people broad-minded or democratic enough to have no objection to the mixing of children of different classes and creeds on the same benches, and I well remember a very distinguished and revered orthodox Brahmin Judge of the High Court telling me that one of the valued experiences of his life had been that of sitting beside, and competing with the son of an oilman in the pathsala of his childhood. In some places I found some objection. Where the feeling is strong it should be met either by the founding by the objectors of private schools wholly paid for by themselves, or possibly by arranging different sections of the school classes to meet the demand. Where vernaculars other than Bengali are required the same solutions may be applied.

95. The provision and conduct of primary education (a) on tea-gardens and (b) in mills, or districts populated by mill workers, constitute separate problems. The first has not been touched during the short time at my disposal, and the second is involved with so many other conditions connected with factory control that at this stage I am not prepared to offer any definite suggestions regarding the matter. The Education Act provides for introducing compulsion for boys of 6 to 10 years of age and the Factory Act lays down conditions for the employment of children of 9 to 14 years of age. The two Acts need to be considered in connexion with each other, and with the general question of the organisation of crêches and primary schools, as well as that of the provision of night schools for young adults, and their technical education. It is easy to make legal provision regarding children of special ages, but it is extremely difficult to make that provision effective in a country where individual births are not registered.

CHAPTER V.

Vocational Education.

96. Education and Industry.—The Sadler Commission made a careful and sympathetic study of the Bengali student with a mass of evidence before them which had been collected over a long period. They showed the qualities in which he excels, but also examined the characteristics which were said to be a cause of weakness (Vol. I, p. 121), " . . . the Bengali student is judged by some of his fellow-countrymen who have made a life-long study of his powers to be deficient in the capacity for complex co-ordination, whether in the sphere of thought or of action. These observers detect in him a certain degree of weakness in the grasp of complex factors, in their adjustment to one another and in keeping them in equilibrium, be it in the study of a complicated intellectual problem or in the maintenance of an organisation. This defect is one of the impediments to the progress of the Bengali not only (though there are conspicuous exceptions) in the study of such subjects as sociology and economics, but also in complex industrial undertakings, in the wide but still too much neglected field of municipal enterprise, and in the responsible duties of commercial management upon a large scale." The Commission described this as a " most difficult problem " but they did not despair of the solution of the economic problem largely through a sound system of education: " By waging war against ignorance, the Swiss have alleviated poverty as well. But they succeeded in doing so only by thinking out at each stage what education should aim at, what kind of teaching it should provide, and how it may combine training for livelihood with training for life " (Report, Vol. IV, p. 8).

97. The Bengal District Administration Commission of 1913-14 stated that " in the 17th and 18th centuries the Gangetic Delta was a most important centre of trade and industry. It was perhaps owing to this very reason that the effects of Western competition were so severely felt in Bengal. Its inhabitants have not yet been able to adapt themselves to the new methods, while the ease and certainty with which investments can be made in landed property, combined with the fertility of the soil, on the one hand, and the free and extensive opportunities for the acquisition of a Western literary education on the other, have turned their energies in a less profitable direction."

98. Mr. W. H. Moreland, C.S.I., C.I.E., formerly Director of Industries and Agriculture in the United Provinces, has recently written an article on Indian poverty and its causes. He thinks that at the end of the XVIth century India was almost as rich as she was before the war. but that the distribution of wealth was different, that is, the rich were richer and the poor were poorer. The XVIIth century was a period of impoverishment, through administrative exploitation which was also the historical cause of hoarding the precious metals. This grew worse in the XVIIIth century and probably reached its worst point between 1750 and 1800. At the beginning of the XIXth century India was desperately poor, but from that time improvement began through a removal of the former cause of poverty and the security of the people. If this is a true statement of the case it would account for the extraordinary power of the instinctive dislike of taxation which has been the suggestion of all their circumstances to the people over long periods in the now fortunately somewhat distant past. This can only be overcome by propaganda and general enlightenment, any new taxation being balanced as far as possible by results that are immediately visible.

99. Mr. Moreland thinks that " India must aim at spending crores where she now spends lakhs, and even that will not be the end," . . " to spend more you must earn more, and in order to earn more you must find out why you are earning so little." The chief reasons, he thinks, are that capital is scarce, and labour inefficient. Indeed it appears to be true that, in spite of its low wages, Indian labour is very expensive. The people are less accustomed to " cutting edges, nuts and bolts " than to a " stick and string régime " owing to the weak state of the iron industry in former days. " Agricultural reform, co-operation, development of industries . . .

stimuli to the productive energies of the people and their ultimate result will depend less on the material facilities which they offer, important as these are, than on the psychological influence which they bring to bear." In fact Mr. Moreland is of opinion that " India stands in urgent need of . . . what almost amounts to an entirely new system of primary education " or, on our definition, elementary education.

100. The Indian Industrial Commission (Report, p. 96) declared that " the evidence tendered by employers was almost universally in favour of labour, both skilled and unskilled, that had at least received a primary education," its absence with " the prevailing low standard of comfort, and the effects of preventible disease " being the cause of inefficiency in the Indian workman. " The Commission expresses itself in favour of universal primary education . . . but education of a technical kind is also required, and the method of instruction to be followed will vary for workers in organised and for workers in cottage industries, the latter of whom, it may be remarked, considerably exceed the former in numbers." A reference may also be made to the proceedings of the Board of Agriculture for December 1917 [Appendix H (a) of this Report] which led to the founding of two experimental agricultural middle schools in Bengal.

101. From whatever point of view the general social problem which is before the people of Bengal is approached, it is clear that the organisation of a new and efficient system of primary schools is fundamental. It is also plain that to stop there would be worse than useless. The system of primary education must lead directly to specialised training in agriculture and industry with a view to making the greatest and best use of the human material of the country, to keeping some of its best brains fully and congenially occupied in agricultural occupations, and to drafting the surplus population to the towns, and that to proper conditions of life and work with opportunities of developing their powers to the fullest possible extent. This report has nothing to do with the higher branches of vocational training, except merely to indicate the manner in which they can be linked to the general system. The question before us in this chapter is how vocational education can best be provided at the elementary stage.

102. What is Being Done.—At present Government is experimenting at Chinsurah and Dacca with two agricultural middle schools which have been placed on Government farms under the Agricultural Department [vide Appendix H (c)]. The buildings at the former place are almost completed but the school is not yet open. At Dacca the school is open. The head master told me that before it was opened there were between 300 and 400 applications for admission, and that since it had been opened in about five months there had been over three thousand applications for the 30 places in the school. It is important that these schools should not be swamped with boys from classes which are not real agricultural working people, and that every endeavour should be used to get the pupils back to real agricultural work on the land, bringing new knowledge and skill to the fund of local efficiency. The experiment will, of course, receive very careful attention in every phase of its development, so that its results will be available for an extension of this class of school to other districts if such a course is found to be worth while. I was so unfortunate as to miss Mr. Maclean who is supervising the experiment at Dacca, so that I am unable to speak of the matter in detail, but it is clear that the future elementary agricultural school must be on a less costly scale than this one.

103. Regarding industrial training, it is plain that there are many kinds of technical instruction of a low grade that can be given to youths if only they are literate, and that this instruction increases the intelligence and exactitude of their work in a very great degree, making them worth far more in wages, and enabling their employers to effect economy in supervision and to turn out better work. All the evidence that I have been able to collect supports this, but the matter need not be laboured as the Report of the Industrial Commission on the point is conclusive. What arrangements ought to be made for this instruction is difficult to set down in general terms, for many industries prefer to give the necessary instruction in connexion with their own workshops, etc. All these loose ends are of very great value; and the individuality and initiative of employers who work out schemes for their own employees in their own special spheres constitute perhaps the most valuable elements in the instruction given.

104. One example taken from the Report of the University Commission (Vol III, p. 116.) will suffice to show what is meant:—" An excellent elementary industrial school which prepares some of its students for mining work is maintained by the East Indian Railway Company under the superintendence of Mr. G. C. Lathbury on the Giridih coal-field. The Company maintains on this coal-field four grades of schools—elementary, lower primary, upper primary, and industrial—for the benefit of the children of its workmen and miners. Selected boys from primary schools are sent to the industrial school which is attached to the colliery workshop. The course includes drawing, mechanics, mathematics, and the properties of metals; it lasts for three years and part of the time is spent in practical work in the shops. All the education is in the vernacular. There are fifty students and two teachers. The students are paid one anna three pies a day with an annual increase of an anna a day provided they pass the examinations and receive a satisfactory report. After passing the final examination the pupils enter the workshops, whence some of them are sent as fitter-assistants to the coal mines. They are subsequently promoted to the post of fitters-in-charge with the pay of a rupee a day. The training at the industrial school is in mechanical engineering rather than in mining. The work is elementary but on its lines it seems most successful and useful."

105. Bearing in mind then that this is only technical work at the elementary stage (see Diagram I on page 21), it is for consideration whether there should be any attempt made to gather up the different lines of work and to standardise them for purposes of certification. The suggestion does not for a moment imply any limitation of initiative or control in the arrangements made by special firms for technical instruction, but only seeks to guarantee an added standard of general education and to assist employers in producing the results they themselves desire in the most effective manner by putting an advisory and co-ordinating machinery at their disposal, and by supplying them with suitable and willing human material from the country under properly regulated safeguards.

106. Beyond these spheres of individual effort for producing very special results there are more general forms of training which can be provided in institutions controlled by public authority. Technical education at the elementary stage for artisans is given at the following places:—

(1) Sibpur (58 pupils).—Artisan classes in smithy, carpentry, fitting, turning, etc.
(2) Dacca (81 pupils).— do.
(3) Serampore (91 pupils).—Weaving, with design and analysis of cloth, drawing and dyeing.
(4) Bankura (40 pupils).
(5) Cox's Bazar (28 pupils).
(6) Malda (60 pupils).
(7) Pabna (40 pupils).
(8) Tangail (61 pupils).
} ditto.
(9) Bogra (45 pupils).—Carpentry, blacksmithy and tinsmithy.
(10) Rangpur (33 pupils).—Carpentry, and blacksmithy.
(11) Barisal (36 pupils).—Carpentry, blacksmithy, and tinsmithy.
(12) Khulna (11 pupils).—Carpentry.
(13) Comilla (57 pupils).—Carpentry, blacksmithy, tinsmithy, and moulding.
(14) Nadia (C.M.S. Hatchapra Industrial School).
(15) Faridpur (Australian Board of Baptist Foreign Missions).
(16) Chittagong.
(17) Kalimpong (lace 43, embroidery 38, weaving 40, carpentry 32, tailoring 17, gardening 2).
(18) Kalimpong Branch Schools (lace 59, embroidery 15).
(19) Baranagore.—Moulding, fitting, etc.

The general comment of the Director of Public Instruction (Quinquennial Review, 1912-13 to 1916-17, p. 91) on these institutions is: " Most of the artisan schools are not very successful," though he makes certain exceptions which he attributes to the presence of " organising capacity." I was told that classes in iron and wood work had been started at Burdwan, but that not even all the scholarships generously provided by the Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja of Burdwan had been applied for by pupils, yet I was informed the next day at Suri that, in the Birbhum District (which adjoins Burdwan), there is a great dearth of carpenters and iron workers on account of the dying out from curious social causes of the castes who carry on these crafts.

107. All these institutions are working away quietly, but I have not been able to discover that any one concerned with them is very enthusiastic about their success, except perhaps at Sibpur, Dacca, Serampore, Faridpur, Baranagore, and Kalimpong. The headmasters of several of the schools at district headquarters with whom I have had conversations do not appear to think very much about their work as having a definite part and aim in the social economy of the district. Small as are the total numbers that are annually turned out from these schools and limited as their activities necessarily are, they cannot be regarded as solving the problem we are now considering, viz., that of giving point and finish to the training of primary school children

108. In present conditions boys will not come forward indiscriminately for technical instruction. Enthusiasts have airily spoken and written to me about the setting up of technical schools in practically every village. This must be bluntly described as blind optimism if, indeed, optimism it really is. It is utterly impossible from a financial point of view and the teachers simply do not exist. If the boys were trained we should not know where to employ them, and to glut the market with trained carpenters would be almost as foolish as to glut it with trained pleaders. It is difficult to find a point of departure from which to approach the problem. In the mofussil are to be met officers of the Education Department (on the general and technical sides) and of the Agricultural, the Industrial, the Sanitary, the Veterinary and the Co-operative Societies Departments, all keen on their own work and often, it is to be feared, in proportion to that very keenness, raising anxieties in the minds of the people and of the district board and municipal authorities that their activities will have only one result—taxation of one kind or another. This fear has been explained in paragraph 98 above and is discussed further in the chapter on finance, but it may be mentioned here that it is very real and, combined with the natural conservatism of the people, and their ignorance of the aims of these departments, constitutes a serious obstacle to the full development and success of the work of any of them.

109. What appears to be needed is a concentration for the present in some part of the area over which all these forms of activity are spread. Energy is unfruitful at all points unless it can be applied in sufficient quantity at any particular point to accomplish its purpose at that point. Bengal is too vast a country to be grappled with all at once. If ideas can be focussed and made effective at a few places their acceptance at others will naturally follow. Energy applied in a form too dissipated to create the desired effect is merely a source of irritation. If this view be accepted then it follows that in a District no attempt will be made to scatter agricultural and industrial schools broadcast, though this may become possible at some future time when the way to such a policy has been felt by experiment, but that they will rather be few, large and efficient, and that they will be so situated as to be most easily accessible to all the people.

110. The following proposals are put forward with very great diffidence and hesitation, and with a feeling that the whole matter needs much discussion amongst representatives of all those departments of Government which, for want of a better term, may be called social development departments. In the main they are comprised among the subjects " transferred " to the new Ministers under the Reform Scheme.

111. It would be necessary in dealing with any District selected as the area for an experiment to secure the co-operation of the District, Local and Union Boards, as well as the Municipalities, to the fullest possible extent. The willing services of all the executive officers of Government would also be a vital necessity to success. Each Department would bring to the common table the results of its own investigations into the needs of the District and its proposals as to how they could best be met. A united programme of social development could then be deliberately formed, and organised propaganda instituted. Such a combined campaign intelligently conducted would in itself have an immense educative effect in the District. The propagandists would very soon require a centre from which to go out and to which to return, and to which they could invite for demonstration and short courses of instruction anyone and everyone who might show evidences of a progressive tendency.

112. Social Welfare Centres.—Over 70 per cent. of the population of Bengal is concerned in agriculture so that the foundation of the life of the country is laid in this occupation. It would be natural therefore to make it basal in our plan. Government already has farms in different districts with a staff already at work in research, demonstration, seed distribution, and so forth. On two of these there are already agricultural schools. Associated with agriculture are certain essential trades, such as smithy, rough carpentry and building, and wheel-wrighting on the apparatus side; and oils, sugar refining, and dyes on the produce side, as well as many cottage industries such as rope and string making, netting, spinning, weaving, dyeing, basket making and sowing, which can be followed by the agriculturist and his family in their spare time. Instruction in these might well be added. They would be very useful in themselves and would be a means of combating the "disastrous contentment" of Indian workers, which tends to induce idleness as soon as a little prosperity comes, and the employment of hired labour in place of their own. And if these occupations are added it would probably be economical also to centralise elementary instruction for the District in the following:—metal work, steam fitting, cabinet making, painting, shoe-making, tanning, harness work, and pottery, or such of these as may be found to be desirable. At Dacca many of these are, or might be dealt with by the School of Engineering, and the distance between the farm and this school is not so enormous as to make co-operation impossible. It would, nevertheless, be worth while to consider the advisability of retaining the higher forms of instruction at the Engineering School, and of removing the lower ones to the Farm.

113. The agents of the Departments of Agriculture and Industry would have quarters at the spot. There might be a District Board workshop in which all the rougher District Board work would be done as far as possible. To these might be added the quarters of the agents of the Sanitary, Co-operative Credit, Education, and Veterinary Departments with the offices, laboratories, etc. of each. A teachers' institution would also be added and the teachers trained in the midst of activities directly related to the life of the people whose children they are to teach. Here too it should be arranged for them to see, as a demonstration, the working of a boarding and day school. The question of the practising of teachers is dealt with in another chapter and need not be discussed here. A printing press (with apprentices) would be a most useful adjunct in the service of the District Board generally, and would be extremely valuable in the multifarious propaganda work of the whole institution, which might be called the Social Welfare Centre for the District.

114. That this is not a wholly fanciful or fantastic idea can be demonstrated. The monasteries and convents of the middle ages were in fact just such centres. A picture and a plan of a twelfth century monastery lies before me. Besides the church, the refectory, the dormitories, the lavatories, the rooms for study, the stables, the granaries, the abbot's quarters and the guest houses for rich and poor, there are found the almonry and the poor school, the cloister, the scriptorium for the writing and illuminating of books, the Chapter house or commitee room, the "parlour" or common room, the bakehouse, the mill, the infirmary, the garden, and the fish ponds, while all round was the farm from which the monastery drew its living. Some of the monks were engaged in farming, some in building and some in other various arts and crafts of the day, and in teaching them to others. Principal Parry, of the Carmarthen Training College, says:—"The monasteries also played an important part in the economic development of the country. At times, and in certain localities, the economic condition of the people seems to have sunk to a low ebb. Bede tells us that "very often forty or fifty men being spent with want, would go together to some precipices or to the seashore and there, hand in hand, perish by the fall or be swallowed up by the waves." From the earliest times industrial activity had been a feature of monastic life. Speaking of St. Basil, his biographer tells us that " by the labour of his monks over wide desert places, hopeless sterility gave place to golden harvests and abundant vintages." Manual labour was a common employment in the English monasteries. The builders of the monasteries also necessarily introduced new arts into the country. Thus Benedict Biscop brought over masons and glaziers from France. Lamps and vessels for the use of the Church were made, and the craft taught to the Northumbrians. The knowledge of the art of fishing by means of nets, which apparently was not known in some parts, was introduced by the monks." It was thus that civilization was preserved, spread and developed in Europe, and it is thus that it is still being developed in parts of Africa and elsewhere by bodies of monks.

115. But this kind of work is not the monopoly of religious fraternities. American work among the " poor whites " and the negroes of the southern States as well as among the Filipinos has been along similar and very successful lines, and missionaries and others are touching the same line of activity in various parts of India. The report of the recent Missionary Commission on " Village Schools in India " is of great interest in this connexion. Even if this does not carry conviction regarding the practicability of the scheme we have here in Bengal at our doors this very thing growing up at Nowgong and the results of the work that has been done there appear to me to be of possibly unrivalled importance in the social development of the Province.

116. For this reason and in order to give a concrete illustration of the sort of thing that has already to a large extent succeeded, though in perhaps exceptionally favourable circumstances, I have re-printed in Appendix I. the following papers :—

(a) Extracts from an article by Rai Romesh Chandra Dutta Bahadur on " The Nowgong Ganja Cultivators Co-operative Society, Limited " in the District of Rajshahi, taken from the Bengal, Behar & Orissa Co-Operative Journal for September & November 1918.

(b) The substance of an address by Mr. Donovan I.C.S., Registrar of Co-operative Societies, Bengal, to the members of the same Society, taken from the January 1919 number of the same paper.

(c) A copy of a note by Mr. Donovan showing the direction the development of the work is taking.

(d) An extract from the Annual Report of the Managing Committee of the Society, 1920-21.

117. The first of these interesting documents has been included to afford a glimpse of the realities of life among the ignorant peasantry and of their helplessness, so long as they are unaided, in the hands of unscrupulous exploiters. The second shows the clearest ground for hope through intelligent and earnest propaganda work and organisation. The third illustrates the point upon which I am laying such stress, namely, the intimate nature of the connexion between the various parts of this single social problem of the development of the masses. And the last shows how wisely the new found resources of the people are likely to be applied. There is a guru-training school at Nowgong at present separated from the rest of the good work that is going on. At the invitation of Mr. Donovan I am hoping shortly to accompany him to Nowgong, so that I can look into the educational side of the question.

118. In the proposed Social Welfare Centres would be taught not merely skill in and knowledge of the vocations followed for profit, but also the uses of leisure, the means of recreation, temperance, vaccination (by school teachers), dispensary work, the care of children and home nursing, insurance, the constitution of Government and its meaning for the people. The real principles of self-government would be learned through the study of the co-operative purchase of raw materials and machinery, the latter either on the hire-purchase system or otherwise, and the co-operative sale of the completed goods; also by the repayment of stipends and partial support of the institution by the products of the industry and prudence of those connected with it, somewhat on the principles advocated by Captain Petavel, who is now carrying on research in this matter, and by Mr. Barber at Faridpur. Here the right sort of books and leaflets for the schools and for propaganda work would be produced and printed; and hence would start peripatetic weaving and similar schools. Here too would be a lending library connected with all the systematised schools, and sets of magic lantern slides for lectures. In the Social Welfare Centre too would be labour organizations, connected with organised industries in the towns, offering information of a reliable kind to landless or very poor men in the villages, and bringing employers into touch with sources of labour supply.

119. At this stage it is impossible to go into details of finance for this scheme. Before this could be done estimates would have to be contributed by the experts of several departments as well as those of various missionary and co-operative societies and the growth of the whole institution would be very gradual. Many economies would be possible through the working at close quarters of various departments of the work, e.g., the sanitary with the veterinary, industry with agriculture, etc. As far as the educational part of it is concerned there would be savings from funds now spent at normal, guru-training and industrial schools. On this side of its activities the Social Welfare Centre would need a Teacher Training Institution with:—

(b) An Orphanage, some of the children of which would attend.
(c) A Demonstration, Lower Primary School, with the addition on the one hand of the cultural classes of (d) A Middle School, and on the other of the (e) Semi-Vocational Upper Primary Class or Classes, and (f) An Agricultural Elementary School with hostels, as well as,
(g) An Industrial School with hostels, containing various branches, including one of miscellaneous small industries built up through a careful examination of the local markets to see what goods are in demand with a view to discovering how far it is possible cheaply to substitute local for foreign products. I have seen wooden pen-holders from America and Japan being largely sold at Chandpur, while an article rougher in quality though as good for the purpose is being made a few miles away at Comilla, and but meagrely sold at a much cheaper rate. Buttons of mother-of-pearl and of cocoanut shell, and many other small things that are being developed by the Bengal Home Industries Association would come under this head.

120. A more serious difficulty even than the financing of these Social Welfare Centres would be the finding of the right men to direct and supervise their work. The general problem to be solved could probably be split up into a large number of constituent problems by a conference of representatives of the various departments concerned, together with those of missionary and other agencies that are already at work upon different parts of it. They could then decide upon the kind of man who would be most likely to bring the experiment to a successful issue, where he could be obtained, and how others like him could be produced in the future. It might be necessary in the first place to go out of India for the right man, but on the whole it seems a sounder principle, to send Bengalis away for training rather than to bring outsiders in in ignorance of the language and conditions of the country It is to be strongly urged (i) that a general scheme for the whole province should not be undertaken until the way has been felt by experiment in a very few districts, and (ii) that the whole matter should be kept as closely as possible on a true commercial footing with careful accounts and records kept in every branch of the work.

121. Public opinion would certainly support any attempt to connect vocational instruction in agriculture and industry with primary schools. One indication of this support is to be found in the unanimous resolution of the District Board Conference this year to the effect "that the primary schools be definitely co-ordinated on the one hand with middle and high schools, and on the other with industrial and agricultural schools." The Conference also approved the proposal to utilize the national school system for social welfare in these terms:—"That the proposed school organisation be made to assist in movements for public health, co-operative societies, savings banks, adult education, industry and agriculture as far as possible." If these proposals were adopted, the well-distributed schools of the national system serving the whole population, as proposed in Chapter III above, would become the finger tips of the development departments of Government, the children receiving instruction, the teachers acting at least to some extent as agents and propagandists, the parents being gathered for popular, easy and interesting lectures, and the buildings being used as meeting centres where notices would be posted within easy reach of all. The best children would be drafted on either to neighbouring middle schools or sent as boarders to the Social Welfare Centre of their own District.

CHAPTER VI.

Teachers and Sub-Inspectors.

122. Pay.—The remuneration of teachers in primary schools is deplorably low, lower in many cases than that of the utterly illiterate day labourer. My own observations confirm Mr. West's estimate that the teachers are compelled to earn outside the school at least as much as they earn inside it. There are Government primary school teachers who are paid only Rs. 8 per month, and anything they can get from fees, probably not more than Rs. 3. I have come across case after case of assistants in schools whose total emoluments from the school did not amount to more than Rs. 3 and Rs. 4 a month. The table reproduced below from the Quinquennial Review of Education in Bengal for 1912-13 to 1916-17, page 53, will give some idea of the state of things:

Division.	Public Management.		Private Management.
	Range.	Average	Range.	Average.
1	2	3	4	5
	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.	Rs.
Burdwan Division.	9 to 16	14·5	5 to 25	7·8
Presidency Division excluding Calcutta	8 to 19	10·9	5 to 30	7·8
Calcutta		18·5	10 to 30	10·5
Dacca Division	4 to 17	10·4	4 to 11	7·1
Chittagong Division	5 to 18	8·7	3 to 12	6·7
Rajshahi Division	4 to 18	9·1	4 to 12	7·9

* In Calcutta there was one School under public management with two teachers. The total cost of this school was Rs. 444 for 1916-17.

123. It is impossible for any one to feel very proud of these figures. This Report has nothing to do with Calcutta, but I cannot refrain from mentioning that the "London of the East," the "Second City of the Empire," differs in one striking respect from the first city, and that is in the utter lack of anything in the former that can be described as a faint approximation to adequate provision for primary education or of organised vocational instruction. I mention this because municipal commissioners in the country districts have, on several occasions, perhaps justifiably, expressed the view that Calcutta might be expected to set an example in this matter.

124. The question of remuneration is put first in this chapter on teachers because it is of the first importance. A member of the recent District Board Conference said to me in private conversation (I quote his words verbatim): "We all agree that the schools should be improved but why raise teachers' pay?" The question was a surprise. The teacher is the school and the school is the teacher. I have found teachers drawing less pay than the menial servants in the same school. I have found members of the staffs of training institutions drawing less pay than the subsistence stipends that were regarded as the minimum on which students in the same school could be expected to survive. As prices rise, the work in school, with its miserable pittance, becomes proportionately of less and less importance to the man in whose charge it is; it becomes the place of a little leisure, if not of repose, in the day's struggle. The children of the country are being committed to the care of men who have not enough to eat, or the wherewithal to clothe the women of their families. And if small increments in the grants are made, the result is often not an improvement in the man's position, for the small contributions in fees or in food on which the teacher has had so largely to depend in the past tend to drop off as being less necessary. As prices rise, the people are not more but less inclined to be generous to the teacher. Of the number of teachers who are trained at Government expense a large proportion very wisely go off to other forms of occupation.

125. It is hardly to be wondered at that, bad as things were before, a definite degeneration seems now to have set in. One of the Divisional Inspectors recently wrote to me: "There are many gurus who cannot read or write the matter of Bengali readers correctly. There are again many unacquainted with arithmetic beyond the first two simple rules." In some places the teachers who are staying on in the schools are simply not worth the attempt to educate or train them further, and inspecting officers are wondering if it is possible to get boys from schools direct for training. These may be attracted by the Rs 11 stipends given by Government during training, but when they discover themselves to have benefited by their new education, and that they cannot earn as teachers even what they were drawing as pupils, they will scarcely remain on in the profession, and it is to be hoped that no form of bond that could be devised would hold them to it. The only real hope of procuring and keeping better men lies in the first instance, not in the training school, but in the prospect of a possible livelihood in the primary schools themselves under a proper system of payment and public control, and not under the present aided school plan. The following is a table of qualifications of primary school teachers in Bengal:—

126 Training.—There are at present five Government normal or first grade training schools in Bengal, one in each Division. These train teachers for the middle schools and the middle and lower classes of high schools. They have a long and honourable career behind them, but five times as many teachers are required from them as they are at present turning out, and in the proposals put forward for attaching the training of teachers for each district to the District Social Welfare Centres, it is suggested that primary and middle teachers should be trained together (see paragraphs 113 and 119 above), so that if that proposal were adopted the normal schools would cease to have a separate identity. This is the less to be regretted, as the present accommodation of these institutions leaves much to be desired and their removal from their present sites would, I think I am right in saying, in each case be welcomed by other institutions which need their premises. It is not with middle schools that this report is mainly concerned, so that this question need not be dwelt on further here except to remark that five head masters of normal schools, who are already in the Provincial Educational Service, will be reckoned as in charge of five of the new institutions, one of which will be needed for each district.

127. Teachers in primary schools are trained in guru-training schools. Their history has been lucidly set out in the Director of Public Instruction's letter No. 294, dated the 16th April 1915, to the Government of Bengal. This will be found in Appendix J to this report. Specimens of various schemes for these schools exist in different localities, but the only ones that have any possible prospect of doing good work are those designed by the Hon'ble Mr. Sharp, and which are gradually being built. It is to be noted that the developments of the policy with regard to training schools have all been away from the small inefficient institution and towards larger institutions serving a wider area with a better paid staff. The proposals now being put forward are but a final step in the same direction. Owing to the financial stringency caused by the war the existing reformed scheme has not made as much progress as it would otherwise have done. The present policy is eventually to put one of these new schools in each subdivision. There are 79 subdivisions in Bengal, so that this may be taken as the number of guru-training schools that constitute a complete scheme if we set aside the temporary using of the existing buildings remaining from former attempts to solve the problem. Of the newest ones 22 have been built. Of the oldest type of guru-training school no more need be said. The Director has stated (paragraph 11 of the letter quoted above) that the buildings can be utilized for schools. This is also true of a good many of the somewhat improved later buildings or those of them that are still good enough to be worth considering. It would, however, be a serious matter to adopt a new policy which would result in the abandonment of the latest type, the buildings of which, though of a curious plan, are well built and have cost large sums of money. Each one would have to be considered separately. Some would serve excellently for large primary schools in the proposed new system. Others would meet the need for middle schools and would serve the purpose well. Some might be utilised as much-needed girls' schools, and some might continue to train teachers. There is not much danger of over-providing the Province in this respect.

128. The work of training teachers falls into three parts. First, and in the case of the primary school teachers, most important of all, is the improvement of their own education, including training in regularity, punctuality, physical exercises and games, etc. The standard is deplorably low and the range of their attainments very narrow. The second is their training in professional technique. They must learn to organise a school, to draw up a time-table, to lay down courses of lessons, to classify children, to use a blackboard easily and well, to utilize maps, reading sheets and other items of school apparatus and to understand the different current methods of teaching various subjects, they must comprehend the various registers, and other books that have to be kept. Lastly, they must practise their art under effective criticism and suggestion. The first of these three parts can be taught anywhere. The second to be fully effective needs the presence of a good school for purposes of demonstration, but not necessarily practice. The third constitutes the greatest difficulty.

129. Until recently it has been customary to attach to each guru-training school a "practising school." It is not expected even in theory that this school will contain more than about fifty boys. In practice it very seldom approaches that number and in many, even of the most advanced type of institution the school presents the appearance of five or six boys being solemnly practised upon by one or two students in training, sometimes with a pandit supervising. It stands to reason that a small school practised on by 40 gurus will cease to exist. It is of no use to protest that there must be a practising school; experience has proved that even if such a school can be got together it will soon be killed.

130. A better plan is to have a demonstration school and to give a guarantee to the parents that the boys will not be practised upon, but on the contrary will have the advantage of being taught by a picked staff, including a teacher of English. The students can then be sent to practise in neighbouring schools at distances up to two miles. That is the theory. In practice it is most difficult to organise successfully. The teachers going out to teach miss their other current and more important general subjects, and are wearied out with long hot walks in the sun. The teachers and parents of the other schools generally resent their presence, and only submit because they fear to lose the grants which form a small part of their wretched subsistence. With so large a number of students the lessons cannot be made continuous in series, and the giving of isolated individual lessons is almost worthless to the student, and most damaging to the classes practised upon both in the lessons themselves and in the discipline. A few teachers in guru-training schools seem to think the so-called practising does some good, but the majority admit that it is time and energy wasted.

131. What is being advocated here, then, is that the first two parts of the teachers' course should be taken in a central district Elementary Teachers' Institution, where they should have the advantage of a good demonstration school, if possible, and where, in the Social Welfare Centre, they would be in the midst of the activities of the development departments which they would have to study. A good deal can be done with younger teachers in training by setting them to teach each other. In this way the art of questioning, etc., can be taught, as well as the best way to control classes, use a blackboard, place the furniture, etc. After finishing a course of this kind the teacher would go into a school and during the following year he would be specially inspected by members of the staff of the Teachers' Institution, as well as the ordinary sub-inspector. If he was considered good enough he would be awarded his full certificate at the end of this probationary year. If not, he would have to go on for another year after receiving a clear statement of the reasons for his failure. My impression is that such a method of training would be far more satisfactory than that at present in vogue.

132. In building up a co-ordinated system of education in each district very careful attention would be paid to the number of teachers required each year, and this would fix the size of each of the proposed Teachers' Institutions. In 1917 the following was the estimate:—

Serial No.	Name of Division	Middle School		Primary Schools
		Annual estimated requirements as to number of teachers.	Annual output of trained teachers	Annual estimated requirements as to the number of teachers	Annual output of trained teachers.
1	Presidency	183	24	450	142
2	Burdwan	189	28	834	190
3	Dacca	225	28	600	218
4	Chittagong	104	16	462	125
5	Rajshahi	221	70	742	232
	Total ...	922 (a)	166 (b)	3,088 (a)	907 (b)

(a) These figures show the number of teachers needed to be trained annually for Middle and Primary Schools to keep up with the demand.

(b) These figures show the number of teachers trained annually under the existing arrangements.

133. The total number of guru-training schools in 1918-19 was 117, containing 1,956 students, of which 954 became qualified in that year. If complete provision for Bengal were made on the lines of the scheme at present sanctioned by having a Government guru-training school of the newest type at each of 79 subdivisional headquarters (79 × 40) 3,160 would be in training. This will probably not be enough for the complete new system of public schools now advocated. Until we have a more exact idea for each district separately, it is proposed to work upon a basis of an average of 150 gurus at each of the 25 Elementary Teachers' Institutions, or a total of 3,750, which is nearly 600 more than on the other plan. Rough estimates for this will be found in paragraph 199 in Chapter IX of this report.

134. Since the Director's letter quoted above was written, building prices have practically doubled, so that the future capital cost of the scheme may be reckoned somewhat as follows:—

		Rs.
79 guru-training schools at Rs. 50,000	...	39,50,000
Minus 22 already built (22 × 50,000)	...	11,00,000
Total	...	28,50,000

From this should be deducted any savings on the present buildings that can be used for other purposes.

135. The recurring cost of the existing scheme, if applied to all 79 subdivisions, would eventually be (79 × Rs. 200 × 12) = Rs. 1,89,600. The gurus are now in receipt of stipends amounting to Rs. 11 per month. The cost of the full scheme under this head would, therefore, be (79 × 40 × Rs. 11 × 12) = Rs. 4,17,120 per annum. This gives a grand total of recurring cost at (Rs. 1,89,600 plus Rs. 4,17,120), = Rs. 6,06,720. In 1918-19 the maintenance charges of the existing schools cost Government Rs. 2,10,873.

136. At present three teachers are estimated for 40 students, or rather more than 13 to a teacher. In Europe eight is regarded as sufficient. In the scheme now put forward, it is proposed to place a Provincial Service man in charge and to allow a teacher for each 15 pupils in view of the suggestion not to send students into practising schools. (It must, however, be borne in mind that the staff will have to join in the inspection of students who are in their probationary year). This gives a staff of ten in each Teachers' Institution. Estimates for the present and the proposed schemes are compared in Chapter IX on Finance.

137. Teachers employed in the proposed new school system should be expected to hold licenses or certificates. Those judged to be sufficiently qualified should at once be awarded certificates. Those not well enough qualified to receive certificates, but who are of middle age and efficient through experience should be given permanent licenses and allowed to finish their teaching careers in peace. Those who are not well-qualified and who are still young should be given temporary licenses renewable from year to year and informed that their permanent employment in the public system will depend upon their qualifying for certificates by training, or at least for permanent licenses by a departmental test. They might be prepared for the latter by short courses of possibly only six or eight weeks which would spread widely the idea of training.

138. Sub-Inspectors.—Sub-Inspectors should be trained in these training institutions and given a short course afterwards in their special work. There should be a free interchange between District Inspectors and heads of Teachers' Institutions and between Sub-Inspectors and Subordinate Educational Service men on the staffs of Teachers' Institutions, and between heads of primary schools and the lower teachers of the training schools, so that the training should be kept close to actual conditions of school work. Such occasional interchanges would also go far towards lessening the boredom of continual employment in elementary work.

CHAPTER VII.

Elementary Schools.

139. Statistics.—The term " elementary school " has been defined for the purposes of this report as including lower primary, upper primary and middle schools, both vocational and cultural. The middle schools are at present divided into " English " and " Vernacular." The total number of these schools is as follows, viz., managed by Government, 10; managed by local bodies, 90; aided by public funds, 1,193; and unaided 673, or a total of 1,966. These middle schools are at present recognised as " secondary " and this report is not immediately concerned with them. Under the head of " primary schools " are comprised indigenous schools called pathsalas and maktabs, with more modern schools usually called simply primary schools. The number of these in 1918-19 was upper primary 3,358, containing 161,120, children, and lower primary, 41,549, containing 1,221,127 children. There were also 179,647 children in the primary departments of high schools, making a grand total of 1,561,894 children, the smallest total for many years. There was a decrease of 48,929 boys at the primary stage in that year. This was attributed to the " rise in the cost of living, failure of crops, and the ravages of epidemic diseases." Of the primary schools Government manages 191, and local bodies 2,874, while 36,236 are aided, and 5,606 unaided, or a total of 44,907 altogether.

140. Sites.—It is very rare to find a primary school in possession of the ground upon which it stands. Even some municipal schools have been placed upon ground over which the municipality has no real right. The people seem to be satisfied with such an arrangement, but if we embark upon a policy of systematised national schools it will be important to secure some definite legal understanding as to the ownership of the sites. In municipalities, where the ground is very expensive and difficult to obtain, it will generally have to be paid for either by private arrangement or through acquisition by Government. In country districts it is usually easily possible to obtain suitable sites without any expenditure. The best arrangement is for the sites to be given to a public authority, with a condition attached that if the land ever ceases to be used for a school it shall revert to the owner or his heirs. The size of the site will also vary according to its locality. It is desirable to have as large sites as possible, so that the children may have some playground and possibly some space for school gardening in future. It is, however, to be remembered that the children in these schools are quite young and do not need to play football or hockey. For their childish games quite a small piece of ground is enough. For towns I have advocated 8 cottahs as the absolute minimum which could be considered possible. Where ground is expensive it is better to erect two-storeyed buildings, the ground floor being pucca and the upper kutcha-pacca, so as to leave the greatest possible playground space. In parts of some towns it is difficult to get suitable sites at all. My own observation confirms the following description given by Mr. West of a school in Howrah. " The whole quarter is appallingly dirty. The stench on the verandah of the school is unbearable and the flies swarm. Furniture is—blackboard one, stool one, books two. It would be of no use to provide a building here. The kindness would be to get the children out of this quarter even for an hour or two a day. It is absurd to give aid to anything so utterly filthy as this." In other municipalities, especially those near Calcutta, I have seen similar sites, but generally speaking, bad as they are, things are not as bad as that, even in these municipalities. To make children attend schools on such sites is cruelty, to propose to teach hygiene in them is hypocrisy.

141. Buildings.—Buildings will vary according to their locality. In large towns it seems to be necessary, to build with brick owing to danger from fire and the necessity of using two-storeyed buildings so as to save land. Outside the large towns the type of building that has been generally approved is one with a pucca floor, which reduces the amount of dust in the school, and obviates the necessity for the purchase of furniture in the lower classes, mats being used instead. Wooden posts support a roof of tiles, where there are no monkeys, and of thatch or iron where there are. The walls are made of bamboo matting, and the doors and windows of wood. The iron roof is very hot, and under it a ceiling of some kind has to be placed; it keeps out the rain and is not liable to frequent repair. The thatched roof is cool and generally rain-proof, but needs a good deal of attention, In fact kutcha buildings of this kind cost a good deal in repairs. They are suited for their purpose in all other ways, and it is important, that, too great a departure should not suddenly be made from the type of building in which the children ordinarily live. The use of pucca buildings is said to make the children less able to resist the sun when they go back to work in the fields. The aim should be to show them a neat,tidy, clean and, if possible, beautiful building as an example of what their own houses should be, and not one altogether beyond their powers of imitation. At present most of the schools are held in verandahs, sheds, religious houses of some kind, or in other buildings which are for one reason or another, more or less unsuited for the purpose. In working out schemes for building in municipalities the local conditions have been taken into account in every case and the repairs have been allowed for amongst the recurring charges. All inspecting officers and local bodies should be in possession of well thought-out type-plans to meet different conditions. Mr. Barber of the Australian Baptist Mission at Faridpur is very kindly preparing plans and estimates for the construction of a school unit of building 20 feet by 15 feet, containing 300 square feet, which, according to the departmental minimum, provides for 50 children and would yet be suitable as a class room for 30 children under more ideal conditions. It is thought possible that such units might be prepared by district boards and sent out in numbered sections for erection on whatever kind of foundation was found to be best. Mr. Barber is comparing the cost of these in wood and in iron frames, the latter being a precaution against white-ants. The possibility of renting buildings, instead of owning them has been examined and put aside as uneconomical and otherwise impracticable and undesirable. The whole question of the provision and repair of school buildings in non-municipal areas is one of extreme difficulty. Even if Government were to provide the capital cost, public opinion cannot be counted upon with certainty even for the smallest repairs. The question is taken up in the chapter dealing with finance. It is desirable that partitions in school-buildings should be easily removeable, so that in the absence of one teacher two rooms could be combined.

142. Equipment.—The provision of equipment, important though it is, is perhaps the least urgent of the demands upon the public purse. Provision can be made at a cost of Rs. 2 to Rs. 5 per child. It should include mats for all the lower classes, and desks and benches of suitable size for a few privileged children at the top. A table, a chair, a blackboard and an easel are necessary for each teacher on the staff. It is not uncommon to find either a clock and no time-table, or a time-table and no clock in a school. A clock and a gong are necessary for training in punctuality, while it is desirable to have a few maps, some books, blackboard chalk, dusters and, in the case of night schools, lamps. The use of benches without desks in front of them is awkward and bad for the children, especially as the children's feet never touch the ground. Its recommendation is apparently that it is "respectable."

143. Sanitation.—It is extremely difficult to obtain enough funds for the building of the school itself without thinking of outbuildings. The majority of primary schools are innocent of any sanitary arrangements of their own. In country districts the suggestion that latrines are desirable is a source of amusement to the people. Is not all Bengal around the school? In many districts no "sweepers" are to be found and, if they were, the school has no funds to pay them. Special patent latrines are regarded as curiosities and duly avoided. If it had not been for the statistics of the Sanitary Commissioner on the subject of hookworm, we might have been content in rural areas to leave the sun to do its work. I have no suggestions to make regarding the small scattered schools that now exist. It should be quite possible to take the matter up if we succeed in developing a properly-organised system of national schools.

144. Causes of Inefficiency.—Enough has been said in the chapter on "Teachers and Sub-Inspectors" to show that the schools are, generally speaking, inefficient. One of the chief reasons for this inefficiency is that the whole matter of primary education is not taken very seriously. The heat of summer and the access of water in the rains interfere with punctual attendance; while malaria, hookworm and other diseases induce slackness and prevent regular attendance, as also do the need of the children's help in field or mill, and the disagreeableness of paying fees. The teachers are sometimes incompetents dropped from other spheres of work—"those who can, do; and those who can't, teach;" those who are competent are often tired or lazy, and this is not to be wondered at in the conditions of their lives and the buildings in which they have to work; there is little idea of punctuality in starting school or in following a time-table, and often the noise and disorder are such that any kind of progress would seem to be impossible. Mr. West has shown that after a careful examination of 1,306 children in 38 schools, the teacher having been explicitly warned three times on the point, one-half of the children remained unemployed, and that of those who were employed, two-thirds were writing. There are too many classes under one teacher, and they are sometimes found in different rooms. The scholarship system, as at present arranged, encourages the teachers to devote themselves to one or two favourite pupils, leaving the rest to take their chance. One important reason for the congestion in the lowest classes has been stated by the Mission Commission to be the difficulty of some of the vernacular scripts. There can be no doubt that the early stages of learning to read take up a wholly disproportionate amount of the short time at the child's disposal during his school life, and the noisy reiteration of meaningless vocables hypnotises the children into a respectable stupidity. Learning through the heard impression is often a serious hindrance to true education. The children must be taught not merely to read but to read something. The difficulty connected with the script is probably not insuperable, but I am not prepared at this stage to offer any suggestion on the point. The schools are largely proprietary and the grants to them are too small either to make them efficient or to serve as a real means of control. A very careful examination of a very large number of primary schools has led me to the deliberate opinion that we cannot hope to improve these schools very much in present circumstances and that our hope must lie in the direction of a new system properly organised for public purposes. To do this it will be necessary to educate public opinion, so that the people may be persuaded to send their children a little distance to larger and more efficient schools rather than to have many small inefficient schools almost at their doors. Experience has proved that this is not at all a hopeless proposition.

145. If facilities are given, wherever possible, for the teaching of English even with an extra fee; if half-time schools are permitted at busy seasons of the year; if discretion is given to the local authority to arrange for holidays according to the needs of the particular season; if a primary school examination is reinstituted; and if instruction is made free, some of the difficulties of securing good attendance will have been removed. Attempts should be made by interesting methods to preserve literacy among the literate and to secure the education of parents, so that their literate children shall not hold them in contempt. The names of parents whose children are not at school might be posted at the schools for all to see.

146. Compulsion.—There can be little doubt but that the proposals already made, if carried out, would tend to expand substantially the numbers in primary schools, for "improvement is a potent factor in expansion." Nevertheless it is not to be hoped that all the children of the country will attend school until compulsion has been effectively introduced. The clauses of the Bengal Primary Education Act of 1919 which refer to compulsion are examined in the next Chapter. It is desired before closing this Chapter to outline a method of introducing it in municipal and non-municipal areas.

147. It is idle to hope that it will be possible to compel boys to attend existing pathsalas and maktabs. There is no machinery for the purpose, and no one in the Province has been able to suggest any effective method. If, on the other hand, the population is divided up among circles of half a mile radius with a publicly-owned and managed primary school at the centre of each under the control of a fairly paid master, something can be done. All these schools would have at least two teachers, preferably a Hindu and a Muhammadan. These should be appointed "attendance officers" and possibly given a small allowance in consideration of their extra work. It would be the duty of an attendance officer to keep a list of the householders of his own faith who live within the school area with the number of boys 6 to 10 years of age. If such a boy did not come to school, the parent would be notified by the attendance officer. If this had no effect, the matter would be reported to authority, the local Government body or the magistrate in all probability. The authority would call upon the parent privately to perform his duty. If he still refused, he would be called into court and fined according to the law. The parent would thus have two private chances of complying with the law before extreme action could be taken. These arrangements could, of course, only be made in properly organised areas, and the proposal may contain the germ of a future system of birth registration, records being kept by the school master and metal identification discs being handed over to the parents.

CHAPTER VIII.

Administration, Control, and the Act.

148. Inspection.—In moving about the country one hears a good many complaints that there is too much inspection, or that too large a proportion of available funds is devoted to inspection. The total expenditure on primary schools from public funds in 1919-20 was Rs. 34,16,752, of which Rs. 24,91,959 were spent directly in the schools and Rs. 5,55,692 on administration, the difference being for capital expenditure. The amount spent on administration constitutes a fairly large proportion it is true, and a good deal of the work done by the inspecting officers is not of very great value, hard though they have to work, for constructive supervision is almost out of the question. The recent Missionary Commission considered that there should be a "supervisor" for every 12—30 schools. The average number of primary schools (excluding indigenous schools), per sub-inspector is 172, and he is supposed to visit each once and, if possible, twice in the year. He has also bills to make out, and a good many other duties to perform. He has to move from place to place and to take bedding and in many cases food also with him. No peon is allowed him, and he often has to carry his things himself unless he is to be out of pocket on his travelling allowance. He sometimes cannot obtain accommodation within his area, and has to travel some distance before reaching it. If each sub-inspector were given a peon on Rs. 12 a month, it would cost Rs. 42,624 per annum, and a house allowance of Rs. 10, given on condition of living within his sphere of work, would cost Rs. 35,520 per annum in excess of present expenditure. Some special Muhammadan sub-inspectors have to travel over whole districts and find serious difficulty in making their travelling allowances meet their expenses. Sub-inspectors, like other mortals, sometimes are found guilty of fraud, such as falsifying travelling allowance bills, diaries, etc., but they are, on the whole, a hard-working and conscientious set of officers. The trouble is that the system is against them and they have not been specially trained for their work. The very large number of tiny schools, all of similar type; and, with few exceptions, all apparently unimprovable, constitutes a heavy burden for one man. They have to be visited hastily and the inspections are not of much value beyond that of compelling the teachers to pull their schools together now and again. Good work has been done by these officers in deciding which schools should receive grants from public funds, but it is an invidious task, and the general distribution of schools is not happy.

149. If a redistribution of schools were made on the lines proposed in Chapter III above, and if they were put under public control, the teachers being paid fixed salaries, the character of the sub-inspectors' work would change a good deal. The bill work would disappear, the teachers being paid from the local governing body. Far more deliberate and useful work in the schools could be demanded in the way of examining the children, directing the teachers and looking into the question of attendance. They would also have to organise the lower and upper primary school annual examinations and report the results, afterwards sending the certificates to the schools. The sub-inspector would be generally responsible for the work of education in its lower branches and would get credit for initiative in improving conditions. He should be informed of all educational matters dealt with by the union board and should be the channel for orders in educational matters between the district board and the union board. Sub-inspectors should be the expert advisers of, and should work in close co-operation with, union boards. The new organisation, if it should be decided upon, would have to be carried out in great measure by the sub-inspectors, who could be temporarily released from all inspection work for the duty.

150. Assistant sub-inspectors should be changed into sub-inspectors as soon as financial conditions permit, and inspecting pandits should disappear as soon as the schools are in the hands of rather better qualified and better paid teachers.

151. Sub-inspectors are responsible to Deputy Inspectors and District Deputy Inspectors. As the reorganisation proceeds it will appear how far the Deputy Inspectors are necessary and whether they should be at district headquarters or, in the alternative, whether they should have groups of sub-inspectors under them at other headquarters connected with local boards. My present view is that the District Deputy Inspector should become a "District Inspector" in the Provincial Educational Service, a dignity now attained by the head masters of the zilla schools; that he should have charge of all middle and primary education and nothing else; and that he should be assisted by one or more "Deputy District Inspectors" at the headquarters of the district. These officers would be the expert advisers of, and would work in the closest co-operation with the district boards and municipalities.

152. School Committees.—Public control over the new schools should be exercised as directly as possible, but it does not appear desirable to have a committee for each individual school either in municipalities or in union board areas. I am informed that the existing committees of board lower primary schools are without practical value. Such committees would in many cases be illiterate, or practically so, if really representative of the locality, and if they were nominated from outside the reason for their existence would disappear. It seems best, therefore, to have a small executive educational committee composed of a number of members of the municipality or union board, together with an equal number of elected representatives of the teachers in the area controlled, with the Chairman or President of the local body presiding. It is important that teachers in the new national schools should, from the outset, be given a position of good social standing and independence which will attract men who will be influential in the work of social development (see also paragraph 165). These proposals, taken in connexion with those made for vocational education (including the training of teachers) in Chapter V above, complete the district organisation proposed, the idea being that it should be a definite unit in itself.

153. Government and the Schools.—It is now necessary to consider the extremely important question of the linking of the educational district with Government. At present the District Deputy Inspector is responsible to the Divisional Inspector and so to the Director of Public Instruction. The machinery that is controlled by these officers is already overstrained and additional work must be thrown upon it in the immediate future. The department of Public Instruction has to deal with an enormous and complicated mass of routine business connected with primary, middle and high schools as well numerous colleges. Added to this is the control of European schools for boys and girls and a considerable number of vocational institutions. New undertakings are:—

(a) the fundamental reform of the largest University in the world;

(b) the supervision and finance of the founding of a new University at Dacca;

(c) the creation of a new set of institutions to be called intermediate colleges;

(d) the reform of a vast number of high schools;

(e) the reorganisation of 45,000 primary schools, containing about 1½ million children, as well nearly 2,000 middle schools containing 1,65,000 children;

(f) the provision of extended facilities for vocational education at all stages.

The development of the lower stages is complicated by its close connection with what amounts to a new system of Local Self-Government. It, therefore, appears that some new machinery will have to be devised to meet the situation.

154. The Universities are provided with their own governing bodies. It has been proposed by the University Commission that a Board of Secondary and Intermediate Education should control these branches of the work. Both these stages of education will be linked to Government through the Director of Public Instruction who has become a Deputy Secretary to Government. The new connexion of elementary education remains to be arranged. It appears to be desirable to create a new post for an officer who might be called the Director of Elementary Education. The present Divisional Inspectors of Schools with their Second Inspectors will have their hands full in the reorganisation of the high schools and the creation of the intermediate colleges. In order to make the administration as simple and direct as possible, it is suggested that the proposed Director of Elementary Education should supervise the elementary schools without reference to the Divisional Inspectors through District Inspectors who would only be concerned with primary and middle schools which they would control through the existing Sub-Inspectors. The principle of appointing District Inspectors has already been recognised by Government.

155. If the above proposals should be accepted, the question will arise as to whether the Director of Elementary Education should work under the Minister of Education or the Minister of Local Self-Government. Primary education is to be one of the principal concerns of Municipalities, District Boards and the new Union Boards. These bodies are under the Minister of Local Self-Government and it would perhaps be convenient for the educational machinery at its lowest stage to be under the same Minister, for the Government of India (No. 873 of 19th August 1916) have expressed the desire that the local bodies should have much to say regarding even the curriculum to be followed and the books to be used by the children in schools. This would involve a very definite cutting of the educational system horizontally between the middle and high stages. There is, perhaps, no precedent for this but the organisation for local government and educational administration in Bengal is widely different from that in England and in other countries. In France there is a separate Director of Elementary Education but a detailed comparison with that country will not hold in spite of many similarities. It is for the consideration of Government as to whether the proposed new Director, if appointed, should work under the Minister of Local Self-Government or the Minister of Education.

156. Whichever plan is adopted it will be necessary to make very careful arrangements for co-ordinating the middle with the high schools. This could be done in three ways:—

(a) The Board of Secondary and Intermediate College education would conduct the middle school examination.

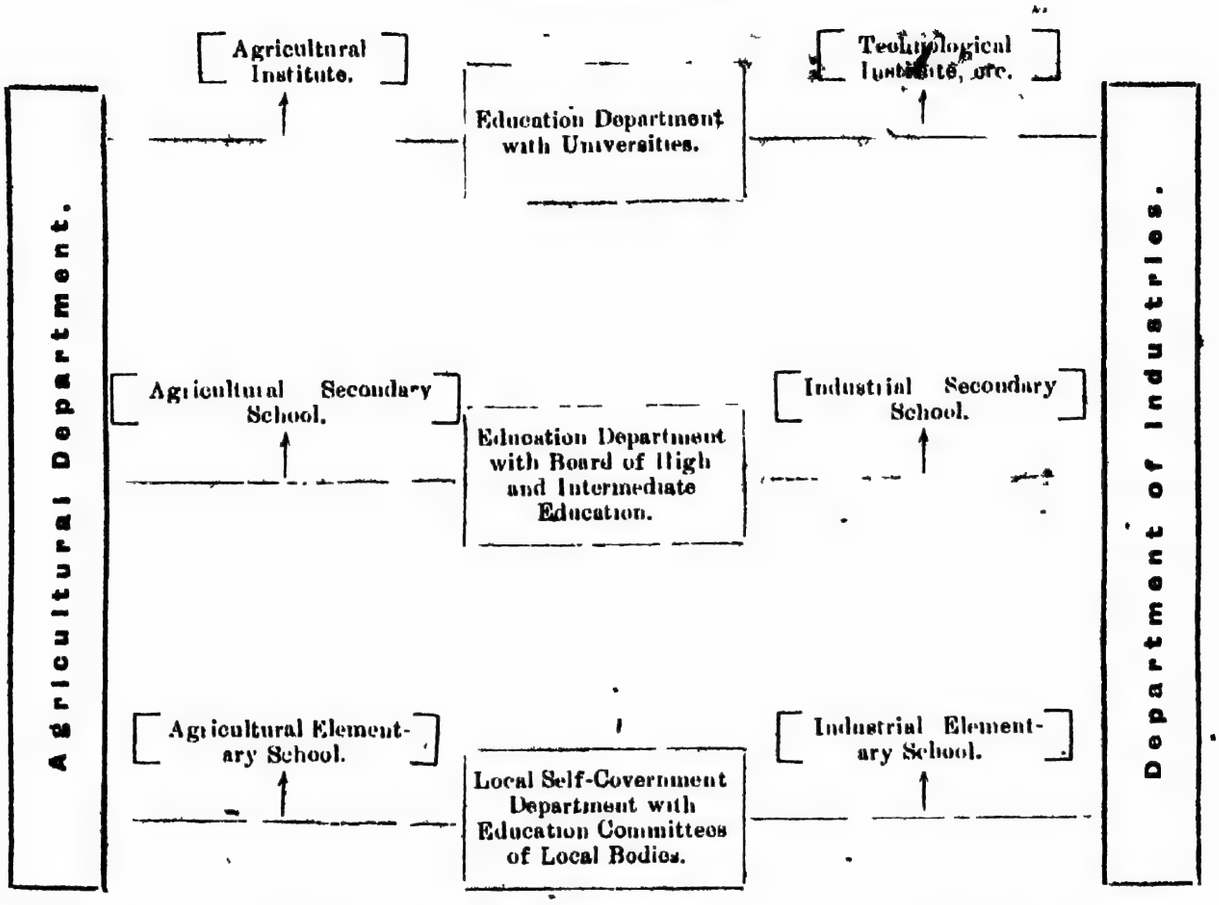
(b) The Director of Elementary Education would be a member of that Board.

(c) Divisional inspectors would retain the right of making any recommendations regarding the elementary schools generally or in particular cases.

157. At the three main stages—University, intermediate and secondary, and elementary—the closest touch would have to be maintained between the educational system and the Departments of Agriculture and Industries which, with Co-operative Societies, are together under one of the new Ministers. In addition to forming one of the links between the elementary and secondary stages of instruction, the proposed Director of Elementary Education would, at his own stage, become a liaison officer between the various departments concerned. Dr. Meek, the Director of Industries, has expressed the view that at this low stage it would be necessary for industrial schools to remain under the control of the educational authority, though at the higher stages vocational instruction and training should be under the Department directly concerned. Even at this low stage the Directors of Agriculture and Industries would need to have such very full powers of inspection and suggestion that they would amount to authority in all technical matters.

158. Diagram III, on page 54 will perhaps assist in making clear the general scheme of co-ordination here suggested and may be compared with Diagram I on page 21.

DIAGRAM NI.



159. It is possible that these latter proposals may be regarded as outside the orders under which this report is prepared, it is therefore necessary to justify their inclusion here. One of the principal causes of lack of expansion and improvement in the primary schools appears to have been the fact that circumstances have made it impossible for them to have received the concentrated or direct attention of anyone in high authority. This counts for much in any country, but it is especially important in India. The number of primary schools is so enormous that a Divisional Inspector cannot hope to inspect them all, and has to leave them to subordinates, the reports on individual schools each by itself seeming to be of but small importance. Primary education has, therefore, come to be more a matter of statistics than of children. District board and municipal authorities feel that their control is not much more than nominal, for they have to be guided regarding grants and other matters by departmental officers, who are not responsible to them. Their responsibilities need to be made definite and brought home to them in connexion with primary schools What is aimed at in the change now proposed is that the clear purpose and intention of Government in regard to primary education should reach from the Minister to the child in school by the most simple and direct method of control that can be devised, the local authorities being consulted and assisted in every possible way.

160. The divisional inspectors of recent years have always been overburdened. Each has an average of 162 high schools, 381 middle schools, 268 upper and 6,288 lower primary schools, in addition to second grade colleges, and they are always having to carry out special inspections for the University. What the high schools need is very careful and sympathetic inspection, a leisurely estimate of the values and difficulties of the work done, clear and personal advice to teachers separately and as a body, and explicit written directions of a reasoned character to the head master together with a return visit at a short interval to see how far the weaknesses have been set right. Nothing of this kind can be carried out in the conditions in which the Divisional Inspector now finds himself, burdened as he is with masses of office work. The organisation and development of the proposed intermediate colleges, and the separation of the 1st and 2nd year classes from the existing colleges will create an enormous additional sphere of activity of a very complex character,

This also must be laid upon him as the agent of the Board of Secondary and Intermediate College Education. By removing the massive responsibilities of the Divisional Inspector in regard to the elementary schools greater efficiency will be secured both in the higher and in the lower grades of schools.

161. * The Bengal Primary Education Act of 1919.—(a) It seems desirable to offer a few points for consideration in connexion with this Act which is reprinted for ready reference in Appendix A. The Act refers in the first instance to municipalities, but under the provisions of section 1 (2) it may be extended with any necessary modifications to areas controlled by union committees constituted under the Bengal Local Self-Government Act of 1885. The recent Conference of representatives of the non-official members of district boards resolved " that the new Union Boards, wherever they may be constituted, be regarded as the principal agents for dealing with primary education in non-municipal areas."

162. The Bengal Village SelfGovernment Act of 1919 (section 32) says : " The union board may. . . . establish primary schools. . . or assume charge of existing primary schools. . . and shall repair, maintain and manage any primary school. . . under its charge." Section 101 empowers the local government to make rules for these purposes.

163. The Bengal Local Self-Government Act of 1885 (section 62), lays down that, subject to any rules made by the Governor in Council under the Act and to the provisions of the Bengal Village Self-Government Act of 1919 (the italics were inserted in 1919 for those areas where this Act is in force), every district board shall be charged with, and be responsible for, the maintenance and management of all primary and middle schools under public management within the district, the construction and repair of all buildings connected therewith, the appointment (subject to the provisions of section 33) of all masters and assistant masters thereof, and the payment of the salaries of such masters and assistant masters." Section 63 makes it possible for the District Board, subject to rules made by the Governor in Council under the Act " with its own consent, to be charged with, and made responsible for, the maintenance and management of any other schools or class of schools within the district; or to make grants in aid of any such schools, whether the same be under public or private management." Section 64A makes it lawful, subject to rules made by the Governor in Council under the Act, for the district board to " (a) provide buildings to be used as students' hostels in connection with schools for the maintenance and management of which the board is responsible under section 62 or section 63, and maintain and manage such hostels, or (b) make grants in aid of any school referred to in section 63 or section 64, or any other school, college or educational institution, for the purpose of providing buildings to be used as students hostels in connection with such school, college or institution, or for the purpose of maintaining and managing such hostels, or (c) establish scholarships for the furtherance of technical or any other special form of education : Provided that, save with the sanction of the local Government, no such scholarship shall be tenable at any school or institution not situated within the area under the authority of the District Board." Section 65 makes it lawful for the Governor in Council " from to time to transfer to a district board such funds as he may deem necessary for expenditure on (a) the improvement of any schools or class of schools within the district under private management, or (b) the maintenance or improvement of any schools or class of schools maintained and managed by the district board; or (c) the provision of buildings to be used as students' hostels . . . and the maintenance and management of such hostels." The rules that may be made by the Governor in Council under this Act [section 138 (j) (j 1) (j 2) (j 3) (j 4)] are for—

> " (j) regulating the maintenance and management of schools under sections 62, 63 and 64, the construction and repair of buildings connected therewith, and the appointment of masters and assistant masters, and the proper distribution of funds transferred to district boards under section 65;
> " (j 1) prescribing the conditions subject to which grants-in-aid may be made under section 63 or section 64 A;

" (j 2) regulating the provision, maintenance and managing of students' hostels under section 64 A;

" (j 3) prescribing the powers and duties of Education Committees, and regulating the removal of members from office;

" (j 4) regulating the grant of scholarships established under section 64 A."

164. It appears to be necessary to amend the Bengal Primary Education Act of 1919 in such a way as to add union board areas to those controlled by union committees and to draw up a set of consolidated rules under the three Acts, so far as these refer to primary, middle, and elementary vocational schools (vide Bengal Primary Education Act of 1919, section 18).

165. (b) The Bengal Local Self-Government Act of 1885, section 65 B, lays down that " (1) Every district board shall appoint, to be members of an Education Committee—

(a) the Deputy Inspector of Schools;

(b) three members of the district board; and

(c) not more than three residents of the district not being members of the district board.

(2) The appointment of any persons referred to in clause (c) of sub-section (1) to be a member of an Education Committee shall be subject to the approval of the Commissioner; and, when the appointment has been so approved, such person shall, for the purposes of sub-clause (b) of clause sixthly of section 53 be deemed to be a member of the district board. (3) It shall be the duty of an Education Committee, subject to the control of the district board and to any rules made by the Governor in Council under section 138—(i) to superintend all matters connected with the finances, accounts, maintenance and management of all schools maintained by the district board, and (ii) to determine the conditions to be complied with when grants are made by the district board in aid of other schools." This may be compared with Sections 7 to 16 of the Bengal Primary Education Act of 1919, (vide Appendix A), and it may be considered whether municipalities and union boards should not always have Education Committees as well as district boards, and that a strong representation of the teachers should appear on each such committee.

166. (c) The period of compulsion under the Bengal Primary Education Act of 1919 is for "boys not being less than six or more than ten years of age." that is a boy is for four years of his life under compulsion, i.e., from the moment when he completes his sixth year of life till the moment when he begins his eleventh, during the time when in ordinary English parlance he says " I am 6, 7, 8, 9 years of age." This period unfortunately does not correspond exactly with any period dealt with by the census, nor does it contain any of the favourite multiples of five which are generally guessed by people in giving the ages of their children. This difficulty might be overcome for statistical purposes for masses of children, but when the law is to be enforced, it has to be enforced in reference to a particular boy. There is no system for registering individual births in the country districts, and people do not know the ages of themselves or their children, though a few can form some idea through their horoscopes. Registration itself would not be very valuable, as it would be difficult to know to whom the entry referred, so few names being shared by so many people, unless metal identification discs were used, which would not disappear owing to climatic conditions. It is of no use to think of doctors deciding the disputed cases, for there are no doctors in ordinary rural areas. According to the Act (section 12) the onus of deciding the age will fall upon the Committee in the first place and finally upon the Magistrate, and it will be a very keen Committee that will search out doubtful cases for prosecution. Until some way of registration is found, or until definite powers are given to some authority to declare a boy's age to be some definite number of years, compulsion will be impossible.

167. The same difficulty appears in section 11 in connexion with employment. This section also needs careful consideration in connexion with factory legislation.

168. In section 8 (z) the excuses that may be taken to justify absence from school are laid down. A boy is exempted if he lives more than a mile from the school, or on account of " sickness, infirmity, domestic necessity, the seasonal needs of agriculture or of his being the sole bread-winner of his family," or if his guardian has a " reasonable objection " to the school. These seem to be so all-inclusive that the Act will be quite ineffectual. It would perhaps be preferable to have a general clause leaving all offered excuses to be judged by the Committee with an appeal to the District Board or District Inspector.

169. (d) Section 3 appears now to need modification in the sense of compelling local bodies to submit any returns, etc., that may be required at any time. There is no penalty attached to disobedience to this clause, which has been but indifferently complied with. Section 4 might now omit reference to the " statements " and be made more general. The clause is of first rate importance and its bearing in the question of an educational cess is dealt with in paragraph 182 of Chapter IX on Finance.

CHAPTER IX.

Finance.

170. Obstacles to Expansion.—A most anxious consideration of all the evidence that one has been able to gather points to the existence of two main obstacles in the way of expansion in primary education.

171. One is psychological and consists in the adherence of the people to their traditional small unorganised schools on the one hand, and their instinctive detestation of any suggestion of direct taxation in any form, for any purpose, without even an examination of the possible benefits that may accrue from it on the other. This can only be overcome by well-organised and well-conducted propaganda work, which must be based on facts, and must include arguments to persuade as well as arguments to convince.

172. The second obstacle is financial, and though less serious than the other is, nevertheless, of fundamental importance. Its removal would be the greatest step towards overcoming the first. The object of this chapter is to offer some idea of the cost of the proposals put forward in this report. The estimates are exact and detailed as regards municipalities, and approximate in regard to rural areas and the training of teachers.

173. Educational Finance in Bengal.—A reference to paragraph 49 in Chapter II of this report will show:—

(a) that the existing expenditure on primary education, low though it is in India as a whole, is deplorably low in Bengal as compared with other provinces. The average annual cost of educating a boy is Rs. 3·5 in Bengal as against Rs. 12·9 in Bombay *;

(b) that the people of Bengal are, nevertheless, paying directly and voluntarily more than those in other provinces, for the fee rate in Bengal is the highest, averaging Re. 1-11 per annum, no other province, except Bihar and Orissa, coming up even nearly to one-half of that;

(c) that the expenditure from public sources in Bengal is small, and the proportion from provincial sources is very small when compared with that in other provinces; if the cost of educating the boys, which is met from provincial resources, is distributed over the whole population, it averages ·029 per head in Bengal and ·265 in Bombay.

174. Again a reference to paragraph 50 of Chapter II will reveal the fact that Bengal is very far behind Madras, and an immense distance behind Bombay in the direct part taken by Government and local bodies in providing schools for the people. The percentages of public institutions are Bengal 6·9, Madras 26·9, and Bombay 80·7 per cent.

175. All this points inevitably to the conclusion that, even by existing Indian standards, Bengal has much leeway to make up in organising a national system of schools, and that, if efficient free education is to be provided, there will have to be a considerable increase of money expended by Government or by local bodies, or both. It is necessary to discover what would be the cost of a fairly efficient system that would make complete provision for the children who are likely to attend school on a free voluntary basis. The recent District Board Conference resolved "that district boards, in consultation with union boards, be called upon for estimates for making their proposed organisation effective." The district and union boards and municipalities will need much technical help and guidance in preparing these schemes and estimates. A great difficulty in this matter has been the fact that the union boards have been only in the process of formation during the period in which this investigation has been carried on. Until this has been done in detail we must be content with approximate figures liable to subsequent correction

176 Having obtained these it can then be decided whether any part of the cost is to be met from fees, what part of the public expenditure is to be met from provincial funds, and what from those raised by local bodies when the full effect can be realised. The District Board Conference wisely refrained from fixing a proportion of the expenditure to be borne as between Government and the local bodies in regard to education, but on the second day ventured on a more general resolution, indicating that a half and half basis would not be considered unfair.

177. We are furtunately in possession of very recent and careful estimate by Mr. West in his "Survey of Primary Education in Bengal, 1919." He put forward two schemes, one rather more ambitious than the other, for the capital and recurring cost of making complete provision for primary education throughout Bengal, except in Calcutta, the Darjeeling District, and the Chittagong Hill Tracts. One small point may be mentioned as illustrating what one trifling and apparently essential item looks like when spread over this country. It seems reasonable that 75 per cent. of the children should be provided with slates. To do this from Government funds would cost over ten lakhs of rupees! The following table summarises Mr. West's estimates even excluding the cost of inspection, scholarships and repairs.

	Scheme I.	Scheme II.
CAPITAL.
	Rs.	Rs.
District Board areas	... 3,12,36,661	1,42,55,275
Municipalities	... 17,07,671	9,87,958
Total	... 3,29,45,332	1,52,43,233
RECURRING
District Board areas	... 1,90,18,284	1,04,77,645
Municipalities	... 9,17,709	5,03,596
Total	... 1,99,36,193	1,09,81,241

178. The choice put before us is a bill for about three crores thirty lakhs capital with two crores recurring on the one hand, and another for about one and a half crores capital and one crore ten lakhs recurring on the other. An examination of the basis of Mr. West's calculations will not reveal any item of extravagance. The most important matter is the salaries of the teachers. What does he propose? The higher of the two alternative figures that he proposes in Scheme I is an average salary of Rs. 15 for the teachers, and in Scheme II an average salary of Rs. 8 per month. My personal view is that, so far from being extravagant,, schools staffed in this way would give us no appreciable improvement on existing conditions.

179. I take my stand on a minimum wage of Rs. 15 (£1) a month in towns with a chance of rising to Rs. 30 or Rs. 40 as head masters, and a minimum of Rs. 12 with free board and lodging in country districts with a chance of rising to Rs. 24 or more in the case of larger schools as head masters. I set aside altogether the utter folly of attempting to make any one of our own primary school teachers "passing rich on forty pounds a year!" I do not think the salaries proposed can seriously be challenged as too high. If this be admitted, the cost must be faced. Fortunately a good deal of economy can be effected by system and organisation, as I hope to show. The plan and method of systematization has already been described. It is to cover the populated parts of the country with "school areas" of ronghly half a mile radius and to place a national school in the middle of each.

180. Cost of Proposed System.—Thirty-five municipalities, apart from Darjeeling and Kurseong, have been worked out on the basis of a half and half division of both capital and recurring costs as between Government and the municipality. Of these specimens will be found in Appendix C—(a) being for Howrah, a large industrial town with expensive sites and needing pucca buildings, and (b) for Rangpur, a fairly typical mufassal municipality forming the headquarters of a district. The covering letter of each scheme explained the principles, a map showed the distribution of the schools, the enclosed Statement A showed the total capital and recurring cost of the Scheme. Statement B showed the implications of two possible methods of financing the scheme, and at the end were resolutions drafted to enable the commissioners to arrive at clear ideas of what was intended. A copy was sent for each commissioner, so that all could examine the details of the scheme at leisure. At the time of going to press 5 municipalities have not returned any answer in spite of reminders; 2 have objected to the scheme on other than educational grounds, 10 have replied that the scheme will be considered at a future meeting, in some cases because a quorum could not be gathered to discuss the matter; 16 have accepted the policy and plan, but have offered alternative financial proposals; and two namely Rangpur and Chandpur have resolved to accept the scheme in full and to apply to Government for permission to levy the necessary cess.

181. And what are the commitments to which the scheme seeks to pledge these thirty-five municipalities? The utterly poor will have nothing to pay either in fees or taxes. For them the schools will be wholly free. Not as a method of levy, but merely as a convenient way of looking at the amount of the levy, the cost of the scheme has been put at a flat rate per rate-payer. In Howrah it is 2 annas 11 pies (less than three pence) per month, in Rangpur 3 annas 1 pie (just over three pence) per month, and the average for the 35 municipalities is 2 annas 11 pies on the more expensive scheme of financing the project. On the "programme" the amounts are at Howrah 2 annas, at Rangpur 2 annas 6 pies, and the average 2 annas 3 pies. The cess would not be levied at a flat rate, but as a percentage on the municipal valuation. In this case Howrah would pay ·7 or ·5 per cent., Rangpur 2·0 or 1·6 per cent. and the average would be 2·1 or 1·5 per cent., according to the plan of finance adopted. These amounts cannot be regarded, and, as a matter of fact, are not regarded as high, but as amazingly low, considering that they are to give free primary schools to all boys with staffs that are far better than anything hitherto dreamed of in Bengal, and that they include the capital cost in a manner to be explained below, as well as the cost of repairs to buildings and equipment, and of contingencies. A well-to-do parent at the present time pays Re. 1 for one child in the primary department of a high school, and a poor man pays 4 annas a month in a pathsala, so that both these classes stand to make a profit on the scheme even if only one boy attends the school, while the man who has no children, or who is rich enough to keep his boy on in a socially select school with high fees, can of them all best afford the cess.

182. It is obviously not the amount of the cess that stands in the way of the adoption of the scheme. Indeed on several occasions I have been asked to approach Government so that orders may be issued compelling the commissioners to put the scheme into force, so that they would be able to evade the odium of having voted for a cess. Under section 4 of the Bengal Primary Education Act of 1919 Government can "direct the commissioners to provide the necessary school accommodation, staff and equipment for all children, not being less than six or more than eleven years of age, likely to attend primary schools voluntarily," (whether free or not is not laid down) "within the municipality, and to assume the direct management and control of all such schools." At the same time section 17 (2) prevents the levy of a cess, except by the vote of two-thirds of the commissioners. My own view is that power should be taken by Government to compel the levy of a cess for this purpose when necessary.

183. And here I wish to emphasise as strongly as possible this point. The new scheme, accepted as it has been on all hands as an enormous step forward, and providing capital as well as recurring costs, demands from these 35 municipalities Rs. 3,34,165 on the more expensive plan, and Rs. 2,48,635 on the less expensive method. The people of the same municipalities are at this moment contributing in rates, fees and contributions Rs. 3,00,014, or actually more than half a lakh a year more than the lower figure that I am asking them to pay. At the risk of labouring the point I will give three concrete instances taken at random. Dacca is a large city with expensive sites.

It pays for boys' schools Rs. 1,664 from municipal funds, Rs. 29,640 as fees and Rs. 3,324 as contributions or a total of Rs. 35,628. Our scheme only asks Rs. 30,000 from the town as a cess on the more costly plan, and Rs. 22,000 on the less costly one. Burdwan is an ordinary district headquarters municipality. It pays at present from the three stated sources Rs. 7,852, while our estimated cess is Rs. 11,000 at the higher rate and Rs. 7,900 at the lower. Chittagong now pays Rs. 11,744 it is asked to pay Rs. 11,000 or Rs. 8,650, according to the plan adopted.

184. The difference between these two plans is not hard to appreciate. In the more expensive one a loan is taken by the municipality for its share of the capital cost, to be paid back within a fixed period. (The rate of interest has been reckoned at 6 per cent. per annum.) This converts the capital into recurring expenditure, which is added to the ordinary recurring cost of salaries, contingencies, including menials, and repairs to buildings and equipment, and the cess levied so as to cover all these charges. The second plan is to arrange the building programme over a number of years, putting heavy capital expenditure early and decreasing it as the recurring expenditure increases owing to the opening of schools. This obviates the taking of any loan with the consequent addition to recurring charges. The disadvantage of the programme is that some rate-payers have to wait some time before they get their own local free school, but the permanent amount of the cess is smaller. It is perfectly fair to work the scheme by a loan, and to allow posterity to pay some of the charges, and that plan has the advantage of allowing all the schools to be opened together in the second year.

185. The towns, then have no cause of complaint against the scheme for collectively, and in many cases individually, they actually spend less by it than they are doing at present. It simply amounts to a way of spending their money to greater advantage by having a common plan. It is quite a different matter in the case of Government. The total capital cost for the 35 towns, as shown in Appendix L (b), is Rs. 19,65,210, of which Government would have to find Rs. 9,82,605. The total recurring cost of salaries, contingencies and repairs to buildings and equipment is Rs. 4,72,193, of which Government would have to find Rs. 2,36,097, as against Rs. 90,984, which is its present contribution. That is to say Government would have to give more than double what they give now. The reason has already been shown to be, not that this demand is too large, but that the amount given hitherto is far too small. The figures given in Appendix L (b) show the financial requirements whether a loan or a programme is adopted.

186. There are 115 municipalities in Bengal, so that 80 remain to be organised. They are for the most part smaller than those already dealt with, for these, with one or two exceptions, are either at district headquarters or close to Calcutta. They would, therefore, cost on an average less than those that have been worked out. The municipalities contain but a very small population of the inhabitants of Bengal, but they are comparatively dense centres of population and are scattered about over the whole provincial area. It is to be recommended that they should all be thoroughly organised and set going as soon as possible, so that the idea of the scheme should have roots everywhere. This is a problem with clear and definite limits and its practical solution within the next few years would set a standard which circumstances would compel all Bengal to follow. Even if only the schemes that have been worked out were to materialise the effect would be proportionately greater than the additional cost.

187. The real problem of primary education ,however lies not in the towns, but in the rural areas. It is perhaps best that the panchayeti union scheme should be abandoned in favour of one for enabling union boards to organise their own complete schemes. They are only now being formed, and some of them are very anxious to accomplish something without delay. They are not able to understand Secretariat delays, and will lose heart if a long interval is allowed to elapse between the moment of their enthusiasm and the commencement of actual work. Bis dat qui cito dat. For this reason the chain of correspondence should be very short and the officer in charge should be given a very wide discretion in according prompt sanction to proposals within certain definite limits and commitments. If this is contrary to Secretariat tradition, I venture respectfully to suggest that, in this matter of primary education, expedition is of such vital importance on account of the human element involved that a departure from custom would be justified.

188. In the 25 districts of Bengal there are altogether about 6,700 unions containing a varying number of people and the widest possible differences of geographical character and grouping of population. It is at present impossible to generalise on any point, as we have only been able to work out some 23 union areas in detail, and to survey a number of others in a more superficial manner. This much, at least, seems clear, that the general plan laid down is applicable to many unions—all that we have examined—and that the district board authorities individually and, through their non-official representatives, collectively have expressed their approval of, and confidence in, the plan if only the financial question can be answered. Several of the new union boards have already expressed their desire to proceed with the scheme at once, and the Khulna District Board has undertaken to work out the proposals as an experiment in three of its unions, and funds have been sanctioned. One's impression is that there is greater earnestness in the matter in the union board areas than in the municipalities. A specimen area, which seems fairly typical, is worked out with a map in Appendix D. It will be noted how at present the schools cluster in parts, leaving other places unprovided, while under the new proposals the whole population gets a chance.

189. The country people are generally inclined to give the teachers free board and lodging. This is probably not quite such a great advantage as its sounds, and it generally involves the rendering of more or less arduous services in return. It has been thought, however, that in fixing rates of pay for the country a rather lower standard may be taken on this account than that laid down for the towns. Rupees 12 has been taken as a minimum and Rs. 24 has been considered sufficient for a head master, all schools being made free. It has also been thought proper to allow for a new type of school, to be called an "infant school." That is to say when there is a group of small children just too far away to be able to walk to the ordinary primary school they might be taught for a couple of years in their own hamlet. These schools might be aided and would only meet for half the ordinary school hours, so that the teacher might do other work, and might teach the infant classes of the neighbouring school as well, or another infant school. This proposal has been welcomed very cordially in most districts. The average number of lower primary schools necessary for a union appears to be 4·4, and these would be fed by an average of 1·7 infant schools.

190. The question as to how capital costs should be met is a difficult one. There is no doubt that when a teacher puts up his own building, he does it amazingly cheaply and keeps it in repair, so that it lasts for very many years. Public authorities cannot work so cheaply, and I am told that a large number of schools that have been put up with public or subscribed funds are falling to pieces, I saw a good many of these. In paragraph 162 above (Chapter VIII), the Village Self-Government Act is quoted as compelling the union board to repair and maintain its schools. This may be left then as a charge on the ordinary income of the union boards. It may be possible to secure existing accommodation in central places, and to manage without special school buildings. This should only be the case where the other course is really impossible. Our plans allow nothing for capital expenditure on infant schools. I have seen quite a number of buildings that were quite well suited for their purpose that had been erected for 50 or 60 boys at a cost of about Rs. 200 to Rs. 300, including everything. This figure can hardly be used, because there is an extraordinary variation in the views expressed in different unions, and much work is needed before we can generalise on the point. Of the unions worked out in detail average estimates obtained in consultation with the people themselves (putting aside one absurdly extravagant one) point to Rs. 1,200 for buildings and Rs. 300 for equipment or Rs. 1,500 in all, as the sort of figure that would have to be allowed for a union board area. If we consider this for all the unions in the province, the bill at once jumps to over a crore, but it is of no use to shudder at these large figures, or even to contemplate them. It is better to adopt the principle of following the development of union boards, of which only about 1,500 are expected to begin work this year and to proceed as rapidly as funds will permit. These 1,500 unions on our calculation would demand twelve and a half lakhs, which is a much more possible figure, large as it is.

191. It is feared that there is no alternative to the whole of this money being found by Government. The district boards might possibly be induced to take up a loan, but there is great nervousness about this, and to press it just now would probably be to defeat the end in view.

192. My recommendation is therefore that during the coming year a much larger number of union board areas (say 500) should be carefully worked out and experiments tried in as many as possible of them, so that we can really look the matter fairly in the face. It would be advisable that among those to be worked out at once there should be a group constituting one whole district, and that a complete scheme of co-ordinated schools, cultural and vocational, should be designed and estimated for at the same time. This would take a year in all for a special officer with necessary assistance; and for this an estimate for the coming year has already been submitted.

193. If this recommendation be accepted, the question of recurring expenditure would be gone into at the same time. Provisional conclusions may, however, be suggested at once, the figures including staff and contingencies, but not repairs. The circumstances of the unions which have been examined point to an average recurring cost per union of something over Rs. 2,600. Subtracting the existing district board grant (made from its own funds), we may say that about Rs. 2,500 would have to be divided equally between Government and the union board, or Rs. 1,250 each per annum.

194. It is, of course, open to serious question whether Government should not contribute a larger proportion of the cost, but, for purposes, of argument, that basis may be accepted for the present. It should also be explained that no increase of district board grants has been estimated for, because, with possibly one or two exceptions, the financial position of the boards is this. They have but few heads of revenue, and these are fixed and inexpansible. Meanwhile wages, salaries and the cost of materials are going up steadily, and insistent demands are being made by other departments, especially that of sanitation, upon the exchequer. So far from an increase being possible, we have rather to fear retrenchment inasmuch as many district boards are handing over certain sources of revenue to the union boards. I sat with officials of the boards and tried hard to find new sources of revenue that might be utilised for primary education. Calcutta has an unworked gold mine awaiting development in an amusement tax on the thousands and tens of thousands of people who go to races, football matches, cinemas, theatres and so on, and who obviously are not short of money; but in the country there seems to be nothing. Taxes on shops, on bridegrooms, and so on were considered, but would not meet the case. The union boards are capable of producing the money if the psychological factor can be put right.

195. The average population of a union area is about 5,600, and the number of holdings something over 1,000. If we divide the Rs. 1,250 at which we arrived in paragraph 193 above for recurring expenditure, it works out at about Re. 1-4 per annum per holding, or between 1 anna and 2 annas per month at a flat rate. Here, again, a percentage would probably be the basis of the levy, but even at a flat rate no real financial hardship would be involved, even for the poorest holder, especially when it is remembered that they are getting the feet of all their boys on the educational ladder without further cost. The children of the very poor would also reap this benefit without any payment.

196. Peasants in generous mood say they are willing to give one, two or even more annas each month to secure free primary education for their people, but as soon as it is suggested that the amount should be raised in the form of a cess, their attitude changes, and they show signs of fear, if not of anger, at the notion. The whole question will, therefore, need most careful handling, and money spent in paying for completely organised unions in different places would be well spent as a means of propaganda, though there would have to be a limit to the period (say five years) during which Government would pay largely for the organisation. At the end of such a period the pioneer unions would fall into line with whatever general system of finance might then have been adopted.

197. Before leaving the subject, it may be desirable to ask the question as to why Government should not pay the whole bill for primary education. This has been put to me as a right by very many people, while others have urged it as matter of policy if we are ever to get anything done. There are, however, difficulties in the way. The whole bill is an enormous one and cannot be undertaken all at once. It is therefore necessary to have some means of selecting the areas which are to be put right first. Those that are keenest will offer to do most, having regard to their resources, and will be the first to derive the benefit. They will be more likely to check waste if they realise that it is their own hard earned money that is being wrongly used. Moreover, if the people know that Government is bound to provide everything, their ideals will overcome all notions of economy. It has been amazingly difficult in the many meetings at which I have been present to get any practical connexion established between what we "should do" and what we can pay for doing. Highly paid teachers of wonderful qualifications, beautiful premises with roads leading to them from every cottage, apparatus and libraries, etc., etc., all these are demanded, but when it comes to paying two or three annas a month towards getting it started, enthusiasm cools and the suggestion is resented in a painful anti-climax. The most weighty reason, then, for rejecting the policy that Government should do everything by indirect taxation is the very urgent need of educating the people in public finance of this simple nature. For this reason a special education cess is probably preferable to a mere increase in rates, though the latter has much to recommend it. Rather than give up the principle it would be better to relieve the union boards of their expenses in connexion with police than those in connexion with education. The proportion paid by Government might be more than half, but for each municipality and union board it ought to be fixed at some definite ratio. To this end it might be well to classify these local bodies according to their resources as needing 80, 70, 60, and 50 per cent. of the expenses as the share of Government. This classification would be more efficiently done by executive officers than I could hope to do it. No attempt is therefore made here to offer such a classified list.

198. Extra Cost of Administration.—It is perhaps not necessary at this stage to estimate the details of the cost of the administrative changes proposed. There would be transfers among members of the departmental clerical staff, but no large increase on that head. The extra cost of appointing District Inspectors in the Provincial Educational Service would be the difference between the average pay of 25 such officers and that of the 25 existing District Deputy Inspectors, namely (Rs. 323 × 25—Rs. 96 × 25, all × 12=Rs. 68,100). This has already been sanctioned in principle by Government. There would also be the salary of the proposed new Director of Elementary Education. The total extra cost would probably not exceed one lakh a year. The Second and Assistant Inspectors would be left with the Divisional Inspectors in the service of the Board of Secondary School and Intermediate College Education.

199. Teachers' Institutions.—As regards finance, it only remains to estimate the cost of the proposed elementary teachers' institutions attached to the social welfare centres near each district headquarters. These institutions would take the place of the existing normal and guru-training schools, and each would train all the elementary teachers of its own district (vide paragraphs 131-136 above). This report is not closely concerned with middle education, so that that department is not estimated for or referred to, except that the number of Provincial Service heads of the existing normal schools at Calcutta, Dacca, Hooghly, Rangpùr and Chittagong have been deducted from the total number (25) of Provincial Service men that would be required.

200. In paragraph 136 in the chapter on the training of teachers' it is stated that ten teachers would be required for each of the primary teachers' institutions. These would be arranged thus—

One Provincial Education Service man, averaging Rs. 323 per month.

Three Subordinate Service men, averaging Rs. 96 each per month—Rs. 288.

Six men of the type now employed as assistants in the newest type of guru-training school and estimated by the Director at Rs. 30 each —Rs. 180.

Menials and contingencies may be reckoned at Rs. 75. This makes a total recurring cost of one school, Rs. 866 per month, or Rs. 10,392 per annum. Taking 25 institutions for the complete scheme, this works out to a recurring cost of Rs. 2,59,800. From this may be deducted the cost of the five Provincial Service men referred to in the preceding paragraph, i.e., Rs. 19,380, leaving Rs. 2,40,420, as against the corresponding figure of Rs. 2,18,040 of the existing scheme regarded as completed, the difference being Rs. 22,380.

201. It has to be remembered that for this it proposed to train (150 × 25) 3,750 teachers in the former, as against (79 × 40), 3,160 in the latter, or nearly 600 more. It must be admitted, nevertheless, that the proposed scheme is the slightly more expensive, each student costing Rs. 64 (£4-4) a year, as aganist Rs. 60 in the existing scheme, apart from the stipends which would be the same man for man in either case, and would be at the rate of Rs. 11 per month as at present.

202. The capital cost of the proposed scheme, apart from land, would be (a) class rooms for 150 students, at 12 square feet per man, costing (say) Rs. 6 per square foot of plinth area, or a total of Rs. 10,800; and (b) hostel accommodation for the same number would cost (150 × 60 square feet × Rs. 6), Rs. 54,000. Class-rooms and hostels together would thus cost Rs. 64,800, or for 25 institutions, Rs. 16,20,000. This is Rs. 12,30,000 less than an estimate for the existing scheme completed for all subdivisions in the province, but from this difference would have to be found quarters for the staff. Even so there would be a substantial saving on capital account if these new proposals were adopted.

CHAPTER X.

Summary and Conclusion.

203. Before closing this Report it seems to be necessary to summarise in a few paragraphs the lines upon which an attempt has been made to grapple with this great and difficult problem of the expansion and improvement of primary education in Bengal in the hope of making it free to all within at most a decade, and compulsory for all boys of 6—10 years of age as soon as possible after facilities have been provided for them all.

204. Chapter I contains a reference to the orders under which the Report has been prepared, and in it the problem is envisaged as only one phase of a much larger social problem, namely that of advancing a simple and, in some parts of the country, a primitive civilization up the long and steep road of progress. The ideal is a spiritual one, the attainment of which involves a fixed purpose. The accomplishment of this purpose is necessarily conditioned by the adoption of means which take into account the existing material and social environment of the individual, and is only to be brought to pass by and in a triumphant struggle of the individual against that environment on behalf of society. The first stage of this progress must be to give the opportunity of enlightenment to all. But there are certain reasons that may be urged against the spread of literacy; these are of comparatively small importance in relation to the larger issues involved, though they must be carefully borne in mind so that dangers may be avoided as far as possible. The spirit of courageous adventure must characterize our plans rather than that of mere discretion, for India is far behind in the race.

205. Chapter II sets out to examine the course of events that has led to the existing conditions and displays these conditions themselves. Two antagonistic policies of the past can now be reconciled. Recognising the good results of the long struggles of the past it is clear that a new departure is now demanded. The chapter closes with a comparison of Bengal with other provinces, especially as regards finance.

206. Chapter III shows the nature of the organisation that is now required in primary education, the method of bringing it into being, and its relations with other educational activities, the whole constituting a complete national system of schools. Actual examples have been worked out to illustrate the proposed system.

207 Chapter IV deals with the difficult question of religion in the public schools and recommends a method for meeting the wishes of the people who desire definite religious and other special instruction for their children.

208. Chapter V shows the economic aspect of the general social problem, illustrating what is being done in the way of training in agriculture and industries. It proposes a method of providing instruction in crafts, industries and agriculture at a low stage of specialization. A new class of institution is suggested at which all efforts in the direction of social development at that stage will at first centre. These institutions are to be called "Social Welfare Centres."

209. Chapter VI indicates the inadequacy of the present pay of teachers, and shows that this must be improved if better men are to be found for the training schools. The difficulties of training and keeping teachers are set forth, and new "Teachers' Institutions" to be connected with the "Social Welfare Centres" are proposed to take the place of the existing Normal and Guru Training Schools. The number of teachers turned out annually is compared with the number required, and the existing scheme is compared with that now proposed. A plan of giving certificates, and licenses, permanent and temporary, is suggested for the new national system.

210. Chapter VII opens with a statistical paragraph on middle and primary schools, and discusses generally the questions of sites, buildings, equipment and sanitation. It enters into the causes of inefficiency and makes suggestions for improvement. The chapter closes with proposals as to a method of applying compulsion in school areas.

211. Chapter VIII describes the difficulties of subordinate inspecting officers and proposes certain changes. Municipal and Union Board school committees containing representatives of the teachers are suggested. The present administrative machinery is shewn to be overburdened and unnecessarily complicated as far as elementary education is concerned. New arrangements are suggested and reasons for them advanced. An examination of the Bengal Primary Education Act concludes the chapter.

212. Chapter IX takes up the all-important question of finance, but stresses the fact that the problem is at least equally a psychological one. Bengal is compared with other provinces. Mr. West's estimates for a complete scheme of primary education are examined, and the minimum salary that can be considered suitable in the circumstances is laid down. Detailed estimates for 35 municipalities are discussed with their financial implications for the local bodies and for Government. The extension of the scheme to all municipalities is advocated. The rural problem is taken up, and the power to deal promptly with willing but ignorant people is shown to be necessary. Estimates for rural schemes are considered and the need for further experiment emphasised. The question as to how far Government should provide primary schools from indirect taxation is opened. The additional cost of the proposed changes in administration is estimated. The finances of fairly complete provision for training teachers for the province on the present and the proposed plans are compared.

213. Chapter X summarizes the chapters of the Report and proceeds to lay down the points on which the decisions of Government are needed.

214. Decisions are called for upon the following points:—

A.—Whether universal literacy is to be the definite aim of Government. The answer is taken to be in the affirmative.

B.—Whether provision is to be made in the schools for the religious instruction of those children whose parents desire it.

C.—Whether (1) the present plan of giving grants to schools started by private enterprise is to be continued, or (2) whether the available public funds are to be gradually transferred to a carefully organised national system of public schools situated in school areas covering the whole population of Bengal.

D.—If C (2) is adopted, whether the system is to be co-ordinated to make provision at every stage for vocational education.

E.—If D is answered in the affirmative, whether the vocational training is at first to be given in central schools at which the agricultural and industrial activities of the district are to be focussed, and vocational teachers trained.

F.—If E is answered in the affirmative, whether an attempt should be made to develop the proposed " Social Welfare Centres " at the same places.

G.—Whether the training of elementary (middle and primary) school teachers should be centralised for each district.

H.—Whether, when the new university, and secondary school and intermediate college organisations are developed, there should also be a reformed and simplified organisation for the control of elementary education closely connected with that of the local bodies which are to control primary schools.

I.—Whether, if so, the new organisation should be under the Minister of Education or the Minister of Local Self-Government.

J.—Whether primary education is to be made free in the near future, provision being made for compulsion within (say) ten years.

K.—If so, and if a public system of schools is to be developed, whether the whole cost is to be borne by the Provincial Government and, if this last point is decided in the negative, what proportion of the cost the central Government will bear generally or for individual local bodies.

L.—Whether, in the event of a local body declaring itself unable to meet its share of the expense, the levy of a special education cess, or of an increased rate, shall be made compulsory or not.

M.—Whether, in the event of a decision to adopt a national system of free schools, schemes should be proceeded with at once for all the municipalities, and a large number of union board areas, to be budgetted for in the coming year.

215. It may be said in conclusion that the recommendations of this Report have received approval from the large majority of those who have been consulted about them so far as the principles, the policy, the plans and even the estimates are concerned. The difficulty arises rather over the method than the amount of payment. This is a matter of high policy which must be left to the decision of Government in the interests of the children of Bengal.

BENGAL ACT No. IV OF 1919.

THE BENGAL PRIMARY EDUCATION ACT, 1919.

[Published in the Calcutta Gazette of the 14th May, 1919.]

An Act to provide for the extension of primary education in Municipalities and in certain other areas in Bengal.

WHEREAS it is expedient to provide for the extension of primary education in Municipalities and in certain other areas in Bengal;

PART I.

Preliminary.

Short title and extent.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Bengal Primary Education Act, 1919.

(2) It extends in the first instance to all Municipalities in Bengal:—

Provided that the Local Government may, by a notification published in the Calcutta Gazette, extend the provisions of this Act, with such modifications, for the purpose of adaptation, as they may deem fit, to any area in a Union constituted under section 38 of the Bengal Local Self-Government Act of 1885, and may authorize the Union Committee for such area to exercise and perform all or any of the powers and duties conferred and imposed on the Commissioners by this Act, subject to such control by the District or Local Board as the Local Government may prescribe. Ben. Act III of 1885.

Definitions.

2. In this Act, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context,—

(1) "to attend a recognized primary school" means to be present for instruction at such school for so many and on such days in the year and at such time or times on each day as may be prescribed by the School Committee for such school, subject to the rules and orders of the Education Department of the Local Government;

(2) "Commissioners" means the persons for the time being appointed or elected to conduct the affairs of a Municipality;

(3) "guardian" includes a parent or any person who is liable to support, or has the custody of, a boy not being less than six or more than ten years of age;

(4) "Municipality" means Calcutta, as defined in clause (7) of section 3 of the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1899, or any place in which the Bengal Municipal Act, 1884, is in force; Ben. Act III of 1899. Ben. Act III of 1884.

(5) "primary education" means such elementary education as may be prescribed from time to time for primary schools by the Education Department of the Local Government;

(6) "recognized primary school" means a school (or a department of a school) appropriated to primary education and for the time being recognized by the Education Department of the Local Government for the purposes of such education; and (7) "School Committee" means a committee constituted under section 7.

PART II.

Voluntary Primary Education.

Statement to be submitted by Municipalities.

3. Within one year from the commencement of this Act or within such other period as may be prescribed by the Local Government in this behalf, the Commissioners shall submit to the Local Government a detailed statement, in such form as may be prescribed by the Local Government, containing the following particulars in respect of the Municipality:—

(a) (i) the number of children, not being less than six or more than eleven years of age, within the Municipality;

(ii) the number of boys, not being less than six or more than ten years of age, therein;

(b) the school accommodation for the staff of, and the attendance at, existing primary schools;

(c) the school accommodation, staff and equipment required if suitable and adequate provision were to be made for the primary education of—

(i) all children referred to in clause (a) (i) likely to attend primary schools voluntarily; and

(ii) all boys referred to in clause (a) (ii):

(d) the manner in which and the periods within which it will be possible to provide the necessary school accommodation, staff and equipment referred to in clause (c) under the direct management and control of the Municipality;

(e) the existing expenditure incurred by the Municipality on primary education and the expenditure to be incurred yearly in order to provide such school accommodation, staff and equipment;

(f) the receipts already available, and the income including the probable receipts from any education cess that may in future be levied under section 17, which it may be estimated will be available to meet such expenditure; and

(g) the amount of grant or assistance from the Government which the Commissioners consider would be necessary to enable them to provide for primary education within the Municipality, or any part thereof.

Commissioners to make provision for primary education.

4. The Local Government, after considering the statement required by section 3 and the conditions and resources of the Municipality, and after determining the amount of financial assistance from the Government which may be necessary in order to provide for primary education within the Municipality, may, if satisfied that the Municipality is able to meet the expenditure involved, direct the Commissioners to provide the necessary school accommodation, staff and the equipment for all children, not being less than six or more than eleven years of age, likely to attend primary schools voluntarily within the Municipality and to assume the direct management and control of all such schools.

PART III.

Compulsory Primary Education.

Operation of Part III.

5. The provisions of this Part shall not come into operation until a notification has been issued under section 6, sub-section (2).

Primary education when to be declared compulsory.

6. (1) If, after complying with the directions of the Local Government under section 4, the Commissioners are of opinion that the Primary education of all boys, not being less than six or more than ten years of age, should be made compulsory within the Municipality, or any part thereof, they may apply to the Local Government, in such manner as may be prescribed by rules made by the Local Government, for permission to introduce therein compulsory primary education for such boys.

(2) The Local Government, after considering the application and after determining the financial assistance from the Government which may be necessary to provide for compulsory primary education within the Municipality, shall, if satisfied that the Municipality is able to meet the expenditure involved, grant the permission asked for, and the Commissioners shall thereupon cause a notification to be issued declaring that primary education shall be compulsory for all such boys within the Municipality, or any part thereof, as the case may be.

(3) Every notification issued under this section shall be published in the Calcutta Gazette and in the local newspapers, if any, and shall be posted up at the Municipal office and at such other places, as the Commissioners shall deem necessary, specifying the date on and from which primary education shall be compulsory within the Municipality, or any part thereof.

(4) No notification shall be issued by the Commissioners under this section except in pursuance of a resolution passed at a special general meeting convened for the purpose and at which not less than two-thirds of the total number of Commissioners are present.

Constitution of School Committee.

7. When a notification has been issued in any Municipality under section 6, sub-section (2), the Commissioners shall appoint a School Committee, to be constituted in such manner as may be prescribed by rules made under section 15:

Provided that a Deputy Inspector or a Sub-Inspector of Schools, at least one Commissioner and one or more residents of the Municipality, other than a Commissioner, shall be members of the Committee.

Duty of guardian to send boy to school.

8. (1) In every area to which the provisions of this Part apply, it shall be the duty of the guardian of every boy, not being less than six or more than ten years of age, residing within that area to cause such boy to attend a recognized primary school unless, in the opinion of the School Committee, there is a reasonable excuse for his non-attendance.

(2) Any of the following circumstances shall be deemed to be a reasonable excuse within the meaning of this section:—

(a) that there is no recognized primary school within a distance of one mile, measured by the shortest route, from the residence of the boy which he can attend, and to which the guardian has no reasonable objection to send the boy;

(b) that the boy is prevented from attending the school by reason of sickness, infirmity, domestic necessity, the seasonal needs of agriculture or of his being the sole breadwinner of his family;

(c) that the boy is receiving education in some other satisfactory manner.

rder of Magistrate compel attendance.

9. (1) If the School Committee is satisfied that a guardian who is required under section 8 to cause a boy to attend a recognized primary school, has failed to do so, it shall, after giving a warning in writing to such guardian, apply to a Magistrate for an order to compel the guardian to enforce the attendance of such boy; and the Magistrate shall fix a day for the hearing of the application and cause notice thereof to be given to such guardian.

(2) On the day fixed for the hearing of the application or on any subsequent day to which it may be adjourned, and after hearing the guardian or his authorized agent, if present, the Magistrate, if satisfied that the facts alleged in the application are true, may pass an order directing the guardian to cause such boy to attend a recognized primary school from a date to be specified in such order.

nalty for failure obey order.

10. (1) Any guardian who fails to comply with an order passed under section 9 shall, on conviction before a Magistrate, be liable to a fine not exceeding five rupees and also to a recurring fine not exceeding one rupee for each day after the first during which he continues so to offend.

(2) No Magistrate shall take cognizance of an offence under this section except on the complaint of the School Committee.

ohibition of nployment of ys.

11. No person shall, without the permission of the School Committee, employ any boy not being less than six or more than ten years of age, who is required to attend a recognized primary school under this Part:

Provided that such permission shall not be necessary if the employment of the boy does not interfere with his attendance at such school.

12. (1) The School Committee may prosecute any person who, after due warning, contravenes the provisions of section 11.

(2) Unless such person satisfies the Magistrate that there is a reasonable excuse, within the meaning of section 8, sub-section (2), for the non-attendance of the boy, or that the time and nature of employment of the boy are such that he is not prevented from attending a recognized primary school, or that the boy was taken into employment under false representations as to age, residence and other conditions, such person shall, on conviction before a Magistrate, be liable to a fine not exceeding twenty rupees.

legation of me of the funcns of the School mmittee.

13. An application to a Magistrate under section 9 or a complaint to a Magistrate under section 10 or section 12, may be made on behalf of the School Committee by such person as may be authorized by the School Committee by general or special order in this behalf.

emission of fees.

14. When primary education has made compulsory in any municipality, or any part thereof, if a guardian, who is required under the provisions of this Part to cause a boy to attend a recognized primary school, satisfies the School Committee that he is unable to pay the fees or any part of the fees ordinarily charged in such school, such boy shall be admitted to such school free of charge, or at such reduced fees as the School Committee may determine, for the period during which the guardian is required to cause the boy to attend a recognized primary school.

wer of Comissioners to make es.

15. The Commissioners may, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, make rules prescribing—

(a) the manner in which the School Committee shall be constituted, the number of its members, its duties and its mode of transacting business;

(b) the steps which the School Committee may take to secure the attendance of boys at school.

emption from mpulsory educaon.

16. The Local Government may, by notification in the Calcutta Gazette, exempt any class of persons or any community, in any area to which this Act extends, from the operation of this Part.

PART IV.

Education Cess.

lucation cess.

17. (1) If the existing resources of any Municipality including any grant from the Government, are not sufficient to cover the cost of primary education within the Municipality, the Commissioners may, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, impose a tax, to be called the "education cess"; and all amounts derived therefrom shall be devoted solely to the purposes of primary education, whether voluntary or compulsory, within the Municipality.

(2) An education cess shall not be imposed unless the Commissioners by a resolution passed at a special general meeting convened for the purpose and in favour of which two-thirds of the Commissioners have voted, determine to impose such cess.

(3) The education cess shall be levied in such manner as may be prescribed by rules made by the Local Government, and the cess so levied shall be a rate amounting to the sum required, after deducting the Government grant, the school receipts and the receipts from endowments and contributions, to meet the expenditure on primary education, together with ten per cent. above such sum to meet the collection charges and the probable losses due to non-realization from defaulters.

PART V.

Supplemental.

Power of Local Government to make rules.

18. (1) The Local Government may, after previous publication, make rules to carry out the purposes of this Act.

(2) In particular, and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power, the Local Government may make rules prescribing the manner in which—

(a) applications under section 6, sub-section (1), shall be made ; and (b) the education cess shall be levied.

(3) All rules made under this section shall be published in the Calcutta Gazette.

Schools to be open to inspection.

19. All primary schools maintained by the Commissioners within a Municipality, or any parts thereof, under the provisions of this Act shall be open to inspection free of any charge by the inspecting officers of the Education Department of the Local Government and such other persons as the Local Government may appoint in this behalf.

Act XLV of 1860.

Certain persons to be deemed public servants.

20. Every person authorized by the School Committee under section 13 and every officer and servant of the School Committee, shall be deemed to be a pulic servant within the meaning of section 21 of the Indian Penal Code.

Withdrawal of notification on default.

21. When, in the opinion of the Local Government, the Commissioners have made default in any of the requirements of Part III of this Act, the Local Government may, after considering any explanation of the Commissioners, by a notification in the Calcutta Gazette, stating the grounds of such order, cancel any notification which has been issued under section 6, sub-section (1).

APPENDIX B.

Nos. 188-193T.—Edn., dated Darjeeling, the 2nd June 1919.

From—The HON'BLE MR. L. S. O'MALLEY, C.I.E., I.C.S., Secretary to the Government of Bengal, General Department.

To—The Commissioners of the (1) Presidency Division, (2) Burdwan Division, (3) Dacca Division, (4) Rajshahi Division, (5) Chittagong Division and (6) The Chairman, Calcutta Corporation.

I AM directed to address you on the subject of the extension of primary education in municipal areas.

2. Section 3 of the Primary Education Act, which was passed by the Bengal Legislative Council on the 27th March 1919 and published in the Calcutta Gazette of the 14th May 1919 as Act IV (B. C.) of 1919, provides that each municipality shall submit, within one year from the commencement of the Act or within such period as may be prescribed by the local Government, returns showing—

(1) the total number of children between the ages of 6 and 11 within the municipality ;

(2) the number of boys aged 6 to 10 ;

(3) the number actually attending primary schools ; and

(4) the provision now made for primary education, e.g., the schools in existence, their accommodation, staff and equipment.

3. Municipalites are also required to preqare a programme for providing primary education for all children aged 6 to 11 likely to attend schools voluntarily and also for all boys aged 6 to 10, together with an estimate of cost for each of the programmes and a statement of the methods by which the cost can be met. Section 4 empowers the local Government, on receipt of these statements and after considering the conditions and resources of the municipality, and also after determining the amount of financial assistance they will be able to contribute, to direct any municipality to provide, within a suitable period, the necessary school accommodation, staff and equipment for children aged 6 to 11 likely to attend schools voluntarily and to take over the complete management of all primary schools within its jurisdiction. If, however, it is found that the existing resources of the municipality, together with any grant which Government may sanction, are not sufficient to cover the cost of primary education within it, the Municipal Commissioners may, under section 17 of the Act, levy an educational cess with the previous sanction of the local Government. This cess may be levied as a contribution towards the cost of primary education on either a voluntary or a compulsory basis. Under section 17 (3) of the Act it shall, if levied, be a rate amounting to the sum which, after deducting the Government grant, the school receipts and the receipts from endowments and contributions, will be required to meet the expenditure on primary education together with 10 per cent. above such sum to defray collection charges and probable losses due to non-realization from defaulters.

4. The Governor in Council is anxious that the scheme contemplated in the Act should be given effect to as soon as possible, and I am, therefore, to request that you will be so good as to obtain from the Municipalities in your Division / Corporation of Calcutta. at an early date the information required under section 3 of the Act in the accompanying forms together with a statement of their views as to the manner and periods within which it would be possible to provide necessary school accommodation, staff and equipment for—

(a) all children aged 6 to 11 likely to attend primary schools voluntarily; and (b) all boys aged 6 to 10.

The Deputy Inspectors and Sub-Inspectors of Schools are being instructed to give the municipalities assistance in preparing the returns.

APPENDIX C.

No. $\frac{296}{337}$, dated Calcutta, the $\frac{23rd}{31st}$ December 1920.

From—EVAN E. BISS, ESQ., I.E.S., Special Officer for Primary Education, Bengal.

To—The Chairman of the Municipality, $\frac{\text{Howrah.}}{\text{Rangpur.}}$ etc.

As you are perhaps aware I have been placed on special duty to make recommendations with a view to the expansion and improvement of primary education in municipalities and district board areas in Bengal. This object is of the greatest interest because of the importance of improving the intelligence, and hence the power of production of the masses of the people. I have now visited a considerable number of places with this end in view, and schemes are being prepared upon lines which have features which are new in the country. Two main guiding principles have been kept in view in working out schemes, (I) that of co-ordination and (II) that of concentration.

2. It is found that the lower primary school is being widely used as an institution preparatory to middle and high schools. While recognising and approving of this it may be admitted that the primary school was originally intended for children whose education, for economic and other reasons, must be of a very limited character. Up till now there has been overlapping between the curricula of the primary and the higher stages of education, and consequent loss of time in passing from one to the other. The application of the principle of co-ordination involves the recognition of both functions of the lower primary school, the classes of which may be made to serve as preparatory on the one hand to middle schools and middle departments of high schools, and on the other to the final or upper primary standard or standards, in which the primary course should be rounded off with teaching and training of a vocational character. The lower primary school, thus becoming the foundation of the whole fabric of a national system of education, must be regarded as of the greatest importance both in respect of its quality and of the number of children that can be educated in it. Diagram I attached to this letter illustrates what is meant by one of many possible typical arrangements of classes in a co-ordinated school system. Incidentally I shall be glad to have your opinion and that of the Commissioners as to the advisability and practicability of establishing public certificate examinations at the lower and upper primary and middle stages.

3. The second principle is that of concentration. Up till now it has been usual for primary schools to take their origin either from the financial necessities of a pundit who starts a school in order to add to his income, or to the enterprise of a gentleman who has children to educate and who persuades others to join him in securing the services of a pundit to teach on a verandah or any convenient hut or shed that can be found. In either case the authorities are approached for a grant-in-aid the assessment of which is the work of a subordinate inspecting officer who is often only too glad to see the number of schools in his area increased. As soon as one pundit is successful another often comes to share the spoils. The schools thus started are of necessity unevenly distributed over the population and inefficient, their buildings are generally bad, their equipment is often non-existent, their sites are in many cases insanitary, their teachers are in almost all instances very poorly paid and, as a result, usually ill-qualified and dependent upon other sources of income which absorb their attention and energy. The teachers are expected at one time to teach several groups of children at different stages of progress, and are often compelled to leave the majority to look after themselves while the children of patrons or candidates for scholarships are pushed on.

4. As a result of this state of things parents who desire to have their children educated grow disgusted and remove them from schools which induce habits of idleness and do so little good that they appear to be chiefly valued as crêches. This is illustrated from the following statistics (1918-19) showing how many children enter school and the rate at which they are removed after the Infant Stage, i.e., before literacy is attained :—

	1st Year Infants.	2nd Year Infants.	I.	II.
TOTAL	5,39,133	3,70,241	2,53,699	2,07,014
Loss	.....	1,68,892	1,16,542	46,685

A very frequent reply to my enquiry of parents as to why their children are not at school is that the schools do not teach anything. What we must aim at in well populated municipal areas is therefore, not more schools, but better schools. If, however, a sufficient number of good teachers is appointed to a large number of small schools the cost per child will become prohibitive. It is therefore necessary to concentrate the children in fewer schools than at present, but distributed on a well considered plan and containing a greater aggregate of children.

5. Many advantages arise from the application of this principle.

(i) Administrative advantages :—From the administrative point of view it is more economical for an inspector to visit a few large schools than many small ones, for in the former case, a much smaller proportion of his time is spent in moving from one to another. If the teachers are paid salaries instead of grants the inspecting officers will lose no time in the assessment of the latter, the discussion of financial business, or the making out of bills; for the head teachers might simply call at the Municipal Office once a month for the pay of the staff, etc. This would entail but little work in the Municipal Office as the amount would be fixed, and the number of schools would be small. Inspecting officers would thus be in a position to do more truly educational work.

6. Other advantages will be evident from a consideration of Diagram II (attached). The comparison is between a school of 300 and three schools of 100 children. Of course many municipalities could not establish any school of 300 children but the principle is the same as between larger and smaller schools whatever their numbers, between the limits of (say) 300 and 20. Both (a) and (b) in Diagram II are lower primary schools with four classes I, II, III, IV reckoned from the bottom upwards. The existing decrease of children towards the higher classes is accepted as a fact, and the classes are divided into sections giving no teacher more than 30 children at one time.

(ii) Teaching advantages.—In the larger school each teacher uses his full power, viz., on 30 children, and concentrates on children all at the same stage ; in the smaller school the two lowest sections are below 30 thus wasting teaching power, while in classes III and IV there is a distraction of attention between two classes under one teacher.

(iii) Staffing advantages.—The larger school can be quite adequately staffed by 10 teachers, while three smaller ones would need (4 × 3) 12, a serious loss of economy.

(iv) Financial advantages.—Scales of pay on similar lines might be :—

300 Children.		100 Children.
Rs.		Rs.
40	Head Teacher.	30	Head Teacher.
25, 25, 25	Assistants.	25, 20, 15	Assistants.
20, 20, 20	Do.	10	Contingencies, etc.
15, 15, 15	Do.	Total 100	p. m. or Rs. 1,200 per annum.
30	Contingencies, menials and prizes.
Total 250	p. m. or Rs. 3,000 per annum.

It will be seen that, though the scale for the larger school is proportionately more generous than that for the smaller one, a child only costs Rs. 10 per annum under the former and Rs. 12 under the latter. It is also clear that a much better man can be obtained on Rs. 40 than on Rs. 30 as head master.

7. (v) Buildings advantage :—Several engineers whom I have consulted have told me that a single large building is more economical to construct than a corresponding number of smaller ones.

8. (vi) Special requirements :—In the larger schools of the better class it would also be much easier to provide for the teaching of English in its earlier stages, and for other special requirements.

9. (vii) Future compulsion :—Finally, we may consider that educational policy will tend to develop from :—

(a) The present stage of private effort with fees and grants, through (b) Municipal effort with fees, free places and salaries, and (c) „ „ free voluntary education, to (d) „ „ „ compulsory „

The full consummation (i.e., d.) may not be reached for ten years or even more, but we shall make it more possible by mapping out definite primary school areas with central schools which will come to be recognised by all as the municipal primary schools of the neighbourhood. It is a matter for consideration as to what kind of attempt is to be made to develop some economical system of registration and attendance with a view to future compulsion. This could probably best be done by small allowances to the more responsible of the teachers in each central school. Of these it would be possible to arrange for only Hindu attendance officers to visit Hindu houses and for only Mohammadans to go to the houses of their own community. These attendance officers would only report cases of non-attendance to the compelling authority after privately giving the parents an opportunity of complying with the law. Such an arrangement would obviously be impossible where the schools were all scattered, small pathsalas and maktabs.

10. Such being the principles and policy suggested, it is now necessary to devise a plan for their application in the particular case of your own municipality. The Bengal Primary Education Act, section 8 (2) (a), contemplates one mile as a walking distance for boys at school, but we may reduce this by half in our plan. Boys of 6—11 years of age may safely be expected to walk half-a-mile to school, and it may be borne in mind that the extreme case in our plan is that of the boy of six who has to walk half-a-mile. Most boys will be more than six years of age and will have less than half-a-mile to walk. If therefore we take a map of the municipality, first setting aside areas which are land, uninhabited or almost so, on account of water, cultivation, or jungle, and then deciding upon the principal centres of population, we shall be able to describe circles of not more than half-a-mile radius from these centres so as roughly to cover the main part of the population of the municipality. The number of these circles should be as small as is consistent with a reasonably complete provision of schools for all the children.

11. The next step is to decide how many boys and girls are to be accommodated in their respective central schools in each school area, and to make sure that the total allows for some definite expansion of the present number of children at school.

12. The size of each site must next be decided. Half-a-bigha is generally enough. The method of tenure has also to be thought of whether by purchase, long lease, gift, etc. The cost, capital or recurring, if any, should be clearly indicated in each area.

13. The type of building will be decided by local requirements. Pucca buildings cost proportionately less in repairs, but more in capital charges. It is not desirable to give children buildings that are palatial as compared with their own houses, and yet a pattern of neatness, order, and, if possible, of beauty should be set in the school premises. A pucca plinth, mat walls, an iron or tiled roof with a ceiling that will keep out the heat is generally suitable and economical. You will no doubt be able to obtain figures showing the local cost per square foot of plinth area for buildings of this or any other type.

14. In considering equipment it is necessary to be as economical as possible. The children in the lower classes may well sit on mats placed on the floor, only the higher classes being given desks and benches. A blackboard and easel will be needed for each section of a class, and each teacher will need a table and a chair. A clock and a bell or gong that can be heard half-a-mile away are desirable to ensure punctuality. Rs. 3 to Rs. 5 per child is a fair estimate.

15. The annual recurring cost per child may be reckoned at Rs. 10, 11 and 12 respectively in schools of 300, 200, and 100. This includes staff, menials and contingencies. I would very strongly urge that the pay proposed is the minimum from which efficiency can be hoped.

16. The capital cost of the whole scheme will be the sum of the expenditure needed under the heads of (i) site, (ii) building and (iii) equipment. If convenient this may possibly be converted into recurring cost by raising a loan and paying interest upon it. It is generally found that, after deducting present expenditure, the new expenditure, even including the interest on a loan and the gradual repayment of capital sums, could be met by a very moderate educational cess levied in accordance with section 17 of the Bengal Primary Education Act of 1919, if the Provincial Government were to meet half the cost. No guarantee can, of course, be given by me on this point, I can only say that it is extremely unlikely that they will pay more than half. People who have children at school, whether in the primary department of high or middle schools on the one hand, or in pathsalas on the other, will generally find the cess far less expensive than the fees they are paying. People who have no children are for that very reason probably in a position to pay the cess, because their ordinary expenses must be small. The levy of such an education cess would be an indication of the mutual co-operation of your citizens through their representatives in order to give the children of your town what is now universally regarded as the minimum of education for a civilized people.

17. In conclusion I would venture to emphasise the importance of coming to a decision as to principles, policy and plan even if payment is difficult at the moment and has to be postponed or spread over a number of years I therefore suggest that the municipal authority should come to separate resolutions on these points after considering the scheme as a whole. The amount brought in by fees will possibly be so inconsiderable that you may perhaps decide upon the bold policy of giving free education in each school area as its arrangements are completed.

18. I beg to enclose a draft scheme (vide sattements A and B) for your consideration and, if you so desire, amendment and revision. I trust you will let me have the municipal scheme in its final form as soon as possible, of course, after the full municipal body has considered and come to a formal decision upon it at a special general meeting summoned for the purpose (vide Bengal Primary Education Act, 1919 Sec. 17 (2)).

NOTE.—1. A boy coming to the top of any stage of four classes would have to decide either to finish on the left or to progress on the right.
2. In a really efficient set of four lower primary classes an intelligent boy could finish the work in two years instead of four.

NOTES :—(a) The disadvantage of such a programme is that though all rate-payers have to pay the cess from the first year, some of them have to wait for two years or more before reaping any benefit from the scheme. This disadvantage is, of course, inherent in all schemes which depend for capital expenditure upon annually raised income. Alternatives are :—(i) Gifts of sites and buildings by the benevolent, and (ii) a loan covering the capital cost, the interest being added to the recurring expenditure, preferably with a margin allowing of a sinking fund for paying off the debt in 40 years. If a loan can be raised by the municipality at 6 per cent. per annum the whole recurring expenditure will be Rs. 48,000, and the cess will be Rs. 2-3-0 per rate-payer at flat rate, or ·7 per cent. on the municipal valuation. In this case the building could all be done in the first year and the schools all started in the second.

(b) The total gain during the programme will therefore be Rs. 1,800. It will be spent for repairs during the second to the ninth years of the programme. If the above programme is adopted, the cess will be Re. 1-8 annas per rate-payer (number of ratepayers 22,000) at flat rate per annum or ·5 per cent. per annum on the municipal valuation.

Alternatives are :—(i) Gifts of sites and buildings by the benevolent, and (ii) a loan covering the capital cost, the interest being added to the recurring expenditure, preferably with a margin allowing of sinking fund for paying off the debt in 25 years. DRAFT RESOLUTIONS EMBODYING A SCHEME FOR A SYSTEM OF PRIMARY EDUCATION ON A VOLUNTARY BASIS IN THE MUNICIPALITY OF..... .....

That the policy of gradually developing a complete system of co-ordinated schools, vocational and cultural, be adopted for this municipality. Resolution No. 1.

That the division of the populated portions of the town into primary school areas (vide map) each to contain a central municipal primary school for boys be agreed to. Resolution No. 2.

That, as each of these municipal schools is opened all municipal grants to other boys' primary day schools in the area so provided shall be withdrawn after due notice. (Any exceptions made for special reasons may be noted). Resolution No. 3.

That, in order to prevent hardship, as far as suitable teachers from existing schools are available, they shall be employed in the municipal schools but without prejudice to any new appointments that may be necessary. Resolution No. 4.

That Statement A attached to the covering letter be accepted as the estimate of the cost of the scheme mentioned in resolution No. 2 above. Resolution No. 5.

That an application be made to the Government of Bengal that they may be pleased to grant one-half of the capital and recurring costs of the scheme. Resolution No. 6.

That, if the application mentioned in Resolution No. 6 above be successful, the programme of expenditure shall be as set forth in Statement B attached to the covering letter. Resolution No. 7.

That no idea of making education compulsory for girls be entertained, but that every effort be made to increase the number of girls under instruction; and that for this end all possible use should be made of the improved staffs and buildings now under contemplation *; and that the present municipal grants for boys' schools be devoted to those for girls as soon as they are set free by the completion of the new scheme.† Resolution No. 8.

* e. g. in the early morning.

† i. e. unless a separate scheme is to be worked out for girls, in which case additional resolutions and statement may be drawn up.

That the municipal share of the annual expenditure proposed (Rs.) shall be met from the following sources :— Resolution No. 9.

i. Rs. from the ordinary income of the Municipality.

ii. Rs. from endowments. etc.

iii. Rs. from a separate education cess (vide Bengal Primary Education Act of 1919, Section 17 (1) (2) (3)§ levied at a flat rate of Rs. per rate-payer* or at the rate of per cent. on the municipal valuation.†

iv. Rs. (here state any other source of income that is available.)

§ Section 17 of the Bengal Primary Education Act of 1919.

"17. (1) If the existing resources of any Municipality, including any grant from the Government, are not sufficient to cover the cost of primary education within the Municipality, the Commissioners may, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, impose a tax, to be called the "Education Cess"; and all amounts derived therefrom shall be devoted solely to the purposes of primary education, whether voluntary or compulsory, within the Municipality.

(2) An education cess shall not be imposed unless the Commissioners, by a resolution passed at a special general meeting convened for the purpose and in favour of which two-thirds of the Commissioners have voted, determine to impose such cess.

(3) The education cess shall be levied in such manner as may be prescribed by rules made by the Local Government, and the cess so levied shall be a rate amounting to the sum required, after deducting the Government grant, the school receipts and the receipts from endowments and contributions, to meet the expenditure on primary education, together with ten per cent. above such sum to meet the collection charges and the probable losses due to non-realization from defaulters.

†The municipal valuation is Rs.

That the sanction of the Government of Bengal be obtained for the levy of an education cess from 1st April, 1921; and that consequently lower primary education be made free in this Municipality from 1st April 192 . Resolution No. 10

The number of children at school in the 12 years 1900-01 to 1912-13 increased by 45·8 per cent., while the population only increased by 7·9 per cent. This is satisfactory. Later census figures are not available, but the number of children now (1919-20) at school, as compared with 1900-01, shows an increase of 64·9 per cent. In spite of this apparently satisfactory percentage of increase, the fact remains that the number of child en of suitable age, who were not at school in 1912-13 (5,419,377) was greater than the number in 1900-01 (5,352,047). This makes it plain that our rate of progress must be substantially accelerated, especially as only about one quarter of the children in school appear to become literate.

NOTE 1.—In 1919-20 the number of primary schools had increased by 10,278 as compared with 1914-15, and that of the pupils by 185,822. The average strength of the additional schools would, therefore, be only 18 even if the total increase was confined to them. On the other hand, the average strength of a school, which was 34 in 1914-15, became 30 in 1919-20. Thus the increase in the number of pupils is quite incommensurate with that of the schools.

NOTE 2.—There were in 1919-20 four trained teachers for every 19 primary schools.

APPENDIX H (a).

Resolutions regarding agricultural education passed by the Board of Agriculture at Poona in 1917.

(1) That an improvement in the economic condition of the agricultural population in India is a matter of the most fundamental and urgent importance to the country.

(2) That, whatever expenditure may be undertaken in connection with general rural, or definitely agricultural education, there should be no resulting diminution in, or limitation of the funds or staff that are necessary for the maintenance and progressive development of the research and demonstration work which are the main functions of the Agricultural Department.

(3) That for the rapid development of agriculture in India a sound system of rural education based on rural needs is essential, that the present system is wholly inadequate in respect of the provision of suitable text-books and premises, and, above all, in respect of the training and pay of teachers.

(4) That the carrying out of the revolutionary improvements that are needed in the system of rural education is primarily among the functions of the Education Department, but that there should be co-operation between that Department and the Agricultural Department in effecting the necessary changes.

(5) That these changes will involve the expenditure of very large sums of money, and will raise a financial problem of the first magnitude and importance; and that the provision of the necessary funds, whether by local taxation or otherwise, should form the subject of an immediate, careful and detailed examination by the various provincial administrations.

(6) That the demonstration of improved methods of agriculture is already creating, and is likely to increase a demand for improved rural education, and that the latter will in turn facilitate agricultural demonstration.

(7) That as this process advances a demand will probably arise for definitely agricultural schools and that preparation should be made for this latter probable demand by the early establishment, as an experimental measure, of a very limited number of Agricultural Middle (Madras, Upper Primary) Schools (say one or at most two in each important provincial language area).

NOTE.—The Board is of opinion that in view of the varying needs of different parts of India, it would be worse than useless to submit a definite scheme for such experimental schools It has, however, drawn up tentative proposals regarding a syllabus and organisation which will indicate the nature, the scope and the standard of instruction that is contemplated. These proposals will be found in the tentative scheme suggested for the establishment of Agricultural Middle Schools

(8) That if, as a result of these experiments, further agricultural schools (as distinguished from ordinary rural schools) are to be started, it is of the utmost importance :—

(i) that their object should be to send their pupils back to their own land to cultivate it better ;

(ii) that the rate of the increase in the number of the schools should not be allowed to outstrip the rate of the provision of properly trained teachers ;

(iii) that the training of the teachers should, as far as possible, be thoroughly practical on the agricultural side, and should in its final stage be connected with one of the schools already successfully established ;

(iv) that the schools should be made as nearly self-supporting as possible ;

(v) that each school should generally be on or in the neighbourhood of a demonstration farm.

(9) That the view of the Simla Conference "that each of the principal provinces of India should have its own Agricultural College so soon as the agricultural development of the province justifies the step" is accepted, the question of affiliation of such colleges being left to the decision of the Government concerned.

APPENDIX H(b).

Tentative Scheme suggested by the Board of Agriculture for the Establishment of Agricultural Middle Schools.

I. Age of entry and qualifications.—The Committee contemplates that the boys on entry will have attained a minimum age of thirteen years and a degree of proficiency in reading, writing and arithmetic, the standard of which will be laid down by the Government of each province.

II. Distribution of time.—The proportion of time to be devoted to each of the two sides of the boys' work (school and farm) should be approximately equal, but this proportion will vary according to the demands of seasonal agricultural operations.

III. Syllabus of work for Agricultural Schools—

(1) Reading.—From general and special text-books prescribed for Agricultural Schools in each Province.

(2) Writing.—In connection with the other subjects that are taught in the school.

(3) Arithmetic and Mensuration—

First year—

(i) Addition, subtraction, multiplication and division of money and measures.
(ii) Reduction of weights and measures.
(iii) Simple rule of three.
(iv) Calculating values of quantities.

Second year—

(i) Simple and compound interest.
(ii) Decimal fractions.
(iii) Square root.
(iv) Discount.
(v) Simple mensuration.
(vi) Simple farm book-keeping.

NOTE 1.—These subjects are all to be taught with special reference to agricultural operations.
NOTE 2.—A book in Marathi entitled "Arithmetic for Farmers" prepared by Messrs. Pawar and Ghumare is being successfully used at Loni School. An English translation can be obtained from the Principal, Agricultural College, Poona. This will serve as a useful guide in the preparation of books suitable for other parts of India.

(4) Geography.—Commercial geography in relation to local products. Local geography. General Physical geography.

(5) Nature Study :—

NOTE.—Nature study should be essentially practical ; its chief aims should be the encouragement of observation and the making of careful records, and the stimulation of interest. There should be a Museum connected with the school, and materials for it should be gradually collected by staff and pupils.

(5) Nature Study :—continued.
(i) Propagation of plants by means of seeds, cuttings, budding and layering.
(ii) Seeds :—
(a) Plants and their use ;
(b) Germination and its requirements ;
(c) How to find out germination percentage ;
(d) Importance of good seed.
(iii) Is soil required for germination ?
(iv) Necessity of soils for plant life.
(v) Formation of soil in general.
(vi) Roots :—
(a) Growth ;
(b) Use to plants ;
(c) Kinds of roots.
(vii) Stems :—
(a) Growth ;
(b) Effect of light ;
(c) Use to plants ;
(d) Kinds of stems in general.
(viii) Leaves :—
(a) Different forms of leaves ;
(b) Use to plants and the work they do in plant life.
(ix) Insect life :—
(a) The stages of life ;
(b) Use of colour in insects ;
(c) Their mode of feeding ;
(d) Classification according to mouth-parts ;
(e) Rearing of insects to study the different stages ;
(f) Information about crop posts in general, and methods of destruction ;
(g) Insecticides and use of sprayers.

2nd year.

(I) Insects of stored grain and cattle, and how to destroy them ;
(II) Plant life continued :—
(i) Flowers :—
(a) Their parts and use ;
(b) Use to plant life in seed formation ;
(ii) Dispersion of seed.
(iii) Struggle for existence.
(iv) Life-history of some plants.
(v) General information about fungus life and some common diseases with controlling measures.
(vi) Parasitic plants.

(6) Village life :—
(i) Simple lessons on village sanitation ;
(ii) Principles of marketing ;
(iii) Advantages of co-operation ;
(iv) Rural credit ;
(v) Village, taluq and district administration ;
(vi) Systems of land tenure in force.

(7) Principles of Agriculture :—
(a) Classification of soils ;
(b) Constituents of soils and their properties ;
(c) Physical properties of soils ;
(d) Soil improvements ;
(e) Irrigation ;
(f) Manures ;
(g) Crops ;
(h) Vegetable growing ;
(i) Animal husbandry ;
(j) Milk.

(8) Practical Farm work.
(8) Elementary Carpentry and Smithing.
(10) Possible subsidiary subjects :—
(i) Poultry Farming ;
(ii) Fruit and flower gardening.

APPENDIX H (a).

Draft Scheme for the Foundation in Bengal of Two Experimental Agricultural Middle Schools.

(June 1918.)

Origin of scheme.

1. The scheme for starting two experimental agricultural middle schools in Bengal takes its origin from the following resolutions (December, 1917) of the Board of Agriculture:—

(a) "That the demonstration of improved methods of agriculture is already creating and is likely to increase a demand for improved rural education, and that the latter will, in turn, facilitate agricultural demonstration."

(b) "That as this process advances a demand will probably arise for definitely agricultural schools and that preparation should be made for this latter probable demand by the early establishment, as an experimental measure) of a very limited number of Agricultural Middle (Madras, Upper Primary, Schools, (say, one or at most two in each important provincial language area)."

NOTE.—"The Board is of opinion that in view of the varying needs of different parts of India, it would be worse than useless to submit a definite scheme for such experimental schools. It has, however, drawn up tentative proposals regarding a syllabus and organization, which will indicate the nature, the scope and the standard of instruction that is contemplated. These proposals will be found in the Appendix attached to the Report of the Committee on Agricultural Education."

Limitations.

2. Two points must be borne in mind in considering the scheme. The first is that it is experimental, and that negative results, which eliminate certain apparent possibilities, are often almost as valuable as positive results. The second is that financial considerations have of necessity set close limits to the scope of the scheme.

The problem.

3. It is necessary to form a clear conception of the object with which the experiment is to be tried. In its earlier resolutions at Poona the Board recognized that agricultural education in the strict sense of the term and progress in agriculture generally are dependent on the improvement of rural primary schools, and that this improvement must be more costly than Indian rural populations can afford in their existing economic conditions. These latter cannot be improved without better education, and again better education cannot be supplied until economic conditions are improved. In Bengal the Education Department is, somewhat slowly and not very successfully, striving to break into the circle by improving primary education. The Agricultural Department is doing its best with its limited funds to break in by improving agriculture through research and demonstration. It is hoped that a means may be found by which the efforts of the two departments can be made to support each other and so to quicken progress in overcoming these interdependent difficulties.

The object of the scheme.

4. It is desirable that at every stage in the advance of the work of education, there should be opportunity and inducement offered to youths to devote their improved intelligence not to pen and paper occupations but to increased production in agriculture. It is also desirable that every real advance in agricultural practice that is fully established by research and experience should, as soon as possible, be made available for that part of the rural population which is intelligent enough to profit by it. The broad object of the schools now proposed is to find out how these two desiderata can be best brought into relation with each other and supplied.

Questions to be answered.

5. The general problem, which it is hoped may be at least partially solved in a period of five years' experimentation, of which one year will be spent in the training of the necessary staff, may be broken up into more detailed questions:—

Entrance qualification.

(a) What is the minimum of ordinary educational qualification which can be made the basis of a specialized training in agriculture?

Entrance age.

(b) What is the most economical way of securing that basis from the points of view of the parent and of the agricultural school? (This involves the question of the age at which agricultural education should begin).

General education.

(c) How far, if at all, is it desirable to carry on the separate general education of the rural boy while he is being instructed in agriculture?

Agricultural knowledge available.

(d) What knowledge and skill, of which their parents are not the possessors, is available which is also suitable to be imparted to youths of the agricultural classes?

Length of course.

(e) What must be the minimum length of a useful course, and at what seasons of the year should it begin and end?

Scope of course.

(f) What should be the nature and scope of the course to be followed?

Theory and practice.

(g) What should be the quantitive relation between instruction in the more theoretical, and training in the more practical, parts of the work?

Special books.

(h) What kind of books will be required in the schools, and how can they best be produced?

Daily routine.

(i) What is the best organization of the daily routine, and how far should it be varied from season to season?

Number of pupils.

(j) What number of boys can most advantageously be trained in one school?

Self-support.

(k) How far can the pupils be expected to support themselves by their own labour while under instruction?

Stipends.

(l) Should stipends be awarded to the pupils of these schools?

(m) What amount of land is necessary for the training of each boy, and should they cultivate it singly or in co-operation ? — Amount of land per pupil.

(n) What extent and what kind of land would be most suitable for these schools, and how should they be situated in relation to existing demonstration farms ? — Size of school ground.

(o) What and what manner of buildings are needed for the work of schools of this kind, and what will be their cost ? — Buildings.

(p) What furniture will be required and at what cost ? — Furniture.

(q) What quantities and what kind of implements, stock, seed, stores, etc., are needed for the work, and what would be their cost ? — Implements, stock, seed, etc.

(r) How far is it necessary and desirable to employ menial servants ? — Servants.

(s) What would be the best form of management for these schools ? — Management.

(t) What should be the original qualification and the form of training of the members of the staff ? — Staff.

(u) How can the training of the pupils of these schools be made most effective in creating a demand for instruction in agriculture (e.g. junior and senior crop clubs, agricultural shows, demonstrations, publications, etc.) ? — Demand for agricultural training.

(v) What is to be regarded as the economic unit of land-holding for the middle class agriculturist and the peasant respectively ? — Economic unit.

6. In order to start the two proposed schools it will be necessary at once to give provisional answers to almost all the questions of the preceding paragraph. It is, therefore, proposed to take them up serially, and to suggest tentative answers as far as possible.

7. Question (a).—What is the minimum of ordinary educational qualification, which can be made the basis of a specialized training in agriculture ?—There is no doubt that the middle school standard is the proper one to aim at for boys entering the agricultural school, for a well-taught boy should reach that standard at about 13 or 14 years of age. It is at present quite out of the question to expect this qualification. It is, therefore, necessary to make the proposed experimental schools take the place of the ordinary middle school, so that it would be reasonable to demand the qualification of the primary school, i.e., that a boy entering the agricultural school should be examined to see that he can read and write his vernacular with sufficient ease to enable him to study simple books on agricultural subjects, to take down notes of his observations in the course of his work, and to write descriptions of objects, places and simple processes. He should also know the first four rules of Arithmetic and should understand weighing, measuring and the money system of India. (a) Entrance qualification.

8. If a sufficient number of boys having this small equipment is not forthcoming, it should be allowable for the school authorities to open a special class for pupils who are wholly illiterate. This class should be drilled in the rudiments with a view to their rapid acquisition. This should not take more than six months in the case of well-grown boys of natural intelligence taught by a well-trained teacher.

9. Question (b).—What is the most economical way of securing that basis from the points of view of the parent and of the agricultural school ? (This involves the question of the age at which agricultural education should begin).—From the point of view of the school it would, of course, be best for the boy to come fully equipped as regards the three R's but if there is not a sufficient demand for agricultural instruction, it may be necessary to fall back on the expedient mentioned in paragraph 8 above. This will add to the expense of the scheme and should be avoided if possible. From the point of view of the parent also it would doubtless be better for the child to have acquired the elements before reaching the age at which he could be admitted to the agricultural school as capable of performing agricultural operations, for the peasant would have to lose the services of an illiterate son for an additional six months to enable him to reach the necessary standard. At the same time it has to be the remembered that at present some years of a child's life are wasted by the uneconomical and leisurely methods of the pathsala in unhygienic surroundings. It may turn out after experiment that parents will prefer to give their boys a rapid concentrated period of instruction under a good teacher at a later stage than to keep on relying on the existing inefficient primary schools. (b) Entrance age.

10. It will not be of any use to train boys in the agricultural school till they are strong enough to manage animals, to manipulate farm implements and to bear the combined physical and mental strain of the work. It will be advisable at first to admit boys, covering a fairly wide range of development and to observe the results in individual cases. It would perhaps be as well to lay down vaguely "about 14 years of age" as the age of admission, but the school authorities should generally select boys who appear to have attained the age of puberty in preference to those who are less mature, and in every case to take into consideration the muscular development of applicants for admission.

11. Question (c).—How far, if at all, is it desirable to carry on the separate general education of the rural boy, while he is being instructed in agriculture ?—It may be hoped that the agricultural middle school course will ultimately develop into a four years course, like that of the ordinary middle school. For reasons given below it would not seem possible at first to lay down so long a course. It will, therefore, be necessary for the present to subordinate ideas of general development and education to those which have a direct bearing on the "revelant, vital, fundamental activities" of the agriculturalist. There is no reason to suppose that this centralization of the school work will be subversive of the normal process of growth, but rather the contrary. (c) General education.

(d) Agricultural knowledge available.

12. Question (d).—What knowledge and skill of which their parents are not the possessors, is available which is also suitable to be imparted to youths of the agricultural classes ?—In all the talk of agricultural education little consideration seems to be given to the vitally important question as to what is to be taught. This is dependent upon three conditions—(i) the stage of development of the pupil, (ii) the ability of the teacher and (iii) the existence of a mass of agricultural information and practice suited to (i) and (ii). Taking these latter for granted it is for the Agricultural Department to answer the question in regard to (iii). The guardians of the boys can train them in their own fields and have done so for ages and generations. It has now to be stated whether we are in a position to give instruction and training, which is definitely supplementary or superior to what the boy can get at home. It would, of course, be disastrous to give instruction which might subsequently prove to be erroneous, for this would destroy confidence in any attempt to advance.

(e) Length of course.

13. Question (e).—What must be the minimum length of a useful course, and at what seasons of the year should it begin and end ?—It is stated in paragraph 11 above, that it may be hoped that ultimately a four years' course may be possible. It is unlikely that parents will be prepared for a long time to come to spare their adolescent sons from their own land for so long a period. Indeed it is likely that even one harvest time away from home would be grudged. It would seem to be necessary, however, to insist on this minimum both from the point of view of the training of the boys and from the desirability of having some boys always present at harvest time to do the work of the school land. On the whole, it would appear to be desirable to commence the course just after the main harvest of the neighbourhood in one year, to carry it through the next year and to complete it just before the main harvest of the third year. This would give the pupils rather less than two years at the school. Holidays will have to be arranged by the school authorities as opportunities offer themselves. The boys might possibly go away in batches during the slacker season of the year.

(f) Scope of course.

14. Question (f).—What should be the nature and scope of the course to be followed ?

(g) Theory and practice

Question (g)—What should be quantitative relation between instruction in the more theoretical, and training in the practical, parts of the work ?

These two questions need not be discussed in detail till question (d) above has been answered. A committee of the Board of Agriculture at Poona (December 1917) put forward tentative proposals, which are to be found in Appendix A to the report of the Committee, on page 91 of the Proceedings. Those proposals include ten branches of instruction :—

i. Reading.	vi. Village life.
ii. Writing.	vii. Principles of Agriculture.
iii. Arithmetic and Mensuration.	viii. Practical Farm work.
iv. Geography.	ix. Elementary Carpentry and Smithy.
v. Nature study.	x. Possible subsidiary subjects.

It was suggested that viii ("Practical Farm work") should have approximately as much time devoted to it as the rest of the subjects together, but that this proportion would vary according to the season of the year. That is to say that when there is less to do on the land more indoor work will be done. A pupil who successfully passes through this course and any prescribed test of efficiency should be awarded a well-designed certificate. This should be called the "Agricultural Middle School Certificate, Class I (or II)."

(h) Special Books.

15.—Question (h). What kind of books will be required in the schools, and how can they best be produced ?—The Committee of the Board of Agriculture was of opinion that special books would have to be prepared for these schools. As an example of the kind of thing they put forward an "Arithmetic for Farmers," which is published by Messrs. Powar and Ghumare. An English translation of this book can be obtained from the Principal of the Agricultural College at Poona. It will probably be necessary to make a beginning with such books as are available on the market, but it should be one of the first duties of the staff to prepare a suitable series of books. Competition might be set up between the staffs of the two proposed schools and a reward offered for the best books in each subject. The books should, of course, have a definite and direct bearing on the course of studies in agriculture.

(i) Daily routine.

16. Question (i).—What is the best organization of the daily routine, and how far should it be varied from season to season ?—This cannot now be settled. The staff of the schools during their preliminary training would have to discuss the question at length, and then arrange the first year's work. During the year careful records will have to be kept and the results of experience used for improvements in succeeding years.

(j) Number of pupils

17. Question (j).—What number of boys can most advantageously be trained in one school ?—The larger the number of boys in the school the greater will be the cost in land, buildings, implements, stock, stipends, etc., and the greater will be the difficulty in giving detailed individual attention to the boys. On the other hand, too small a number of boys will tend to increase the cost per head on dividing recurring charges among them. Perhaps it will be enough to fix on 30 as a maximum in each year's class and to make that figure the basis of financial calculations.

(k) Self-support.

18. Question (k).—How far can the pupils be expected to support themselves by their own labour while under instruction ?—It is quite impossible to estimate accurately in this matter, and it will probably be safer to neglect it in the estimates for the first year. It is necessary on the one hand to guard against the exploitation of child labour, and on the other to avoid the impression that the work need not be on a sound business footing. The head of the school should be required to indicate in his accounts exactly to what extent he has been able to pay back to Government the cost of training the boys. Each boy should be trained to keep accounts of his own training and the result of his own labour.

(l) Stipends.

19. Question (l).—Should stipends be awarded to pupils of these schools?—At the Loni School substantial stipends are paid. It is probably necessary to estimate for this purpose, but it seems desirable to designate them "Primary Agricultural Scholarships." They should be 30 in number in the first year and 60 in the second, and should be of Rs. 6 each. They should be awarded on the result of the entrance examination, held annually at the Agricultural Middle Schools, there being no conditions laid down as to previous attendance at school. The controlling officers of the schools should be at liberty to utilize the total amount allotted for the support of the boys in the manner that seems to them to be advantageous. It should be understood from the beginning that the number of scholarships will be retained, and that they will be scattered among new schools as they are opened, and as they become popular. Headmen of villages and other local authorities should be encouraged to send up their own and their neighbours' promising son for these scholarships. Over-aged boys in the lower classes of high schools should also be encouraged to compete for them.

(m) Amount of land per pupil

20. Question (m).—What amount of land is necessary for the training of each boy, and should they cultivate it singly or in co-operation?—This question must necessarily be left to the Agricultural Department. Individual work has the advantage of fixing responsibility for failure or success most easily, but farm processes cannot always be performed by single individuals. The school authorities would have to think out the answer to the latter part of the question during their preliminary training.

(n) Size of school ground.

21. Question (n).—What extent and what kind of land would be most suitable for these schools, and how should they be situated in relation to existing demonstration farms?—The amount of land needed for the crop work of the pupils will be determined in answer to the previous question. It is for the Agricultural Department to decide how much will be needed for the necessary buildings, grazing land, etc., connected with the school. It would be well if 100 × 60 yards of the grazing ground could be allotted in such a way as to make it available for occasional games.

22. It is obvious that the immediate proximity of a demonstration farm would be most advantageous to the school. Chinsura and Dacca have been suggested as suitable places, but the latter is perhaps doubtful owing to the poor quality of the land, in spite of its many other advantages. Here again the Agricultural Department will, no doubt, express a reasoned opinion.

23. It will also be necessary to determine whether Government land is available for the two proposed schools or whether acquisition will be necessary and, if so, at what cost.

(o) Buildings (i) Materials

24. Question (o).—What and what manner of buildings are needed for the work of schools of this kind, and what would be their cost?—So long as the schools are in their experimental stage it will be well to erect buildings that will be cheap, useful for other purposes if the experiment fails, and of a kind that is not too great an advance on what is within the means of the villagers. They should at first at any rate have mud or possibly brick plinths, mat walls and thatched roofs. It should be part of the training of the boys to learn to build and repair houses of this class, so that repairs will not cost Government as much as may otherwise be feared.

(ii) Agricultural

25. The Agricultural Department will no doubt advise as to what buildings will be necessary for farm purposes, e.g., byres, sheds for implements, a smithy and workshop, etc. That department will also be in a position to estimate for each school the cost of the buildings to be indicated in the following paragraphs.

(iii) Sanitary.

26. These schools should afford the Sanitary Department a good opportunity of showing what sanitary arrangements are best suited for village life in the absence of mehtars. Indeed the whole premises should be laid out as examples of rural hygiene. The Sanitary Commissioner should, therefore, be consulted on the scheme. Two latrine seats will be needed for the pupils and one for the staff. Ten running feet of pucca urinal space divided into compartments will also be needed.

(iv) The School.

27. In the first year there will be only 30 boys in each school, but in the second year the number will be doubled for the greater part of the year. It will therefore, be necessary to make provision for the larger number of boys as has already been suggested in connetion with stipends in paragraph 19 above. The distinction between literates and illiterates entering the school may be neglected as they can be taught in two groups in the same classroom, but it will be necessary to have separate classrooms for first and second year pupils. It might be possible for the first year boys to build their own second year room as part of their training, but it will be prudent to estimate the whole cost. As dual desks are about to be advocated each of the two classrooms should be 18′ × 22′, which gives more than 13 sq. ft. to each boy. There should be a headmaster's room 18′ × 18′, and a combined library and museum of the same size: There should be verandahs 9′ wide on the east, west and south, the long sides being on the north and south of the building.

(v) Hostels

28. It is impossible to say here how the pupils will be divided as regards their creed. The local agricultural authorities could probably tell whether Hindus or Muhammadans would predominate. The best plan would be to have a long building or buildings affording 60 sq. ft. of floor space per boy (total for 60 boys—60 × 60=3,600), with attached rooms for Hindus and Muhammadan superintendents respectively. It would be a simple and inexpensive matter to erect mat partitions whenever they proved to be desirable. Sixteen feet would be a convenient width for the dormitories. cooksheds with broad dining verandahs would be necessary for both Hindus and Muhammadans.

(vi) Fencing and Wells.

29. The school and hostel buildings should be placed close together and surrounded by a fence within which some attempt should be made to illustrate what can be done in beautifying a homestead with flowers. The Agricultural Department will be able to judge as to what will be necessary in respect of fencing in this and other parts of the premises and to estimate the cost of all. Certain wells will also be necessary. These should be at least 6 feet wide to satisfy Hindu religious scruples.

(vii) House for the headmaster.

30. It is, of course, necessary to provide a suitable house for the headmaster of the school. The Agricultural Department has, no doubt, a type plan and estimate of the cost of a house suitable for an officer drawing about Rs. 100 per mensem.

(p) Furniture

31. All furniture should be made of sal wood. In each school there will be needed 30 dual desks, each 44″ long and 16″ wide with a light shelf for books, specimens, etc., underneath. They should be in two heights (measured at the edge nearest the sitter), 16 being 28″ and 14 being 25.″ There should be a flat part at the top with a groove for pens, pencils, etc., and a hole for an inkwell. In each school there will also be needed 30 dual benches, each 44″ long and 12″ wide. The height of 16 should be 17″ and of 14 others 15″. Two teachers' tables each 4′ × 3′ fitted with a locking drawer, and a rather larger one with two drawers for the superintendent will be needed. A table 8′ × 4′ will be needed for the library, and nine strong chairs for the whole school. Four easels and four blackboards, each 4′ × 3′ will also be needed. An allowance of at least Rs. 300 a year for each of the first three years should be made, in addition to the ordinary grant for contingencies for almirahs and other furniture and apparatus, such as maps, etc.

32. In the hostels in each school, there will be required 60 wooden beds, 60 chairs, 60 small tables (3′ × 2′) and 60 Bookshelves, as well as 12 waste paper baskets. Cooking utensils will also be needed. A bed, a chair, a table and a bookshelf will also be needed for each of the hostel Superintendents. Some of this furniture could be made by the boys in their first year.

(q) Implements, stock, seed, etc

33. Question (q).—What quantities and what kind of implements, stock, seed, stores etc., are needed for the work, and what would be their cost ?—This question can only be answered by the Agricultural Department.

(r) Servants

34. Question (r).—How far is it necessary and desirable to employ menial servants ?—It is desirable, both from the point of view of the training of the boys and that of economy, to reduce the number of servants to a minimum. A Hindu and a Muhammadan cook, one sweeper and one mali will probably be essential for each school. The Agricultural Department will no doubt advise as to the necessity for field workers and men to look after the cattle, etc.

(s) Management.

35. Question (s)—What would be the best form of management for these schools ?—In the ordinary schools more stress is laid on reading and writing and reckoning as matters of skill, and less on what is read and written and reckoned. In the proposed schools the whole emphasis will be laid on the subject matter of the lessons. It will be well, therefore, to break away from the traditions of ordinary inspecting officers and to place the schools under the Agricultural Department. This is the more clear when the practical and more important part of the course is considered. With this the Education Department can have nothing to do. If this be granted, it probably follows that the schools should be under the direct supervision of the officer in charge of the nearest Government farm.

(i) Headmaster.

36. Question (t).—What should be the original qualification and the form of training of the members of the staff ?—The school itself should be in the charge of a selected and thoroughly practical officer of the Agricultural Department, who might be called the Headmaster. He should preferably have sprung from the agricultural class, and should have had a thorough training in all that the Agricultural Department can teach, as well as a knowledge of the ordinary practices of the country. He should be given a salary of Rs. 80 plus 10 to Rs. 120 and the advantage of a free house from the time of the opening of the school. This is not too much when it is remembered that on his activity and intelligence will depend the initiating of many experiments and the recording of results, as well as the future training of teachers for further extensions of the scheme. The first two headmasters should be sent to Chittagong and placed under the supervision of Babu Gurubandhu Bhattacharjya, B.A., B.T., the Superintendent of the Normal School, for about eight months. Their work during that time should be—

(i) to study the principles and organization of teaching work in primary and middle schools ;
(ii) to practise teaching in single classes and in two classes simultaneously ;
(iii) to discover what existing books are most suitable for the proposed schools and to begin work on the new special books that will be required ;
(iv) to study hostel organization and control.
(v) to study the organization of games and physical education ;

They should submit to an oral and practical test in these matters at the end of their course. The test should be conducted by nominees of the Directors of Agriculture and Public Instruction. The remainder of their year should be spent in superintending the preparation of the premises and in making definite plans for the first year's work.

(ii) Assistant Masters.

37. There should be two assistant masters, one a Hindu and one a Muhammadan in each school, each on a salary of Rs. 30—5—50, together with free quarters in the hostel, which they will supervise on allowances of Rs. 5 per mensem. Both should preferably have sprung from the agricultural class. One should be a selected Chittagong Normal School-trained teacher with a knowledge of games and drill. He should have a year's training in practical agricultural work on a Government farm. He should be made responsible for much of the indoor work of the pupils, and especially for their progress in ordinary school subjects. The other should have been trained in carpentry and in smithy. He should have enough knowledge of English to enable him to keep the accounts of the school. The headmaster should do the correspondence, but this assistant should receive eight months' training in registration, filing, accounts, simple surveying and store-keeping. The last four months of his training year should be spent in assisting in the erection of buildings, etc., under the superintendence of the headmaster. He should be made responsible for training the boys in carpentry and smithy work, for keeping the stores and the accounts and for the general work of the office. Men of this type will be difficult, but probably not impossible, to secure.

(u) and (v) postponed Questions.

38. The last two questions (u) and (v), though of great importance in the future, cannot be solved even provisionally at present, nor is there any advantage to be gained by guessing at the answers.

Conclusion.

39. The proposals set out above for the consideration of the Director of Agriculture if accepted, will involve a certain outlay on the part of Government, but it will be seen that they are not extravagant. All education in Bengal has hitherto suffered from having been done so cheaply as to be of an inferior character. A cheap ladder, a cheap boat and a cheap education are all to be mistrusted. It is of the greatest importance that the staff proposals should not be cut down, especially as these two schools will have to become training centres for future expansion, and it is essential to secure good men for them from the start.

The next move.

40. The next action in the development of the scheme is due from the Agricultural Department and will include :—

(i) The revision and modification of the above proposals.
(ii) The supply of the omissions already noted and such additions as may seem to be desirable.
(iii) The drawing of line plans for buildings for each school.
(iv) The drawing of site plans for the two schools.
(v) The drawing up of capital estimates of expenditure for each school under the headings of—
  (a) Land.
  (b) Buildings.
  (c) Fencing.
  (d) Wells.
  (e) Other improvements.
  (f) Furniture.
  (g) Library.
  (h) Permanent stock.
  (i) „ implements.
(vi) The drawing up of estimates of recurring expenditure for each school under the headings of—
  (a) Salaries.
  (b) Wages.
  (c) Scholarships.
  (d) Seed, stores (including food for animals), implements, etc.
  (e) Library and museum.
  (f) Contingencies, including furniture and repairs.

The estimates for the fourth and fifth years should not be widely different from those of the third year.

APPENDIX I (a).

The Naogaon Ganja Cultivators' Co-operative Society, Limited, at Naogaon in the District of Rajshahi.

[By Rai Romesh Chandra Dutt Bahadur.]

It is well-known that ganja, like salt, is a Government monopoly, but many people are perhaps not cognizant of the fact that ganja grown in Naogaon supplies the demand of the provinces of Bengal, Bihar and Orissa, and Assam, the districts of Agra, Cawnpore, Allahabad, Lucknow, Gorakhpur and Benares in the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh, and the Native State of Cooch Behar. Ganja which was considered to be of the best quality used formerly to be grown extensively in the district of Jessore. According to tradition ganja was cultivated for the first time about the year 1722 A.D.

in the villages of Balubhara and Muradpur in Naogaon subdivision from which ganja cultivation was gradually extended to the adjoining villages in the districts of Rajshahi, Dinajpur and Bogra. This area is known as the ganja mahal. When the subdivision of Naogaon was created in 1882 all the villages in the ganja-growing tract were included in the new subdivision.

Before the ganja reaches the consumers in the districts it had till recently to pass from the cultivator, who actually cultivates the plant, through wholesale vendors or their recognized agents or brokers and the retail vendors who take the licensed shops in the districts. The society that was formed at Naogaon last year took the place of wholesale vendors in the districts and at Naogaon and of their authorized agents at Naogaon from 1st April 1918 and the place of the brokers at Naogaon from 1st January, 1918. The statutory position and liabilities of wholesale vendors and their agents from places outside Bengal will remain the same except that they cannot purchase the drug from the cultivators direct. Government has granted to the Co-operative Society of Ganja Cultivators at Naogaon the exclusive privilege of supplying ganja and bhang by wholesale, throughout the Presidency of Bengal, with effect from the 1st April 1918, under section 22 of the Bengal Excise Act, 1909 (Bengal Act V of 1909). The licences of the existing brokers were not renewed after 31st December, 1917, and the society acted as a broker in their place from 1st January to 31st March 1918. The cultivators were not permitted to sell the produce of 1918 to anyone but the society.

Before I proceed further, it would perhaps not be uninteresting to state briefly the circumstances which led to the establishment of the Co-operative Society. Ganja produced at Naogaon is of two kinds, namely round and flat. At the time when cultivators had not to store ganja in the public warehouse the wholesale vendors used to come to Naogaon and purchase the standing crop required for the manufacture of round ganja either by the field at a fixed valuation before manufacture, or at a rate to be determined after the completion of the manufacture with reference to the prevailing rate for ganja of similar quality at the time of export. In both cases the wholesale dealer had to advance some money at the time to the cultivator and to harvest and prepare the drug himself. The cultivator who used to sell the standing crop of his field at a fixed valuation usually got his price all right, but in cases in which the rates had to be determined afterwards, the wholesale vendors used to cheat the ignorant cultivators in all possible ways, e.g., by short weights, etc. In the case of flat ganja the services of a broker were essentially necessary. "Not a blade of ganja is purchased without him (broker)" says Babu Hem Chandra Kerr in his report on the cultivation of, and trade in, ganja in Bengal, 1877, "and he is the man who of all others derives the largest profit in the business." The broker added a rupee or eight annas to the price, which was not an inconsiderable sum at a time when ganja used to be sold at Rs. 8 to Rs. 32 per maund. The brokerage used to be paid by the purchasers. The cultivator also used to make it a point to pay something to the brokers, who were usually influential cultivators themselves, in order that they might be attached to his interest, "for," says Babu Hem Chandra Kerr in 1877, "if a cultivator has given offence to them, his chance of selling his drug is indeed very remote." Well might the successor of this cultivator say in 1917 that his condition in this respect was equally bad if not worse. The brokers used to combine with the agents of the wholesale dealers as to how to defraud their principal. Babu Hem Chandra Kerr estimated that brokers used to make four annas out of every rupee that passed through their hands.

The state of things in 1877 has been described in the above paragraph but when the cultivators were made to store their ganja in the public warehouse in 1900 the practice of selling the standing crop to wholesale vendors automatically ceased. The influence then of the cultivator-broker, who was a man of wealth and a substantial jotedar himself and the head raiyat of the neighbouring villages, increased considerably. He began to advance money to his poorer neighbours and to buy up the produce at a certain rate per maund which was usually a very low rate. In 1908-09 it was found that the brokers showed one price in the prescribed Excise Form No. 93, paid a different price to the cultivators and showed a third as received from the district vendors, and that the cultivator-brokers had very great facilities for bringing into the market through their own clients, namely, the wholesale vendors in districts, their private stock of ganja smuggled by themselves or by their friends and relatives. It was also found that they used to lend money to the poorer cultivators on usufructuary mortgage of their holdings and in other ways hold lands in the mahal in the names of their relatives and dependents. The cultivation thus became practically the monopoly of the cultivator-brokers. The broker must sell his own stock first and then the stock of his relatives, dependents and adherents. The poor cultivator hardly got a chance in the market to sell his crop and year in and year out his stock had to be got rid of by destruction under the rules. If he sold at all he too often got an extremely low price. The brokers were found to swindle the poor cultivators by misrepresentation and fraud. In order to remedy these evils Babu Jagadish Chandra Sen, the then Subdivisional Officer of Naogaon suggested that "it is a matter for urgent decision as to whether this class of persons should be maintained at all, and if they are considered essential, whether the personnel of the body should be materially improved" by the elimination of cultivator-brokers and by licensing good men with real business habits and a fair amount of education for the purpose. As a result of his representation the authorities decided in the following year that a person who took a licence to be a broker would not be given a licence to cultivate ganja. The brokers were called upon to state their choice. They notified that they preferred broking to cultivation. But Jagadish Babu found that they proposed to make fictitious conveyances of their lands and to keep cultivation in their hands as well, so he suggested the following measures :—

(1) Elimination of cultivator-brokers and appointment of educated and business-like men in their place.
(2) Establishment of a Co-operative Credit Society in the ganja mahal to enable the needy cultivators to escape from the clutches of money-lending brokers and ganja cultivators.
(3) Establishment by the cultivators themselves of an association to protect themselves and their crops from the devices of speculators, to improve their prospects, to adopt improved methods of cultivation and eventually to take the place of wholesale vendors in districts by means of agencies.

In 1910, licences had been issued to 36 old brokers. Enquiry was held into their conduct by Jagadish Babu and as a result of the enquiry they were found guilty of serious misconduct and were not allowed to act after December 1910. In their place, Jagadish Babu appointed a new set of men with better education and belonging to more respectable classes.

On the 10th March 1910 an association named the Ganja Cultivators' Association was formed. The objects of the association as noted in article III of the memorandum of the association were :—

(i) To introduce improved and scientific methods of cultivation, epecially of ganja.
(ii) To impart and diffuse proper and scientific knowledge of cultivation, especially of the cultivation and manufacture of ganja.
(iii) To establish and maintain and recognize educational institutions for the diffusion of general knowledge conducive to the objects of the association.
(iv) To print and publish any journals, periodicals, books or leaflets that the association may think desirable for the promotion of its objects.
(v) To unite the cultivators of ganja into an organized and registered body, to facilitate the adoption by them of such measures as may tend to keep the ganja market steady.
(vi) To finance poorer cultivators for the purpose of cultivation and maintenance.
(vii) To compensate those cultivators whose ganja is destroyed by the authorities under departmental rules.
(viii) To undertake botanical researches for the recognition of the male ganja plant at an earlier stage of its growth.
(ix) To finance such co-operative credit societies as may from time to time be established in the ganja mahal for the benefit of the cultivators, or otherwise place funds at the disposal of such societies on such conditions as the managing committee may determine.
(x) To help the cultivators in such other ways as the association may deem fit.

As the members of the association instead of subscribing any share capital themselves began to put a tax on the wholesale vendors arbitrarily which indirectly affected the Government revenue and as an attempt was made to artificially force up the price of ganja, the authorities could not encourage the development of the association which had been founded on unsound lines and it died a natural death.

I have stated above that educated men of better class were appointed to act as brokers with effect from January 1911. In February 1915, complaints were made to my predecessor, Babu Lalit Chandra Guha that "though the amount shown in the delivery order was paid to the cultivators in presence of the Supervisors, they had to refund a portion to the brokers; the amount thus refunded generally varied from Rs. 5 to 20 per maund." A detailed enquiry was made by him and in March he reported that "the existing system of brokers be abolished and the present set of brokers disbanded as soon as possible." Various schemes were suggested and considered. It was found that all schemes suggested except the Government monopoly were either open to the same objection as the existing system or were impracticable. But the difficulty in the way of Government monopoly was that the Government of India were averse to any action which would render the connection of Government with the traffic in drink or drugs closer than it is at present. The scheme of establishing a Ganja Growers' Co-operative Society was then suggested and the details of the scheme were worked out by Mr. Donovan, the present Registrar of Co-operative Societies, in January last, conditions being suggested which would prevent the monopoly being abused by the society.

In May, Government passed orders directing the organization of a Ganja Cultivators' Co-operative Society, which was to have the monopoly of purchase of ganja from the cultivators and of the sale of the drug to retail vendors of Bengal and to wholesale vendors of other provinces at a price to be fixed by the Government, thus eliminating the brokers and wholesale vendors in Bengal. In consideration of the fact that monopoly of sole purchase was given to the society and the fact that the profit of the wholesale vendors in Bengal, which was not inconsiderable, would go to the society it was stipulated that the society should bear the whole or a fair proportion of the cost of the preventive establishment employed in the ganja mahal. Mr. Donovan came down early in June; by-laws of the proposed society were drawn up in consultation with the leading cultivators and they signed an application for registration on the 13th June, 1917. At the informal conference in which the by-laws were approved, the cultivators desired that the rate at which a portion of the price of ganja should be paid in advance in April should be stated. In consequence of this alteration and the fact that the monopoly of bhang was also subsequently decided to be given to the society, it became necessary to submit a fresh application which was signed on 20th June. It was then that the mischievous machinations of the brokers began.

The chief advantage of the society as stated above is that the society of producers of ganja gets the monopoly of the retail sale of the drug; thus it can appropriate the profits which at present the wholesale vandors and others legitimately get. In addition the society gets the monopoly of retail sale of bhang. True it is that the society has to pay the whole or a fair proportion of the cost of the preventive establishment but the sale price of ganja which is to be fixed is so arranged that the entire cost does not fall on the growers. The advantages which the cultivators derive individually are not inconsiderable. It is proposed to give to the cultivators an advance of Rs. 70, Rs. 60, Rs. 50 per maund according to the quality of ganja manufactured, within the month of April. At present a cultivator can secure a high price when the new ganja comes to the market but that is only for a fortnight. Then the price goes down. As stated before the cultivator has to refund a portion of the price to the broker. The cultivator who does not do so has very little chance of selling his crop at all, so he has to submit to the inevitable and accept the terms dictated by the broker. A rich and intelligent cultivator has to refund smaller sums than his less fortunate brethren. But the percentage of the latter is more than 95 per cent. of the cultivators. These poor ignorant people have also to pay a portion of the price to their rich neighbours whose help is generally necessary to negotiate the sale. The cultivator has to attend the ganja office from day to day on the offchance of finding a buyer. Poor people who cannot undergo this process resign themselves unreservedly to the tender mercies of the buyer. If they cannot secure his patronage, their ganja rots in the public warehouse to be ultimately consigned to fire. The longer a cultivator has to wait to sell his drug the greater is the deterioration of the quality and decrease in the price when he eventually finds a buyer. The ganja cultivator, as is the case with the jute cultivator, is always thriftless and extravagant. The fact that a cultivator has got licence for growing ganja gives him credit in the money market. He takes full advantage of this credit and borrows money at a ruinous rate of interest and when fortunately a year of high price comes after 5 or 6 years, the whole of his money goes in paying off his debts, or if any escapes it is squandered foolishly, and in the succeeding years he goes on borrowing as usual. When a year of very low price comes, his misery knows no bounds as his credit in the market in that year is very little. Although statistics show that a year of high price comes after 5 or 6 years "hope springs eternal" in his breast and every year he banks on a year of high price and regulates his expenses accordingly and so is always involved in debts. The cultivator will get now a fixed advance of a fair proportion of the price and will not be suffering from the effects of the unrealizable dream of a high price every year. Neither will he have to suffer the disappointment of a very low price. He will be able to control his expenditure, knowing as accurately as possible what his income is. He will get his money in April, i.e., at a time when he requires it for payment of rent and for defraying the expenses of cultivation of jute and paddy. He will get his bonus in December when he will require money for cultivation and manufacture of ganja. Though the necessity for his borrowing is minimized it cannot be eliminated. Accordingly I have proposed to start co-operative credit societies all over the ganja mahal. When in any year there is an abundant crop, the price is low. To add to the misery of the cultivator, as the supply is more than the demand, a considerable portion of the produce after lapse of time becomes unfit for consumption and is destroyed. The cultivator whose crop is thus destroyed does not get any return for his commodity. Now there is no chance of such destruction unless the drug at the time of storage is of such inferior quality that it is unfit for human consumption. These are in short the advantages which the cultivator will derive from the society. The more ignorant and poor the cultivator is, the greater are his advantages The ganja is graded by elected representatives of cultivators.

Twelve such cultivators are elected by the general committee from whom the manager will nominate and ask three members to attend the grading committee at a time. They do not, of course, know whose ganja they are grading. The Excise Department may, if it likes, elect a member to the committee. The cultivator, the Manager or the representative of the Excise Department may appeal to the Sub-divisional Officer against the decision of the committee.

Immediately after steps were taken to organize the society the brokers began to instil in the minds of the simple and ignorant cultivators that the Government was establishing the society "to make the cultivators hewers of wood and drawers of water." To attain their object they attempted at first to convince and succeeded in convincing the cultivators that, as the stock of ganja was short in 1917, they were bound to get a very high price in 1918. This was partially true; a high price might have been obtained for the first three or four hundred maunds of ganja, but as licences had been issued for the maximum quantity of ganja land for the 1918 crop, the price of the remaining ganja was likely to be very low indeed even if the outturn of the crop were only normal. The cultivators were induced to ask for one year's time in the mistaken belief that the term of the existing brokers would be extended for a year more. The Registrar did not see his way to accept this

The brokers then engaged a pleader of Rajshahi to draft a memorial to Government on behalf of the cultivators. This draft has lately been recovered from the house of the leading agitator amongst the brokers. In order to obtain signatures the brokers began to circulate mischievous rumours when they came in contact with the cultivators and by sending emissaries to the villages in the ganja mahal for the purpose. Some of the rumours spread by them were :—

(1) That the price of ganja had been fixed for good and the promise of a bonus was a huge fraud and that Government would misappropriate the whole profit.
(2) The cultivators would have to pay Rs.10-8 every year to obtain a licence for ganja and that licences would have to be registered.
(3) That they would have to erect fences around the chatars (where ganja is manufactured) 8 cubits to 10 cubits high.
(4) That they would have to put wire nets round their ganja fields.
(5) That they would never be allowed to abandon ganja cultivation even if it were inconvenient to them in any year.
(6) That the Government would gradually acquire all ganja lands after which the cultivators would be employed as coolies only and as a preliminary step Government had made a wage census.
(7) That the cultivator would have to wear prisoner's dress when entering the chatar.
(8) That the price of ganja would not be paid in one instalment but in as many instalments as would suit the Government.

After spreading these rumours the brokers sent out paid agents to obtain signature from cultivators on a petition to be presented to Government.

When the cultivators were asked on 12th July to come and take out licences and also to take shares in the society, a great majority of the cultivators not only did not come to take shares but did not come to the Ganja Office to take out licences. In short these mischievous rumours kept them out of the precincts of the Ganja Office but those who could be induced to come to the office readily took out the licences and also took shares in the society. In July only 626 shares where sold, of which 600 shares were fully paid up and for 20 shares only Rs. 5 out of Rs. 10 per share was paid. Complaints began to be made by the brokers that unless shares were purchased licences were not granted. It was proclaimed by beat of drum in all the hats of the ganja mahal that the issue of licences had nothing to do with the purchase of shares and that every cultivator was free to take out his licence even if he chose not to buy a share in the society. It was then represented that some of the cultivators were too poor to pay in two instalments. By a resolution of the managing committee the cultivators were allowed to pay in five monthly instalments of Rs. 2 each. In August 232 fully paid-up shares, one share after payment of Rs. 8, 700 shares after payments of Rs. 5 and 1,058 shares after payment of Rs. 2, i.e., two thousand shares in all, were allotted. I had to explain to individual cultivators every morning the advantages of the society. In this work I was ably assisted by the Manager, the Supervisor, Inspector and Assistant Supervisors. Those who brought money at once paid up, but those who did not bring money and subsequently met a broker did not come for days to the Ganja Office. Even then complaints were made to the Collector by a pleader at Rajshahi that licences were not being issued unless shares were purchased. I invited the Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohon Choudhury, pleader, to come for a day to Naogaon so that all cultivators wishing to take licences without shares might be given their licences in his presence. About 150 cultivators were brought together by the brokers and the Hon'ble Babu K. M. Choudhury asked me to give them their licences. I explained to them the advantages of the society and then asked if there was any man amongst them who would not care to take shares but wanted his licence. All of them said that they would take shares and ran to the Ganja Office to do so. In the evening the Hon'ble Babu K. M. Choudhury sent me a list of 3 cultivators who wished to take out licences and not shares. Licences were never given on mere demand to any cultivators. The Excise Department had a more or less proscribed list of cultivators who could not get licences. This list was composed of bad characters, suspected smugglers, bad cultivators, etc. The names of the three men were found thereon. They never would have got licences. After this discomfiture of the brokers, cultivators who could began to take shares and licences. As the price of jute did not rise, a large number of cultivators took out licences without shares but promised to purchase shares as soon as they were better off. In September, 6 fully paid-up shares, 6 shares after payment of Rs. 5, 28 shares after payment of Rs. 4 and 157 shares after payment of Rs. 2 were allotted. In October, only one share on payment of Rs. 4 was allotted.

Thus 2,526 members of whom 2,306 are Muhammadans took 2,798 shares. As licences were issued, 481 cultivators took out licences without taking shares, most of whom promised to purchase shares for as non-members they would be entitled to only half of the bonus.

When the brokers came to know that their petition to the Government had been rejected, they submitted two petitions to the Collector—one is the same as the one submitted to the Government to which was appended some signatures and the second was an unsigned petition. I immediately sent a reply to the second petition. In it three prayers were made—

(1) Monopoly should not be granted to the society.

(2) Only ganja cultivators should be made members of the society. [Everyone at Naogaon knew that shares are given only to ganja cultivators, so this prayer was unnecessary.]

(3) The formation of the society should be deferred for a year.

It is strange to put in the mouth of people to whom a privilege was being given a prayer that it should not be given or that it should be deferred for a year. It is evident therefore that these two prayers (1) and (3) or rather the whole petition was in the interest of the brokers. The second petition was against the immediate establishment of the Ganja Cultivators' Co-operative Society. This petition was signed by 31 men for 295 people of 18 different villages out of 199 villages in the ganja mahal. Most of the signatories had no knowledge of the contents of the petition they signed. I reported on this petition some time after detailed enquiries were made. Many people at Naogaon such as merchants, petty dealers and legal practitioners derived some benefit directly or indirectly from the business in ganja which was going on in their midst. When the society was going to be established they thought they would be able to purchase shares of the society. As this was not allowed, membership being confined to bonâ fide cultivators, they did not entertain friendly feelings towards the society. When a poor cultivator approached any of them for advice the attitude of mind with which he returned, it can be imagined, was never very favourable to the new society. Though the brokers were not liked by the people their sudden forced disappearance from the field of their activities where they were making, it was commonly believed, fabulous sums, roused feelings of sympathy where jealousy had previously existed. After filing these petitions they gave out that the Collector was coming and cultivators were implored to wait for 4 or 5 days and then purchase shares. In this way, the cultivators were kept back on two or three occasions for 3 or 4 days from coming to the Ganja Office at all. For once they came to the office and had the whole thing explained to them, they became members of the society, if they could afford to. In September the Bengali translation of the by-laws was received in the Society's Office. Till then the brokers had no opportunity of criticizing them in detail. Now that opportunity presented itself to them. Under by-law 48 the rates at which the cultivators get advances in April are fixed, but there is a proviso that the general meeting could reduce the rates with the approval of the Commissioner of Excise and the Registrar of Co-operative Societies, Bengal. This was interpreted to mean that not only would they get no bonus but even the rates of advance promised by the Subdivisional Officer and Registrar would not be given to them. The translation of the by-law was not happy and full advantage was taken of it. All the leading cultivators saw me and Khan Bahadur Maulvi Ataur Rahaman on 10th October and this was their only grievance and they were apparently satisfied with the explanation given. Some of the brokers who were taking a leading part in the agitation and in the creation of discontent amongst the cultivators thought it expedient to curtail their activities in this direction for a time, as they thought of submitting and eventually submitted tenders for some contract work of the society.

On 26th September a notification was published in the Calcutta Gazette inviting objections to the grant of the monopoly of ganja and bhang to the society under section 22 of the Excise Act (Bengal Act V of 1909). On the 17th October the managing committee of the society did not accept the tenders of the brokers, and on the 18th October the office closed for the holidays. Advantage was taken of the holidays to circulate the rumours detailed above and misinterpret the by-laws and to create distrust and discontent amongst the cultivators. By-law 48 was interpreted to mean that the authorities, if they liked, could reduce the price of ganja, it being taken for granted that the rates in the by-law were the price, and the existence of by-law 52 was most conveniently ignored. It was also circulated that ganja lands would be acquired by Government. A petition was drafted in which, in addition to the statement about price and rumour about land acquisition, the by-laws relating to the payment of the cost of the preventive establishment, to the destruction of ganja unfit for consumption and to the formation of the grading committee and by-laws Nos. 19 and 53 were dishonestly criticised. The cultivators were told that their credit in the money market was gone and that they would not be able to get a piece of cloth even on credit. Advantage was taken of the Government notification inviting objections to the grant of monopoly to the society to disseminate false rumours and statements amongst ignorant cultivators against the society. In the general meeting of the society held on 31st October, many cultivators came and demanded higher rates of advance, some even demanding Rs. 200 per maund, and as this could not be acceded to, there was some discontent. On 1st November some of those brokers approached the Registrar at Santahar for employment and came back disappointed. From 2nd November they began to circulate printed copies of a pamphlet broadcast in the mahals and deputed their paid agents and sympathisers to obtain signatures to a petition. They managed to do the work so cautiously and secretly that my officers who constantly move in the ganja mahal had no inkling of what was happening. By a mere accident I came to know that a printed petition was being circulated on the night of the 4th November and spoke about it to the Collector and the Registrar on the following day. On the morning of the 6th November I got a copy of the application and received information that there was great unrest, panic and commotion amongst the cultivators.

Some of the former cultivator-brokers were induced to take the side of the existing brokers. They were told that they had nothing to gain by the establishment of the society, and among other arguments the following were adduced to induce them to oppose the society : —

(1) Their money-lending business would be gone; for the poor cultivators to whom they used to lend money at a ruinous rate of interest would not require money as they do now. The establishment of credit societies would mean a death-blow to their business.
(2) It was they who used to get the highest rates every year.
(3) They would no longer get a portion of the illicit gain which the brokers get from their poorer neighbours.
(4) The rich cultivators would get no preferential treatment from the society.
(5) The facility which they now get for realising their dues from their debtors, i.e., the poorer cultivators through the agency of the brokers when the price of ganja is realised would cease to exist.
(6) They almost always got the full price of their ganja, and in addition they were paid a portion of the illgotten gains of the brokers.

Some of the cultivators were under the delusion that they would be able to derive some illicit income by being members of the managing and grading committee. After the distribution of the by-laws they saw that the prospect of any such income was very remote indeed. The brokers thus got the sympathy of some of the former cultivator-brokers, who wield a very considerable influence in the ganja mahal. These men and their paid agents Gada and Nila of Chawbara and Paru and Jadavulla of Boalia began to preach to the cultivators that unless they filed petitions to the authorities their lands would be acquired and that they would have to work like coolies. On the other hand, if they filed petitions, they were told, they would get an increase in the rate of advance. Different tricks were employed to get signatures of different cultivators. The feeling amongst the cultivators ran very high. It was reported to me that there was every likelihood of a breach of the peace. At the time of the last agitation a most cowardly attack was made on one Sub-Inspector of Excise and his peons on 23rd September last in the ganja mahal. In the circumstances, I issued search warrants to search the houses of two brokers on 9th November. The draft of the original petition to Government with printed copies, 99 copies of the printed pamphlet and one signed paper were recovered from the house and the office of one broker. He admitted now what he had previously most vigorously denied, viz., that he had drafted the petition. On the following night he gave me a solemn undertaking not to take any part in the propaganda. On the 11th most of the leading cultivators held a conference and sent a telegram to Government, stating that the petition sent was submitted at the instance of the brokers.

The brokers now fell back upon the press for carrying out their campaign. A power-of-attorney was given to a pleader to inaugurate a press campaign. Whether he was responsible or not two "Wails from Naogaon" made their appearance in the press in Calcutta. A prompt communiqué from Government exposed the false statements made, and the press campaign collapsed.

A relation of a zemindar and money-lender of the town applied for the appointment of a clerk in the office of the society. The Managing Committee refused to appoint him. He took it as an insult and joined hands with the leading agitators Their agents now began to intimidate the members of the society and jeer at them when passing by the road. Vigorous measures had to be taken to stop their mischievous activities.

The "Red Spider" was the next visitation that attacked the society and the insect came, it appeared, as a Providence-sent ally of the agitators. When the "Red Spider" attacks the ganja crop he generally ruins it. To the delight of the agitators he came in battalions on the ripening crop. Dearth of rain aided his efforts. Everywhere it was agreed that the crop would be short and that ganja would fetch prices as high as Rs. 400 throughout the year 1918. The official statistics put the crop down at between 5,000 and 6,000 maunds. There was an agitation for increased prices. The Excise Commissioner and the Registrar visited the mahals and agreed to raise the prices if necessary. The cultivators were told that the prices would be raised sufficiently high to enable them to get a net profit of Rs. 90 from every bigha of land, the basis on which the original prices were fixed. This took place in January and early in February. The agitators still persisted. They represented the promises of the officials as false, and the cultivators continued to be torn between conflicting emotions. Then the amazing thing happened. The crop was harvested by the end of February and the ganja manufactured and weighed. Instead of the anticipated 5,000 maunds of poor ganja over 8,000 maunds of ganja superior in quality to the crops of many years were stored. Then the cultivators realise their position. With this crop in stock exceeding the annual consumption by about 2,000 maunds it was certain that under the broker system the brokers would pick and choose and that the price would have oscillated between Rs. 10 and Rs. 20 per maund. Further, under the old system it was certain that a large quantity would have been eventually destroyed. The society claimed it would save each cultivator from the mental torture caused by the fear that his ganja would remain unsold and be destroyed. The society would spread the loss over all the cultivators. Further the society claimed it would pay Rs. 70, Rs. 60 or Rs. 50 according to the grade for every maund of the crop and pay this in April, and further offer a bonus on each maund when accounts were closed at the end of the year. This latter was an astounding claim to make, and while cultivators clung close to the society there were still "obstinate questionings" as to the possibility of making the claim good. Even the educated people of Naogaon held it was impossible of realisation. Great therefore was the gratification of cultivators when April came and an average of over Rs. 65 per maund was advanced to each cultivator with the prospect of a considerable bonus in December and a dividend of 12½ per cent. on shares taken in the society. The cultivators could hardly believe their good fortune. The mahajans who had lent them money likewise thought they were dreaming. One of the saddest sights during payment hour was the mahajans and landlords' agents lurking in the neighbourhood to whom the cultivator paid over the price of his crop. For the cultivator to get money at all, however, was something extraordinary. To get it in April and without paying one pice by way of bribery was beyond all dreams. Yet it happened so. The society borrowed 2 lakhs from the Provincial Co-operative Federation, Limited, and with this and its own takings paid the cultivators. Already in June it largely repaid the Federation and by loans to another large Central Bank it has saved it in a crisis. Naogaon is converted. A Central Bank was formed in March last. Credit societies are springing up so that next year the cultivators will not be seen pursued by mahajans. Every cultivator is assured that in December he will get a bonus which will save him from borrowing. All are of opinion that they have been saved by this wonderful thing called "Co-operation."

Further co-operative activity will gradually take possession of Naogaon and we hope to chronicle further developments in these pages periodically. Already the society has decided to have its own workshop, and next year there will be no contractors for its large requirements of boxes and bags. Land is being bought, new offices are being erected, residential quarters for the staff are also being built, and it is expected that in addition to paying to Government the whole cost of the preventive staff this year the society will put away a large reserve fund and a large fund for the equalisation of prices in future years.

The society has already sold stock valued over 4 lakhs and hold stock valued over six lakhs of rupees. Even if one lakh's worth of stock has eventually to be destroyed, which is very unlikely, the Society will be in a position to realise its financial hopes.

The question may be asked "How has this been accomplished?" It has certainly not been accomplished by raising prices too high. Government is interested in this, for high prices would result in a diminution of Government revenue. The sale prices this year are considerably below last year's prices. The real reason then of this happy financial position is to be found in effective organisation and elimination of waste and especially in the removal of middlemen.

Cultivators and wholesale dealers are now better pleased than ever for the former get better prices and the latter know they are not being cheated. Hitherto, it has been shown, the cultivator was a great sufferer under the system in force. The wholesale dealer too was a sufferer. He had to send men from Bihar, Assam, Benares, Gorakpur or wherever his business was to buy ganja and bring it to him. He often had to come himself to check their honesty. He frequently too had to lock up large sums in stocks and advances to brokers. Now all he has to do is to send a letter to the Manager making him his agent for the purposes of the statutory rules and then whenever he wants ganja he can write and wire, if it is urgent, and the ganja is despatched to him. He knows the society's rule that 1st class ganja is first sold, then, when this is exhausted, 2nd class ganja and, finally, 3rd class. He knows the fixed price and so he can calculate his expenditure accurately beforehand. If he locks up capital by buying early large stocks he will gain by getting only 1st class ganja. Even for this he does not need to lock up much capital as the society will register advance orders on payment of 33 per cent. of the price in advance and the rest on delivery, which means that a dealer can get first grade ganja for all his requirements with little or no expenditure. No wonder the wholesale dealers who came from outside Bengal to Naogaon this year went away pleased with the new arrangements.

The cultivators and every one in Naogaon now realise that this society has been established for the amelioration of the social, material and moral condition of the ganja cultivators. As one cultivator very pathetically remarked to me one day the society had at last saved them from Jahannam (hell) inasmuch as every time they came to sell ganja they had falsely to state that they had received a particular amount as per delivery order which they did not actually receive.

By the end of June last cultivators had purchased 2,601 shares and paid up Rs. 31,191 for their shares. This is the short history of the organisation of the largest society in India so far as number of members is concerned.

I would conclude this report with one or two suggestions for further improving the condition of bona-fide ganja cultivators. In order to free them from undesirable influences, I think the maximum and minimum quantity of land for which a single cultivator may get a licence should be fixed. Though I cannot say with certainty yet I had reasons to suspect that one of the big cultivators smuggled a large quantity of ganja. It is very easy for him to smuggle a large quantity without appreciably affecting his outturn, and being a rich man he can easily stop the mouth of the Subordinate Preventive Staff of the Excise Department. It has been the practice to issue licences for 4 or 5 cottahs of land, which to my mind is objectionable both from the point of view of the cultivator as well as from the excise point of view. A cultivator who gets licence for such a small quantity of land cannot make both ends meet. He very easily succumbs to the machinations of the smugglers and parts with a portion of his crop which he can do without rousing the suspicion of the Excise authorities. With the introduction of the block system, it would be possible to grant licence to individual cultivators of a larger quantity of land than was hitherto possible. In my opinion, the maximum should be 10 bighas and minimum one bigha for the present. But it would be possible to work up gradually to a maximum of 5 bighas and minimum of 2 bighas. Before the year is out, we shall have a network of Credit Societies in the ganja mahal, and it is hoped that financial difficulty will not stand in the way of our granting licences of not less than 2 bighas to individual cultivators. The other matter to which I want to draw attention is the system of Adi. Some licensees who are not bonâ-fide cultivators and some big cultivators employ Adhiars. In my opinion the system of Adi should be discouraged. If big cultivators were not allowed to have licences for an unusually large quantity of land they would not require Adhiars. We certainly do not require Adhiars for people who are not bonâ-fide cultivators, and the sooner they are weeded out the better for all concerned. The Adhiars are suspected to be selling ganja to smugglers in order to secure a larger share of the profit, and this is easy as their principals have very little control over them.

APPENDIX I (b).

Substance of an Address from the Registrar of Co-operative Societies, Bengal, to the Members of the Naogaon Ganja Cultivators' Co-operative Society, Limited, at their Annual Meeting on the 11th December 1918.

The Naogaon Ganja Cultivators' Co-operative Society has now completed its first working year and the audit of the society has revealed a state of affairs on which the members, the management, the staff and the Co-operative Department have every reason to congratulate themselves. It is to be hoped, too, that the Excise Department will have cause to thank the Society for having brought purity into a trade which had for a generation been the source of many scandals.

It was in 1915 that I first became acquainted with Naogaon when I came here for a month to hear objection cases in the settlement operations then going on. I was fortunate then in having Khan Bahadur Ataur Rahman as my preceptor in settlement, and I am fortunate in having him now in my own department. Your present Subdivisional Officer was then Subdivisional Officer here, and in that you were fortunate. Between us, although none of us was connected directly with the Co-operative Department then, we realized that the one way of saving the ganja trade from the scandals long associated with its name and of ensuring to you the full value of your labour and your lands was a co-operative society, and we three officers, each in his own way, laid ourselves out then to try and bring this co-operative organization to success. We knew that, with memories of the Ganja Association still fresh, those in authority were not favourably inclined towards combination among the ganja cultivators. In 1916 I returned to Naogaon as a representative of the Co-operative Department and discussed the question with many of you in more than one meeting. Then came the Registrar, Mr. Mitra. You and we all agreed that the formation of a society was desirable, and Mr. Mitra and I went back to convert the Government. It took us a much longer time than it took us to convince you, and it was not till the middle of the year 1917 that we got Government's approval to our proposals. You remember then the opposition that began in Naogaon. People told you the most extravagant tales, told you you would work as convicts, in convict dress, on convict food, and induced you to send petitions to Government to stop the society. These people are the people who this year would have been enjoying the seven lakhs of rupees which I reckon you have saved for yourselves. We made you promises that you would get a return of about Rs. 90 net profit from every bigha of ganja land, but the price of ganja was then Rs. 400 a maund owing to the shortage and you imagined that you might make greater profits. Have you forgotten how that shortage came about? It was because in a previous year you refused to take licenses to grow ganja owing to the abuses of the system which gave the profits to the broker and the middleman and left the toil and anxiety to you. The red spider was on the new crop at the end of 1917, and you thought you foresaw a further shortage and even more than Rs. 400 a maund for your crop and you feared your society would not give you so much, merely because the Society had promised not to give less than Rs. 50, 60 or 70 a maund according to grade. Then what happened after all the petitions and all the lies you were told? The crop was harvested in February last and instead of a shortage crop of 5,000 maunds you found an excess crop of 8,000 maunds. You were quick to realize what this meant. Consumption annually is only 6,000 to 7,000 maunds, so you knew the brokers would pick and choose and take what ganja they wished at Rs. 40 a maund and less. Some of you told me that when the broker was done with you would not get Rs. 20 a maund for your crop. You certainly would not have got more than Rs. 40. Further one-eighth of the crop would not be bought, and so one man in every eight of you had to look forward to total loss.

It was no wonder then that you turned eagerly to the society and that those who had not joined already eagerly came forward to join in April, when the society paid you in ready cash, without a single pice being taken as a bribe, an average of Rs. 66 a maund and promised you a bonus in December. If you had sold to brokers, some would have sold in April, some in May, some in June, some not even yet, and some would never sell at all. The Society paid every one in April and promised a bonus to all in December.

The society gave you an average of Rs. 66 per maund in April. The brokers would not have given you Rs. 40. On your 8,000 maunds then the society saved for you over two lakhs of rupees, even assuming that the brokers would have bought the whole crop from you and taken no illegal charges from you. In addition to this extra two lakhs which the society paid out to you in April last, it has now about 5 lakhs of rupees in profits to divide among you and for your good. Thus over 7 lakhs in all have been taken from the middlemen and brokers for your benefit in one year. Think of it. The sale-price of the whole crop at the minimum price at which Government wishes it to be sold to consumers is about 10½ lakhs of rupees, and out of this at the best Rs. 3,20,000 would have gone to you and over 7 lakhs to the middlemen. The society has already paid you over 5¼ lakhs and there are now over 5 lakhs of profits for distribution, and you are here to decide how it will be distributed.

You propose to put Rs. 75,000 to reserve fund, a very wise provision. Make the reserves of your society strong and many things will become easier for the society. You propose to distribute a bonus of Rs. 25 per maund to each member for the ganja bought by the society. This will take Rs. 2,00,000. You propose to put Rs. 1,00,000 to meet the charges which in your contract with Government you undertook to meet if called on. Government has not yet asked you to pay, but, even if it does, a lakh a year is a cheap rate for the monopoly which Government has given you. You are allotting nearly Rs. 40,000 for charitable, public purposes and you are paying a dividend of 12½ per cent. on the shares which the members have taken up in the society. You are giving a bonus of a month's pay to your staff and placing about Rs. 30,000 to be expended on land and buildings this year and Rs. 40,000 to a fund for equalizing prices in future years.

These are the figures of your profits as they stand But there is much more. When the disastrous flood swept over this area in August last what happened? The members of this society did not go crying to Government for charity. They had Rs. 70,000 of savings of their own in Postal Cash Certificates, which they were able to draw upon on the rainy day. The society bought 1,000 maunds of rice and gave it to those who wanted it, and now while all around you on every side people are borrowing to rebuild their fallen houses you are getting 2 lakhs of rupees among less than 3,000 of you, which will help you to rebuild your homes. If you must borrow, you have set up co-operative banks in your villages with a Central Bank at Naogaon, all financed by your own society with your own money, and you can borrow at reasonable rates from these in the certainty that any profits made will be used for your own benefit. What would have happened in the floods if you had no society? You would have come begging of the brokers to buy your ganja at any price; you would have sold it for Rs. 10 a maund, so great would your need have been, and you would have borrowed at the old usurious rates and gone crying with the rest of the countryside to Government. Instead, you have realized "The glorious privilege of being independent."

Your society now is more prosperous than any in India. Indeed I doubt if there is a co-operative society in the world that can show better figures for the last year in proportion to the extent of business done. Co-operation has, I hope, taken root amongst you. You have learned that by combining and by each man sacrificing his chance of making a little more than his neighbour, every man has made more than he could have possibly made under the old system. Your organization is the right kind founded on initial sacrifice in the trust of a greater reward all round. You have paid up in shares about Rs. 30,000, and only those who are cultivators of the crop have taken shares. You have formed already a Central Co-operative Bank and about 40 village banks and you are daily forming new banks in other villages inside and outside the ganja mahals.

Your proposed distribution of the amount allotted for charity is an example for all India. You are sending Rs. 1,000 to His Excellency the Governor of Bengal for the fund for the sailors who kept the shores of India inviolate in the great war. You are putting Rs. 5,000 at the disposal of the Collector of Rajshahi to add a ward to the Naogaon Hospital. You are giving a certain amount to improve the roads in the ganja mahals. You are building and equipping a model dispensary in the ganja mahals. You are giving a donation to the High English School and another to the Middle English School in the mahals and you are appointing a committee and putting them in finance to enable them to build and equip and staff ten primary schools for the free education of your children and yourselves, and you have provided a small fund to meet any emergency such as occurred in the flood this year. These are acts of good citizenship which augur well for the administration of this area when self-government is given to you. You have decided to spend your money on these purposes not at the prompting of officials or others but straight from your own hearts. The schools, the roads, the dispensary, the war charities, etc., have all been suggested by members of the society themselves as objects to which money might be devoted. I congratulate you most heartily upon your decisions.

But for the flood which disorganized everything you would have had a large co-operative store here now and you could have kept the profiteer in his place. Unfortunately, just when this project was about to materialize, the flood came and compelled you to postpone it, but I hope ere long to see the store registered and working. I hope, too, to see you combining to sell your other crops, your jute, your sugarcane, your paddy, and I am confident that from such combinations you will be equally astounded to find what profits the middlemen have been taking away from you. In ganja you have found from one year's work that the middlemen got ⅔ of the market value of the crop and you, who rent the land and toil to grow the crop, got ⅓ of the value. You may not find such monstrous injustice in regard to the other crops, but you may find the distribution of the profit of those crops to be unfair enough to make it well worth your while to combine for sale.

Already Naogaon has become the centre of co-operation, the co-operative capital of North Bengal. I look forward to seeing it within a few years a hive of co-operative industry of all sorts. I want to see you handling and marketing all your crops as you have done with ganja I want to see you, if in debt at all—agriculturists must inevitably be in debt at certain times of the year—in debt only to yourselves. I am sure I shall not be disappointed.

Before I finish speaking to you I think it due to you to tell you how your society has saved the co-operative movement in Bengal from collapse. This can now be made public though it was in the interests of the movement to keep it undisclosed hitherto. You know that before the price of jute rose, the cultivators of Bengal were in a very bad way. Last May and June and July the outlook was the blackest we ever experienced. This was but natural, considering everything. Even in Europe until July the clouds hung heavily over the allied peoples. In June last the state of affairs was so bad that we hourly expected to hear of the collapse of one or two central banks, and if even one central bank collapsed there would have been a fatal run on all. The banks which were in danger turned to the Bengal Provincial Co-operative Federation for salvation. The Federation drew on every pice of its credit and still the clouds showed no signs of breaking. Despair had almost come upon us but your society saved us. The Federation had lent you two lakhs of rupees in April. In May you began to repay and in July you were pouring funds into the Federation at a rate that made it possible to meet all demands and carry the central banks over the crisis till the jute crop came in. In other parts of India and of the world Co-operative Societies and Joint Stock Banks had to resort to Government for assistance at different times during the war. Bengal was saved from this by your society. This disclosure may now be made, because the Federation and the central banks are out of the valley and again rising to the crest of prosperity. There is no demand which could be made upon them to-day that they could not instantly meet, but they owe all this to you.

APPENDIX I (o).

Note by the Registrar on the Naogaon Ganja Cultivators' Co-operative Society, Limited, Rajshahi District.

Co-operative credit.

The committee of the society have just decided to open a banking department to organise, finance and control co-operative credit societies in the ganja mahals, in which area there are at present 41 societies, with a working capital of over half a lakh of rupees. These will all be taken over, and it is expected that about 20 more such societies will be organised and affiliated to the society.

Industrial department.

It has also been decided to open an industrial department to organise, finance, control, provide with raw materials and market the finished products of co-operative societies of artizans, chiefly weavers, within a radius of 10 miles of Naogaon. Within this area, partly in Bogra district and partly in Naogaon, there are numerous villages of weavers, the chief centre being at Raninagar. About half a dozen societies have already been formed, and weavers from all parts of the area are daily asking for the formation of fresh societies. It will be remembered that this area was affected by the floods last year. The existing societies have been at work for a very short time, some of them only for a few weeks. They have secured contracts from some hospitals in Calcutta for the manufacture of bandage cloth and have already supplied some thousands of yards of this cloth. They have also put a very good quality of duster on the market and have found a ready sale for it. They have also woven about 1,000 saris and dhooties for the ganja society, which has just distributed them free to poor people in the ganja mahals. The weaving inspector of Rajshahi Division has spent a considerable time with these weavers, has convinced them of the advantages of fly-shuttle looms, has introduced these looms to them and has considerably improved the quality of the material manufactured. Altogether I shall not be surprised if there are 40 or 50 co-operative industrial societies in this area within the next 12 months. These industrial societies will require a financially strong organisation behind them to provide raw materials and to take contracts and market the finished goods. The ganja society expects to be able to undertake this work and make a profit out of it for the industrial societies.

Cattle Insurance.

Another new department which it has been decided to open is a cattle insurance department for ganja cultivators who are members of the society. For this purpose the society is engaging a Veterinary Assistant Surgeon. Applications for the post have been received and have been sent to me with the request that I should select the officer. There are something under 3,000 members who can avail themselves of this insurance scheme, and assuming that they insure 5,000 animals for an average of Rs. 30 each (the policy will be issued for two-third of the value set upon the animal by the Veterinary Assistant Surgeon and the insurance sub-committee), the whole risk of the society will be 1½ lakhs of rupees. Even if a calamity should sweep away all the cattle in one year the total risk of the society would be only 1½ lakhs of rupees, less premia paid and the value of the hides. The society could afford even this risk, and in a calamity of the nature assumed it would be only right that the society should come to the aid of its members. As the idea is new, however, it is likely that not more than 500 cattle will be insured to begin with, and the society will then without undertaking undue risk have an opportunity of collecting actuarial data to enable it to adjust premia, so that when all the members begin to avail themselves of the scheme the society will be in a position to protect itself against serious loss.

Stores.

A year ago a suggestion was made to open a store department in the society to supply members with the necessaries of life and to market the agricultural produce of such members as wished to sell their produce co-operatively. Owing to the floods last year, which made it difficult to raise share capital, the project was postponed. The members are, however, most eager to open this new department, and with the steady rise of prices of food-grains, mustard oil, kerosine oil and the sustained high price of cloth, their desire for this new development has considerably increased. They realise that had the stores been opened last year they would probably have already saved thousands of rupees themselves and made considerable profits for the society.

Farm.

Some time ago I sent you a note on my proposal to the society to start an agricultural farm to improve ganja cultivation and agriculture generally in the area of the society and to provide members with improved reliable seeds and demonstrate the advantages of good manures, irrigation, etc. Copies of that note were sent to the Hon'ble Member, the Commissioner, Rajshahi Division, the Excise Commissioner, the Director of Agriculture, the Collector of Rajshahi, the Subdivisional Officer of Naogaon and the Joint Registrar of Co-operative Societies, Rajshahi Division. The comments on the proposal have all been favourable. On the suggestion of the Director of Agriculture the area for the proposed farm has been reduced from 200 bighas to 90 bighas and, as desired by the Commissioner of Rajshahi, cattle farming will not be undertaken at present. The committee of the society have accepted the proposal, and are recommending the general meeting to put it into force. Government will be asked to depute an officer of the Agricultural Department to foreign service with the society to superintend the working of the farm, and the Director of Agriculture will be freely consulted for detailed advice. It is contemplated to establish on the farm a practical school for children of members of the society, and to grant scholarships to the children selected for this practical agricultural training. It is also probable that demonstration plots will be cultivated by the society in different parts of the ganja mahals.

Sanitation.

The society has already obtained the land and arranged to build the first of the three dispensaries it intends to endow. As these become ready Assistant Surgeons will be engaged for them and free medical attendance will be provided for the families of members. There will be a sanitation sub-committee of the society to see to the proper working of the dispensaries.

Education

There is an education committee at present for the proper expenditure of the amounts sanctioned by the society for educational purposes, the opening of a number of primary schools, so that free primary education will be available for all the children of members of the society, and the endowment of a Middle English and High English School in the ganja mahals. Doubtless too the technical officers, agricultural, medical, veterinary, etc., of the society will be expected to give public lectures on their respective subjects in the villages from time to time.

Outside charities.

In addition considerable sums have been spent on outside charities by the society, e.g., Rs. 5,000 on the Naogaon Hospital, Rs. 1,000 on a school in Naogaon and some thousands of rupees on the distribution of rice and cloth to the poor, and it is expected that a share of the profits will annually be distributed in this way.

Roads.

The society has voted Rs. 1,500 for expenditure on roads in the ganja mahals.

It will now be clear that far greater developments have taken place than the most sanguine anticipated when the society was started, and that further great developments will take place in the near future. So important has the society become in the administration of the district that the Collector has suggested that the Chairman of the society should be the Collector of Rajshahi and not the Subdivisional Officer of Naogaon, who should, however, be Vice-Chairman. The society has agreed to this proposal. The Collector and Subdivisional Officer, however, have not the necessary time to devote to the details of the society, and I have therefore suggested to the committee that they should ask Government for the services of a Deputy Collector to be a whole-time servant of the society, their Deputy Chairman and Chief Executive Officer. The committee have told me that this proposal was one which they themselves wished to make. They have accordingly passed a resolution asking Government for the services of a Deputy Collector. They are prepared to pay up to Rs. 1,000 a month for such services. It will be seen from this letter that the Deputy Chairman will have sufficient time to occupy him in attending to the details of the working of the society, and a perusal of the revised by-laws, which I have drafted at the request of the committee, will show that as an executive officer the Deputy Chairman is not likely to have much leisure time. Any spare time that he may have will be profitably occupied in introducing new forms of co-operative activity in the area.

APPENDIX I (d).

Extract from the 1920-21 report of the Naogaon Gaoja Cultivators' Co-operative Society, Limited.

From the balance sheet it will appear that the society has made a net profit of Rs. 2,50,665-4-5. It should be mentioned here that Rs. 53,193-4 which has since been drawn from several funds of the society, created from its previous profits as pointed out by the Auditor, should be re-imbursed to such funds, and Rs. 1,044-12 should go to adjust the advance payment of charities made by us in anticipation of sanction. Thus a balance of Rs. 1,96,417-4-5 is left, which being supplemented by the previous year's undistributed profits amounting to Rs. 3,714-2-11, may be distributed as follows :—

	Rs.	A.	P.

APPENDIX J.

The Training of Primary School Teachers.

No. 294, dated Calcutta, the $\frac{31st\ March}{16th\ April}$ 1915.

From—THE HON'BLE MR. W. W. HORNELL, M.A., Director of Public Instruction, Bengal,

To—The Secretary to the Government of Bengal, General Department.

I HAVE the honour to address you on the subject of the training of elementary teachers for primary vernacular schools for boys in the Presidency of Bengal. This subject is complicated by the fact that in Eastern and in Western Bengal two different systems of training have been in existence from the date of the partition. The amalgamation of these systems on a single improved basis has now become a matter of urgency and importance ; and it is this problem which I would present to Government now with all its connected details.

2. In Western Bengal the system of training elementary teachers for vernacular schools has developed out of that designed by Sir Alexander Pedler and presented by him to Government in the year 1902 after the Education Conference held at Simla in the previous year. His system continued to be slightly modified and improved up to the time of Sir Archdale Earle's Directorship in the year 1906, when a complete revision of the guru-training schools of the Province was undertaken. At that time the arrangement was that there were two schools in every subdivision, each imparting a two years' course of instruction to 16 gurus. The total recurring cost of each centre amounted to Rs. 166 per mensem, distributed as follows :—

	Rs.
Head teacher	18
Second „	10
Third „	8
Sixteen stipends from Rs. 5—10 a month	125	average.
Contingencies	5
Total ...	166

From the year 1906 increased grants from the Government of India were liberally given ; and an effort was made to put into effect the scheme of training as outlined by Sir Archdale Earle. Type-plans were prepared to facilitate the provision both in old and in new schools of suitable accommodation. An attempt, which ended in failure, was made to build departmentally ; and finally the Public Works Department were entrusted with the work and were asked to take on to their books the buildings which had been up to date constructed under the supervision of the Education Department. Since the inauguration of Sir Archdale Earle's scheme a sum of Rs. 3,90,000 has been spent on the construction and repairs of guru-training schools in Western Bengal and the total recurring charges all round amounted in the financial year 1912-13 to Rs. 1,09,575. The programme for the year 1913-14 included Rs. 75,000 for the establishment of six new buildings and Rs. 1,00,000 for the repair of existing schools. As usual building rates have increased and the most recent estimates for a guru-training school in Western Bengal amount to a sum intermediate between 13 and 15 thousand rupees. This apart, the present system of training elementary school teachers in Western Bengal is identical with that designed by Sir Archdale Earle; and though certain sums have been spent on repairing old and constructing new buildings, no effort has been made so far to improve the system of instruction.

3. An examination of the existing schools of Western Bengal and their condition reveals the following facts :—

(1) Throughout the Western Bengal area there are 78 guru-training schools on a sanctioned recurring scale of Rs. 166 a month.

(2) Of these 15 possess accommodation of the earliest type instituted by Sir Alexander Pedler; and 16 possess hired accommodation. We must conclude then that 31 of the total number of schools are housed in the crudest fashion.

(3) Forty-seven schools have accommodation on Sir Archdale Earle's plan, and of these 31 have entirely new buildings and 16 have buildings partly new and partly old.

In the future, therefore, a large programme of capital expenditure has to be faced, if it is decided to complete the scheme of 1906. The number of new schools to be established would be in round numbers 30 at Rs. 15,000 each, giving a total of Rs. 4,50,000. The number of old institutions to be improved would be about 20; and this work would cost at least one lakh. The completion of this work would establish in Western Bengal a large number of respectably-housed institutions on Sir Archdale Earle's plan for guru-training schools. As I have pointed out above it would in no sense modify or improve the system of instruction.

4. Such, in brief outline, is the condition of affairs in Western Bengal. The partition found in the eastern area of Bengal 39 training schools on a scale of Rs. 83 a month, each instructing ten students throughout a course of two years, as sanctioned by Government in December of the year 1905. In other words at this time in Eastern Bengal Sir Alexander Pedler's system was in vogue, and his system had just reached that stage of improvement or modification which Sir Archdale Earle found in 1906 in Western Bengal and which he refashioned in the manner described in paragraph 2 of this letter. It is clear that, under a new réginie, this system would develop on independent lines. It is unnecessary to trace the development in detail; and a resumé of the existing position will suffice for the present purpose. The main points of difference between the Eastern and Western Bengal Guru-training schools have been summarised in the Hon'ble Mr. Nathan's note on Primary Education as follows :—

(1) There is one instead of two training schools in each subdivision as in Western Bengal.

(2) The training school has 20 instead of 16 students.

(3) There are two instead of three teachers.

Clearly, then, the Education Department of Eastern Bengal did not adopt Sir Archdale Earle's scheme of 1906. As will be shown later a much more drastic reformation of the guru-training school system was designed in 1908; but this could not be made operative at once, and even at the present time the system of Eastern Bengal is generally as described above. Both the existing system in Eastern and in Western Bengal belong in fact to the old order.

5. It is now a matter of common knowledge that our guru-training schools are not able to do what is required of them if there is to be any real expansion and improvement of the primary school system. Criticism of the existing system has for years been concentrated upon two main defects—

(a) The incompetence of the guru-instructor in charge of the training school.—This man receives Rs. 18 a month as salary and his qualifications cover the middle vernacular course with a period of instruction in a vernacular training school. It is unnecessary to state that such a man cannot be in the nature of things an instructor of intending or existing teachers. He is little, if at all, better educated than his students and he has no idea of what class-teaching or school organization means.

(b) The inferiority of the guru.—These men are brought unwilling from their schools to be trained. The stipends awarded them, Rs. 7 per month, barely meet the cost of existence: and their pay on leaving the training school though, as the result of a successful training course, it is now slightly enhanced, is still in most cases not a living wage.

It is quite unnecessary to expatiate upon these facts which speak for themselves. The existing guru-training school system stands condemned alike in its working and results; and I am convinced that to go forward with the expansion of such a system, or with its perpetuation on anything but a radically altered basis, is to apply our new Imperial revenues to the endowment and expansion of incompetence.

6. The truth of this conclusion seems to have been realized by the Government of Eastern Bengal and Assam in 1908, when a completely new scheme for the training of primary school teachers was put before the consideration of the Government of India. This scheme, as evolved in the Hon'ble Mr. Lyon's letter of May 1908, marks an entirely new departure in the history of vernacular education in Bengal and as such it must be given here in detail. As sanctioned, the new scheme was as follows :—

(1) A training school for each subdivision, ordinarily at headquarters. This would mean about 40 schools in all throughout the area of the Eastern Bengal and Assam Province.
(2) Buildings to be provided as an estimated cost of Rs. 10,000 including hostels and a school garden.
(3) The Head Master to be either an officer of the Subordinate Educational Service, or an officer of the new service, of vernacular teachers proposed in the "secondary education scheme", with an allowance of Rs. 20.
(4) The Head Master to have two assistants in the Vernacular Teachers Service.
(5) The monthly cost of each school (excluding stipends) was calculated in accordance with the following alternatives :—

	Rs.		Rs.
(i) One Subordinate Educational Service officer ...	96	(ii) Three Vernacular Service officers	90
Two Vernacular Service officers	60	Allowance for Head Master	20
Menials and contingencies	44	Menials and contingencies ...	40
Total ...	200	Total ...	150

(6) Each school to accommodate 40 pupils.
(7) Stipends to be at the rate of Rs. 7 for existing and Rs. 6 for intending teachers.
(8) The course for existing teachers to extend over one year: for new candidates two years, except in the case of those who had read the middle vernacular course, for whom one year.

7. These details speak for themselves. The essential value of this scheme centres in the conception of an improved staff for Guru-training schools. It does not matter that the new vernacular cadre does not exist at present, nor does it matter that rates for buildings and for stipends must be revised and increased. The essential point is that it has been recognized that in staffing these training schools we must find the best and not a make-shift staff. This fact, along with the existence of Imperial grants making possible a substantial allowance for gurus in training will enable us to formulate a generous scheme of instruction for vernacular masters.

8. The Government of Eastern Bengal and Assam anticipated the inauguration of its new system of training elementary schoolmasters both on the side of recurring and capital expenditure. As regards the first, nothing had been done prior to the recent redistribution of areas; but as regards the second, considerable progress had been made. In Eastern Bengal, ten new guru schools, on the improved plan of Hon'ble Mr. Sharp, have been completed and ten more have been initiated. These new schools are now ready for the improved staff on the proposed higher rates of pay. In Eastern areas, therefore, all that remains to be done is to put into effect the proposals already made. In Western areas, we have to consider the advisability of adopting the Eastern system. In Eastern Bengal, the problem is simple. All that we have to do is to replace a cheaply-constructed and badly-staffed training school by one well built and properly equipped. Each subdivision has a single school at present and this arrangement will continue, the new school providing accommodation for double the existing numbers or 40 students in all. In Western Bengal, the problem of our future action is more complicated. We have to consider the possibility of amalgamating two badly-equipped training schools, of establishing one central school in their place and of providing elsewhere for such of the instructional staff of the old schools as are incapable of meeting the higher demands of the new institutions. It will be observed that I am assuming throughout the marked superiority of the Eastern Bengal scheme of training as outlined in the Hon'ble Mr. Lyon's letter of May 1908; and that I am prepared to accept the main features of this scheme as the basis of an amalgamated system for the training of gurus in the whole Presidency of Bengal.

9. The main features.—I would describe these main features as follows :—

(b) The foundation of higher rates of pay for a superior staff and of increased stipends for the gurus.
(c) The creation of a modern type of building well adapted to the needs of a training school.

I shall discuss each of these points in turn and at the same time consider how they affect the present position of affairs in Western Bengal.

10. The idea of a single central institution in each subdivision was inherent in Sir Archdale Earle's scheme, when in 1906 he objected to the peripatetic type of school designed by Sir Alexander Pedler. This type of school belonged to a period when the idea of training was as little understood as the efforts to realize it were rudimentary. Moreover, it was intended at the outset, and probably with considerable wisdom, that as little inconvenience as possible should be given to the guru. This was essential in view of the fact that maintenance allowances were of the most meagre kind and a school had of necessity to be placed where the expenses of the guru would be at a minimum; in other words, the school had to be put at his very doors. The provision of good school buildings with adequate hostel accommodation, and the provision also of a stipend which will cover at least the cost of living away from their own homes, will make it possible to congregate the gurus in reasonable numbers, and to bring them under sound discipline and a thorough course of instruction. A good staff, with gurus well housed in modern buildings placed at accessible headquarters, will make possible regular inspection. It is not practicable to have a host of remote, isolated and indifferently-conducted training schools put under any system of inspection worth the name. It is my intention to put all the new schools under a system of expert and regular visitation by such officers as Principals of our secondary training colleges; but, first of all, I must secure new schools on a new foundation. At present there exists nothing which superior inspecting officers could with advantage visit or criticise.

11. To what extent is it possible to realize the idea of a single central school in each subdivision in Western Bengal? In 16 subdivisions, buildings on Sir Archdale Earle's plan exist for all Guru-training schools. As will be shown later, this plan scarcely meets the demands of the new system; but we should endeavour to make all possible use of these buildings in the meantime. In 13 subdivisions, one out of the two guru schools existent therein has a building of the new (Sir Archdale Earle's) type. In ten subdivisions, there are no schools of this kind, accommodation being of the most primitive character. It is clear then that I am scarcely in a position to recommend to Government any immediate or detailed building programme for these subdivisions with their diverse types of schools. All that I suggest in the meantime is that the principle of centralization should be accepted, and that a careful census of building needs in each locality should be prepared. Wherever possible, existing buildings should be utilized and wherever necessary an entirely new structure should be recommended. General approval of this arrangement will clear the way for further action. Government will be addressed separately whenever a building scheme comes up and will thus be able to assess the merits of each individual case. I may say here that there will be no waste of existing buildings, good or bad. Any one of our existing guru schools could be handed over readily to a District Board as an upper primary school, should it be decided to abandon it for the more special purposes of training.

12. The improved staff proposed for the Eastern Bengal training school of the type outlined in the Hon'ble Mr. Lyon's letter of May, 1908, has not yet been appointed in any one institution except at the Jalpaiguri Guru-training school (vide my letter No. 741, dated 12th November 1915, and Government letter No. 552, dated 3rd February 1915). Increased rates of pay for this staff, and enhanced stipends for the gurus in training, make up the greater portion of the new recurring expenditure now required. I shall deal first with the staff. As already pointed out, the Eastern Bengal proposals arranged two alternative scales of expenditure, viz., at the rate, respectively, of Rs. 200 and Rs. 150 a month, as Subordinate or Vernacular service officers were appointed (vide paragraph 44 of Mr. Nathan's report on the primary education of boys). I propose to advocate the adoption of the higher scale, but in this connection I would point out that the creation of the new posts required in the Subordinate Educational Service will involve the maximum scale of expenditure which is stated below and not the scale noted in paragraph 6 (5) (i) above which is incorrect—

	Rs.
Average pay of Subordinate Educational Service	126
Two vernacular teachers on Rs. 30 each	60
Menials and contingencies	44
Total ...	230

13. The selection as head of a Guru-training school of a capable Subordinate Educational Service officer, with a pedagogic training on B. T. or L. T. lines will provide a man superior to any member of any purely vernacular service, which exists or might be established. Moreover, there is already a considerable number of these men available for immediate appointment. The scale of Rs. 230 will admit of the additional appointment of two vernacular masters on Rs. 30 each. This pay will suffice for the present. Sanction to this arrangement should be given at the earliest possible date as there are new schools already in existence in Eastern Bengal for whom the superior staff has to be provided. One obvious difficulty arises in any discussion of these new proposals. The existing staffs of our present Guru-training schools have to be provided elsewhere. In Western Bengal there are three guru instructors in each school, while in Eastern Bengal there are two. In the majority of cases, as I have already shown, these men are altogether misplaced. It will probably be possible to provide the majority of them with posts in the lower primary schools which are now being established by the District Boards. This will involve the removal of these men from the service of Government, but it is a step, which so far as I can see, cannot be avoided. In certain cases the head instructors may be retained in the new institutions as vernacular masters. The problem is essentially one for Inspectors to solve locally, as each new Guru-training school, with its improved staff, comes into existence.

14. The question of the amount of stipend to be given to gurus in training is of the utmost importance. The first thing to be done is to make these men contented with their lot, whether in their pathsalas or in the training schools. Without such contentment primary education will make no progress at all. The Eastern Bengal scheme suggested Rs. 7 for teachers and Rs. 6 for new candidates. Prices and rates of pay have risen since 1908, and my own observation, backed by the testimony of Inspectors, goes to show that a stipend of not less than Rs. 10 is required. I would go further also and abolish the distinction between the guru in training and the man who has not been a teacher but who comes to be trained for the profession of a school master. My reason is that by this means we shall attract a better type of student to the training school, and be more likely to retain his services on the completion of his course. If there is to be any expansion or improvement of primary education, it is to this type of student that we shall have in the future to look more and more for the staffing of our primary schools. It is a distinct advantage that a student who proposes to go through a course of training should have had some previous teaching experience, but the present system of forcing men of mature years and domestic responsibilities into training classes cannot be productive of really satisfactory results. The question of the importance of providing a more attractive scale of stipends has already been dealt with in this office letter No. 56T., dated 7th August 1914, and agreeably to the orders conveyed in Government letter No. 581T.—G., dated 26th October 1914. I have given effect to the increased rate of stipends to gurus in training out of the allotment of Rs. 77,360, included in the Imperial recurring assignment of Rs 3,65,000 for elementary education.

15. As regards buildings, little need be set forth in this draft at any length, as a reference to the appended plans and estimates will show the type of school house I desire to have introduced into the Presidency. Existing plans in Western Bengal have been evolved from the type design of Sir Archdale Earle and cost nearly Rs. 15,000. These do not meet with my approval. They have been designed on the lines of an extended upper primary school with little or no consideration of the pedagogic needs of a training school, nor has the question of adjacent land for drill and garden work been considered. The Hon'ble Mr. Sharp's designs in Eastern Bengal are of a practical and useful kind. These I have submitted to the Public Works Department, and that department has kindly furnished me with revised drawings as shown in the Appendix. These I propose now to adopt at a cost of about Rs. 25,000 per school. Ten schools have been already built on Mr. Sharp's design.

16. The type-plan is merely intended to give a general model and a rough idea of expenditure. It may be necessary to include in some localities quarters for the Head Master. In individual cases therefore some modification in the type-plan may be necessary but it will not materially affect the total capital cost which may be roughly estimated at Rs. 25,000.

17. Such then, in main outline are the features of the scheme of training I propose to adopt for the Presidency of Bengal. It remains to show what the present and ultimate cost of this scheme will be and the sources from which the necessary expenditure may be found. In assessing the expenditure the following facts should be remembered :—

(1) The higher scale of the Eastern Bengal proposals should be accepted, namely Rs. 230 per month.
(2) There is to be one training school for each subdivision and the school is to contain 40 students.
(3) The buildings should cost Rs. 25,000 approximately.
(4) The stipends for all students should be at the rate of Rs. 10 a month each.
(5) The course for all students (new comers will have passed the middle vernacular) should be of one year's duration. In this respect I accept the arguments of the Hon'ble Mr. Nathan set forth in his note on primary education in Bengal.

18. On the basis of these data, then, I would present the following figures :—

New buildings.—It may be assumed that the cost of each building on the type-plan, now recommended for adoption, will amount to Rs. 25,000 (approximate) and that the new schools of Western, as well as of Eastern Bengal, will be built on the lines of this type-plan—

(1) There are ten subdivisions in Western Bengal in which there are no buildings at all. Therefore the provision of buildings in accordance with the type-plan will amount to Rs. 2,50,000 or (10 × 25,000).
(2) With regard to the 13 subdivisions which have one school under Sir Archdale Earle's scheme and one of the original foundation, it is proposed to develop the former into a new Guru-training school of the central type and eventually to abolish the guru-training school of the original type. It is estimated that the cost of giving effect to this proposal will amount approximately to Rs. 1,00,000.

(3) There are 30 subdivisions in Eastern Bengal which have not been provided with schools. The estimated cost of this provision would be Rs. 7,50,000 (30 × 25,000).

I am excluding for the present those 16 subdivisions of Western Bengal, each of which has two schools of Sir Archdale Earle's type, as we shall be able probably to utilize these buildings. We are faced then with a possible expenditure for the above three items of Rs. 11,00,000 and as the result of the Imperial allotments placed at our disposal, a fair portion of this programme has already been undertaken.

19. New rates of pay and stipends.—For the introduction of the higher rates of pay for improved staff in all existing schools, assuming the capacity of all schools to accommodate such a staff, the expenditure would be as follows :—

Western Bengal	...	78 × 230 × 12	Rs. 3,25,680.
Eastern Bengal	...	40 × 230 × 12

If the principle of centralization be accepted in Western Bengal, this figure would be reduced by 40 × 230 × 12 or Rs. 1.10,400, giving a total annual expenditure of about Rs. 2,20,800. The immediate problem to consider is the provision of this improved staff in schools now ready in Eastern Bengal and in such schools of Western Bengal as are capable of being conducted on the new system.

The annual cost of this provision may be estimated as follows :—

(i) There are ten subdivisions in Eastern Bengal in which new schools have been built. The annual cost of staffing these schools will be Rs. 27,600 (10 × 12 × 230).

(ii) There are 16 subdivisions in Western Bengal, each containing two schools of the Sir Archdale Earle's type. The 32 schools in the above 16 subdivisions will have to be maintained on the basis of the improved staff now suggested, for some time to come at any rate. The annual cost of staffing these schools will be Rs. 88,320 (16 × 2 × 12 × 230).

(iii) There are 13 subdivisions in Western Bengal, each of which has one school of the Sir Archdale Earle's type. The annual cost of staffing these schools will be Rs. 35,880 (13 × 12 × 230).

The total annual cost on the above estimate would be Rs. 1,51,800.

20. The present expenditure on staffing the above Guru-training schools is Rs. 27,000. The annual additional cost, therefore, of introducing the increased rates of pay into all the schools referred to above will be Rs. 1,24,800 in round figures. I regard the introduction of the increased rates of pay as most desirable; and while the whole scheme, as detailed above, cannot be put into immediate effect, it is necessary that I should have general sanction, within the limits suggested, to staff with superior officers such schools as have been newly constructed or are capable of working on the new lines.

21. The proposals set forth above will involve the creation of 55 posts in the Subordinate Educational Service immediately (vide this office letter No. 56 T., dated 7th August 1914) and 80 posts in all ultimately, and these posts should be distributed among the various grades in such a way that the grading in the service may not be impaired. In view, however, of what is stated in paragraph 2 of Government order No. 433, dated the 26th February 1915, I would propose, owing to present financial conditions, that for the present 55 posts should be created in class VIII of the Subordinate Educational Service, in order that something may be done at once to place the training of primary school teachers on a more satisfactory basis. The extra cost involved is (55 × 12 × 50) Rs. 33,000 and the total yearly expenditure on staff (55 × 12 × 154) will then amount to Rs. 1,01,640. The present budget provision is Rs. 48,480, and the additional amount required annually is, therefore, Rs. 53,160. This amount can easily be met out of the allotment of Rs. 83,520, sanctioned in Government order No. 481 T.—G., dated the 26th October 1914. The question of the ultimate cost may meanwhile be held in abeyance, as on the restoration of normal financial conditions Government will have to be addressed separately with regard to the grading of the service, and I shall on this occasion include proposals in regard to the remaining posts.

22. Stipends.—As regards stipends, the total annual cost will be ultimately as follows :—

		Rs.
Western Bengal	78 × 16 × 10 × 12	1,49,760
(After centralization	40 × 40 × 10 × 12	1,92,000)
Eastern Bengal	40 × 40 × 10 × 12	1,92,000

The adoption of the enhanced rate of stipends thus involves a total annual cost of Rs. 3,84,000. But even the existing training school accommodation is not at present fully utilized; the whole of this annual expenditure cannot, therefore, be regarded as immediately required.

23. In terms of Government order No. 481 T.—G., stipends have been uniformly enhanced to Rs. 10 per month each. For our present purposes the extra allotment of Rs. 77,360 will amply meet the situation. Ultimately, if all our proposed schools receive their maximum number of students, our present budget provision of Rs. 1,90,000 will have to be doubled.

24. The above figures show the ultimate cost of this scheme; they do not represent an expenditure that need be regarded as immediate. This expenditure, however, is amply justified by the fact that our present system of training is not only deplorably ineffective in itself, it is also so limited in scope that it cannot produce within a reasonable period any substantial effect on the number of untrained pandits who are now working. Facts and figures are of interest here. The returns of 1912-13 in Eastern Bengal give an outturn of 420 trained gurus from existing old type schools; and while the figure for Western Bengal is 350. This gives a total of 770. The number of untrained teachers is in all 28,896. It appears, then, that our existing system so far as it aims at training existing teachers would take about 40 years to complete its task. This situation is made the more deplorable because our present system is failing hopelessly to train the pandits in any real or effective sense. By adopting the system set forth in this letter the work of training these pandits who are still untrained should be accomplished in about nine years and the pandits will be much better trained.

25. I would request then that sanction be given to the arrangements now proposed which in summary are as follows:—

(a) to build in central places of subdivisions a single training school of the type shown in the accompanying plan, accommodating 40 students; to proceed at once with this task (as is being done in Eastern Bengal) as funds permit and with the money already at my disposal;

(b) to make the course of instruction of one year's duration; and to treat teachers and intending teachers alike, raising their monthly stipend at once to Rs. 10. The recurring grants at my disposal have made this possible;

(c) to appoint a staff of the type already described and to spend on recurring charges for each school, exclusive of stipends, an average monthly amount of Rs. 154 for the present and Rs. 230 ultimately. This proposal should be sanctioned at an early date, as schools of the new type are already in existence.

26. The erection of new buildings, and the appointment and remuneration of the superior staff will take place as occasion demands and as funds permit; but there is sufficient money at my disposal to give considerable effect to any scheme which Government may sanction. For convenience of reference a complete statement of the cost involved under the actual heads of expenditure is contained in the Appendix to this letter.

Financial Statement.

I.—Non-recurring or Capital charges.

		Rs.
Western Bengal.—1.	For ten subdivisions at present without any schools of Sir Archdale Earle's type ...	2,50,000
2.	For 13 subdivisions. Improvement of existing schools	1,00,000
Eastern Bengal.—3.	For 30 subdivisions not provided with schools	7,50,000
	Total ...	11,00,000

This leaves out of account 16 subdivisions of Western Bengal each with two schools of Sir Archdale Earle's type. It will take many years before really suitable buildings are ready for all these guru schools and the increased recurring charges consequent upon new buildings with improved staff and the full number of stipends must of necessity fall upon the renewed generosity of the Government of India.

(b) The difference between columns 16 and 17 in the case of three municipalities is explained by the fact that the amount of cess is proposed to be supplemented by contributions from the existing municipal grant to boys' schools as shown below

Name of municipality.	Amount of contribution.
	Rs.
Budge-Budge	1,050
Titagarh	1,000

DISTRICT REPORTS ON WEATHER AND CROPS.

For the week ending on the 6th July 1921.

Summary.—During the week light rain generally fell in Western Bengal. The rainfall was seasonable in other parts of the province. Transplantation of winter paddy continues. The operation is being retarded in the western districts owing to insufficient rainfall. Harvesting and steeping of jute are in progress in the eastern districts. The prospects of the standing autumn crops have somewhat improved. The average price of common rice for the province has risen by about 0·4 per cent as compared with that of the previous week.

FORESTS.

NOTIFICATION.

No. 5880For.—The 12th July 1921.—The following amendments to rules for the recruitment of candidates for the Provincial Forest Service in Bengal published under notification No. 762For., dated the 22nd January 1920, are published for general information :—

(1) Substitute the words "Rules for the recruitment of candidates for Bengal Forest Service" for the words "Rules for the recruitment of candidates for Provincial Forest Service in Bengal" in the heading of the rules.

(2) Also substitute the following rules for existing rules 1, 2 and 4 :—

1. Appointments to the Bengal Forest Service shall be made—

(a) by promotion of Forest Rangers of long service and tried probity irrespective of the educational qualification they may hold; every third vacancy in the service shall ordinarily be filled up by the promotion of a Ranger;

(b) by the selection for direct appointment of candidates, who must successfully pass through the Provincial Forest Service Course at the Forest Research Institute, Dehra-Dun, and thereafter render not less than two years' satisfactory service as Probationary Extra Assistant Conservators of Forests before being confirmed.

2. The pay of probationary Extra Assistant Conservators of Forests will be Rs. 200 per mensem for the first two years; and thereafter until they are appointed to vacancies in the sanctioned cadre of the Bengal Forest Service, pay according to the time-scale sanctioned for the Service may be given at the discretion of the Local Government.

4. Applications should be submitted to the Conservator of Forests, Bengal, through the Collector of the district in which the candidates reside, or through the Divisional Forest Officer if the candidates reside in a Forest Division: applications should be accompanied by the certificates prescribed by rule 12 of the Research Institute admission rules, and by the educational certificates prescribed under rule 3 above as well as by a declaration whether or not he has at any time been pronounced unfit for Government employment by the Medical Board at the India Office, or any other duly constituted medical authority. Candidates whose applications are found by the Conservator of Forests to be in order will be required to undergo the qualifying examinations in English and Mathematics prescribed by rule 8 of the Forest Research Institute admission rules. The qualifying examination in English and Mathematics will be held in Writers' Buildings, Calcutta. The examination in Mathematics will be that prescribed in rule 8 of the admission rules of the Forest College. The Conservator of Forests, Bengal, or a Deputy Conservator of Forests selected by him, will conduct the examination in English, which should be held a day before or after the date of the examination in Mathematics, and will decide the result. The object of the examination in English is to test thoroughly the capacity of candidates to follow the course of instruction given at the College. Two passages will be read out (not dictated) to the candidates at a fair speed. Each candidate will then be required to write a full précis of the passages, in order to show that he has grasped the salient points. There will also be a colloquial examination. On receipt of the results of those examinations, the Selection Committee appointed by Government in Resolution No. 2432, dated the 29th March 1921, will select from the candidates who have qualified at those examinations not more than twice the number of men required to be deputed to the course in the ensuing year, and those selected candidates may be required to undergo a course of preliminary practical training in such Forest divisions as the Conservator may direct, which may extend over a period of not less than four and not more than six months.

During this course, candidates will be granted a monthly allowance of Rs. 40, which is intended to cover their expenses. The Conservator of Forests will dispense with the services of any candidate whose work or conduct during this period may prove unsatisfactory or whose physical fitness appears to be defective.

The final selection of candidates will be made by Government.

NOTIFICATION.

Simla, the 12th July 1921.

An Ordinance to prohibit certain transactions in order to give effect to the provisions of the Treaty of Peace made at Trianon on the fourth day of June, 1920.

WHEREAS an emergency has arisen which makes it expedient, for the purpose of enabling effect to be given to the provisions of the Treaty of Peace made at Trianon on the fourth day of June, 1920, to prohibit certain transactions;

Now, therefore, in exercise of the power conferred by section 72 of the Government of India Act, the Governor General is pleased to make and promulgate the following Ordinance:—

ORDINANCE No. I OF 1921.

Short title, extent and commencement.

1. (1) This Ordinance may be called the Treaty of Peace (Hungary) Ordinance, 1921.

(2) It extends to the whole of British India, including British Baluchistan, the Sonthal Parganas, the district of Angul, the Shan States and the pargana of Spiti; and it applies also to—

(a) all British and Indian subjects of His Majesty within any State in India; and (b) all servants of His Majesty, whether British subjects or not, within any State in India.

(3) It shall come into force on the date on which the Treaty comes into force.

Definitions.

2. In this Ordinance, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context,—

(a) "custodian" means a custodian of enemy property appointed under the Enemy Trading Act, 1915; XIV of 1915

(b) "enemy debt" means any pecuniary obligation of the kind referred to in the first paragraph of article 231 of the Treaty, as set out in the Schedule and includes any sum which under the Treaty has to be treated or dealt with in like manner as an enemy debt;

(c) "national" in relation to any State includes the subjects of that State and any company or corporation incorporated therein according to the law of that State, and, in the case of a Protectorate, the natives thereof; and "British national in India" includes any person being a British national who resides or carries on business in India and any subject of a State in India; and

(d) "The Treaty" means the Treaty of Peace with Hungary made and signed on behalf of His Majesty at Trianon on the fourth day of June, 1920, together with all Protocols annexed thereto.

Creation of charge on enemy property.

3. All property, rights and interests belonging to nationals of the former Kingdom of Hungary at the date when the Treaty comes into force (not being property, rights or interests acquired under any general licence issued by or on behalf of his Majesty) and the net proceeds of their sale, liquidation or other dealings therewith are hereby charged—

(a) in the first place, with the payment of the amounts due in respect of claims by British nationals in India with regard to their property, rights and interests, including companies and associations in which they are interested in the territories of the former Kingdom of Hungary or debts owing to them by Hungarian nationals, and with the payment of any compensation which may hereafter be awarded by any Tribunal which may be set up under or in pursuance of the terms of the Treaty or by any arbitrator appointed by any such Tribunal and with payment of claims growing out of acts committed by the former Austro-Hungarian Government or by Hungarian authorities since the twenty-eighth-day of July and before the twelfth day of August 1914 ;

(b) secondly, with payments of the amounts due in respect of claims by British nationals in India with regard to their property, rights and interests in the territories of Germany, Austria, Bulgaria and Turkey in so far as those claims are not otherwise satisfied ; and

(c) thirdly, with payments of amounts due in respect of claims by any British nationals of the nature referred to in clauses (a) and (b):

Provided that any particular property, rights or interests so charged may at any time be released from the charge so created by order of the Governor General in Council.

Prohibition of transactions in enemy property.

4. (1) No person shall, without the consent of the custodian appointed for the Province in which such person resides or carries on business, transfer part with or otherwise deal in any property, right or interest which has become subject to a charge by virtue of section 3.

(2) Any person contravening the provisions of this section shall be punishable with imprisonment which may extend to three years, or with fine or with both.

Prohibition of legal proceedings for recovery of enemy debts

5. No suit or other legal proceeding shall lie in any Court of law for the recovery of any enemy debt.

Cognisance of offences against the Ordinance

6. No Court shall take cognisance of any offence punishable under this Ordinance, unless the local Government has, by order in writing, consented to the initiation of the proceedings.

Ordinance to stand repealed if Order in Council is made.

7. If His Majesty is pleased to make an Order in Council for the purpose of giving effect to the Treaty, then from the date of such Order this Ordinance shall be repealed.

THE SCHEDULE.

[See section 2 (b).]

The following are the classes of pecuniary obligations referred to in the first paragraph of article 231 of the Treaty :—

(1) Debts payable before the war and due by a national of one of the Contracting Powers, residing within its territory, to a national of an Opposing Power, residing within its territory ;

(2) Debts which became payable during the war to nationals of one Contracting Power residing within its territory and arose out of transactions or contracts with the nationals of an Opposing Power, resident within its territory, of which the total or partial execution was suspended on account of the existence of a state of war ;

(3) Interest which has accrued due before and during the war to a national of one of the Contracting Powers in respect of securities issued or taken over by an Opposing Power, provided that the payment of interest on such securities to the nationals of that Power or to neutrals has not been suspended during the war;

(4) Capital sums which have become payable before and during the war to nationals of one of the Contracting Powers in respect of securities issued by one of the Opposing Powers, provided that the payment of such capital sums to nationals of that Power or to neutrals has not been suspended during the war.

A. C. BOSE,
Controller of Examinations, Calcutta University.

SENATE HOUSE, the 16th July 1921.

DACCA DIVISION.

Rules for the admission of private candidates to the University Matriculation Examination, 1922.

1. A student who has not attended any school, recognized or unrecognized, for at least one year previous to the examination, will be treated as a private candidate. Teachers of schools are also considered as private candidates.

2. Private candidates desirous of sitting at the ensuing University Matriculation Examination must appear at the Test Examination of one of the undermentioned schools, to be held on the 1st December 1921 and the following days :—

(1) Dacca Collegiate School.
(2) Mymensingh Zilla School.
(3) Faridpur " "
(4) Barisal " "
(5) Jamalpur Govt. High School.
(6) Bhola " " "
(7) Jhalakati " " "
(8) Pirozpur " " "

3. Every private candidate must submit his application for admission to the Test Examination on or before the 30th September 1921 to the Inspector of Schools, Dacca Division. He must state at which one of the schools named above he intends to appear, and produce a certificate from a responsible Government officer to the effect : (1) that he has not attended any school, recognized or unrecognized, for at least one year previous to the examination, (2) that his conduct and character have been good, (3) that he has diligently and regularly prosecuted his studies and has been subject to proper discipline. No application received after the 30th September 1921 will be considered.

A student who failed to pass the annual examination for promotion to class X at the end of the session 1920 and then left the school will not be allowed to sit at the examination.

4. Every private candidate must also forward with his application his transfer certificate from the school (if any) in which he last read, or the Registrar's receipt (if he appeared at any previous Matriculation Examination), or a certificate from a respectable person with personal knowledge of the facts of the case that he has never been to any school.

5. No one will be admitted to the Test Examination unless he has produced satisfactory evidence that he will have completed the age of sixteen years on the 1st day of March 1922. For the purpose of this rule the age as recorded in a transfer certificate from a recognized school or in the Registrar's receipt (in the case of those who appeared at any previous Matriculation Examination) will be accepted. Those who have never read in any school must produce either their horoscope or an affidavit sworn by their parents or guardians before a competent Magistrate declaring their age.

6. Every private candidate shall state in his application his name, father's name, date of birth, residence, postal address, thana and district, and the following particulars :—

(1) Whether he appeared at the Matriculation Examination in any previous year.

(2) Language in which (besides English) he is to be examined.

(3) Vernacular language for composition.

(4) Vernacular language from which translation is to be made into English in the first English paper.

(5) Which of the following subjects taken up—

(a) Additional Mathematics.
(b) Additional paper in classical language.
(c) History.
(d) Geography.
(e) Elementary Machanics.

7. Every private candidate must pay a fee of Rs. 3 to the headmaster of the school at which he appears for examination. The headmaster must deposit the amount of fees realized into the Treasury, the expenditure incurred in this connection being met from the amount to be allotted in the Education budget. In no circumstances will this fee be refunded.

8. On the first date of examination, he must be accompanied, for the purpose of identification, by some person known to the officer conducting the examination. Otherwise he will not be admitted to the Test Examination.

9. The headmasters of the schools named above should send to this office, for orders, a statement, in duplicate, showing the marks gained by each private candidate in each subject at the Test Examination, within a fortnight from the date of the said examination. The application forms of candidates who are declared eligible should be forwarded to this office for countersignature, duly filled in and signed.

10. Private candidates should arrange to remit their examination fees, together with the countersigned application forms, direct to the Controller of Examinations, Calcutta University, so as to reach him on or before the date fixed by the University.

11. The Matriculation Examination for 1922 will be held on the 1st March and the following days, or any other subsequent date declared by the University.

INTERMEDIATE AND B. A. EXAMINATIONS, 1922.

Bona fide teachers of recognised English schools and inspecting officers of the Education Department, who have been employed as such continuously for at least three academical years (32 calendar months) immediately preceding the dates of examinations, will be admitted to the I. A. and B. A Examinations of the Calcutta University as non-collegiate students, provided they have obtained special permission of the Senate.

Demonstrators, Laboratory Assistants and Librarians of affiliated Colleges are regarded as teachers.

2. Candidates who have obtained special permission of the Senate must submit their applications to this office for countersignature not later than the 3rd January 1922.

3. Candidates should carefully read the printed form of application and supply all the necessary information.

4. The following documents in original must accompany the application :—

(a) The letter from the Senate of the Calcutta University permitting the candidate to appear at the ensuing examination.

(b) The University certificate to show that the candidate has passed the next preceding examination.

(c) Registrar's receipt in the case of those who were admitted to the same examination in a previous year.

(d) Registrar's receipt to show that the candidate's name has been registered as a "University student." If his name has not already been registered he should produce a post office receipt showing that the required fee of Rs. 2 has been remitted to the University to get his name registered.

(e) A certificate from the Secretary in the case of teachers and from the immediate superiors in the case of others, showing (i) that he has been serving as such continuously for three academical years (32 calender months), (ii) that he has been diligently and regularly prosecuting his studies, and (iii) that his character and conduct have been good.

5. The dates of I.A. and B.A. Examinations, 1922, will be notified in the Calcutta Gazette in due course.

6. Applications with the countersignature of the undersigned together with the fees for the above examinations must reach the office of the Controller of Examinations, Calcutta University, on or before the dates to be fixed by the University and must be sent to that office by the candidate himself direct.

ASHU TOSH BANERJEE, for Collector.

Midnapore, the 19th May 1921.

Advertisement of Sale.

NOTICE is hereby given that the undermentioned plots of land no longer required by Government, situated along the Eastern Bengal Railway, in the district of Rangpur, will be put up to sale at 12 o'clock on the 16th August 1921, corresponding with the 31st Sraban 1328 B.S., at Rangpur Collectorate.

The purchasers of the several plots of land will be subject to the following conditions :—

1st—The purchasers will have no power to make any excavations on the land nearer than fifteen feet from the railway boundary, or to plough the land nearer than three feet from the same.

2nd—If the amount of purchase-money does not exceed Rs. 100, the whole amount must be paid down at once.

3rd—If the amount of purchase-money exceeds Rs. 100, one-fourth of the amount must be immediately deposited. If the balance be not paid by noon of the fifteenth day after the sale, reckoning the day of sale as one, or if that day be a close holiday, then by noon of the first succeeding office day, the sale shall be cancelled, the sum deposited being forfeited to Government, and the lot again put up for sale at the risk of the defaulting purchaser, after issue of advertisement, as in the case of original sale.

4th—The plots of land will be sold revenue-free to the highest bidders.

5th—The sale will become final on receipt by the Collector of the orders of the Commissioner confirming it, and a regular conveyance will then be granted to the purchaser.

SASHI BHUSAN BHATTACHARJI, for Collector.

Advertisement of Sale.

NOTICE is hereby given that the undermentioned plots of land, no longer required by Government, situated along the Jessore-Jhenidah Railway, in the district of Jessore, will be put up to sale at 12 o'clock on Friday, the 9th September 1921, corresponding with 24th Bhadra 1328 B.S., at Kaliganj Dak Bungalow.

The purchasers of the several plots of land will be subject to the following conditions :—

1. The purchasers will have no power to make any excavations on the land nearer than 15 feet from the railway boundary or to plough the land nearer than three feet from the same.

2. If the amount of purchase money does not exceed Rs. 100, the whole amount must be paid down at once.

3. If the amount of purchase money exceeds Rs. 100, one-fourth of the amount must be immediately deposited. If the balance be not paid by noon of the 15th day after the sale, reckoning the day of sale as one, or if that day be a close holiday, then by noon of the first succeeding office day, the sale shall be cancelled, the sum deposited being forfeited to Government and the lot again put up for sale at the risk of the defaulting purchaser, after issue of advertisement, as in the case of original sale.

4. The plots of land will be sold revenue free to the highest bidders.

5. The sale will become final on receipt by the Collector of the orders of the Commissioner confirming it, and a regular conveyance will then be granted to the purchaser.

FOREST DEPARTMENT, BENGAL.

Stipendiary Studentships for the Ranger class, 1922-24.

APPLICATIONS for two stipendiary studentships for the Ranger class will be received by the Conservator of Forests, Darjeeling, up to the 15th August 1921.

2. Applicants must be not less than 18 and not more than 25 years of age on the 1st April 1922.

3. Applications should be made in the applicant's own handwriting and sent to the undersigned through a Divisional Forest officer of rank not below that of a Deputy Conservator or through a Collector or officer in charge of a district; they must be accompanied by the following certificates (in original) as well as by a declaration whether or not he has at any time been pronounced unfit for Government employment by the Medical Board at the India Office, or any other duly constituted medical authority :—

(a) A certificate that the candidate is a "Native of India" within the meaning assigned to these words by section of 33 Vict., Cap. 36.

(b) A certificate of age.

(c) A health certificate in the form prescribed by article 49 of the Civil Service Regulations, 5th edition, signed by the Civil Surgeon of the district in which the said Divisional Forest or district officers' duties lie and testifying to the candidate's sound constitution, good vision and hearing, and general physical fitness for a rough outdoor life in the Forest Department, and to the fact that he bears on his body marks of successful vaccination or of small-pox.

(d) A certificate of respectability and good moral character from two or more persons whose social or official position can be accepted as a guarantee of reliability.

NOTE.—The certificates (c) and (d) must bear date not further back than the 1st April 1921.

If any person giving certificates as above under (c) and (d) is in a position to mention anything more to the credit of the candidate than the certificates actually called for, he may do so.

(e) A certificate of having passed one of the following examinations, viz. :—

The B.A., F.A., B.Sc. or Licentiate of Agriculture.

The Matriculation, where no School Final Examination or school-leaving certificate exists.

The School Final Examination, provided the candidate can show that he has qualified in English and Mathematics up to the Matriculation standard, or, for European candidates, a certificate of having passed the High School examination, with a similar proviso.

The school-leaving certificate as prescribed in the United Provinces, Central Provinces and Bombay.

(f) A certificate that each candidate has a sufficient knowledge of colloquial English to assimilate lectures delivered in that language without the aid of dictation.

4. From the applications received and in respect to which the preceding conditions shall have been observed, the Conservator will make a preliminary selection of not more than four candidates, and these candidates will be required to undergo a course of preliminary training for not less than three and-a-half months, commencing 1st November 1921, during which the candidates will receive a monthly allowance of Rs. 25.

5. The final selection of candidates for deputation to the Forest College will be made by the Conservator in accordance with the results of the preliminary training, preference being given to the men who are considered likely to make the best Forest officers. Selected candidates will be obliged to execute the agreement and security bond prescribed by Government.

6. While at the Forest College, the selected candidates will be granted a monthly stipend of Rs. 35 (which will be supplemented by a bonus of Rs. 360 at the end of the course to those candidates only who pass the course with "Honours").

Notice.

THE Bengal and Madras Service Family Pension Fund which is provisionally managed and assisted by Government has for its object the provision of monthly pensions for the maintenance of the widows and children of subscribers and is open, with certain exceptions, to all active and pensioned members of the Uncovenanted Service of Government (except those serving under the Government of Bombay), and to Local Fund servants earning pensions from Government. Some of the special features of the fund are—(1) that widowed daughters incapable of remarriage or children labouring under such mental or bodily infirmities as incapacitate them from earning their livelihood or preclude the possibility of marriage (in case of a daughter) are admitted to its benefits; and (2) that subscribers to the Widows' and Daughters' branches are entitled to a refund of 30 per cent. of the premia paid, should the nominees predecease them after five years of admission. The second quinquennial valuation of the fund has been completed by the Actuary to the Government of India and his report discloses very favourable results. For forms of application and rules of the Fund apply to the Accountant-General, Central Revenues, Imperial Secretariat Buildings, Calcutta.

INTRODUCTION OF TIME SCALE OF PAY IN THE SUBORDINATE CIVIL SERVICE.

GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL.

APPOINTMENT DEPARTMENT.

CALCUTTA, THE 12TH JULY 1921.

RESOLUTION—No. 5328A.

READ—

Resolution of this Government No. 1646A.D., dated the 21st June 1920.

IN the resolution cited in the preamble, the provisional views of the Governor in Council on questions affecting the terms and conditions of service of Sub-Deputy Collectors were published for general information, with a view to eliciting public opinion on the various issues raised. The proposals of the local Government were reviewed in the light of the criticism received and submitted for the consideration of the Government of India. As a result of these deliberations, the conclusions at which the Governor in Council has arrived, in so far as the question of emoluments of officers is concerned, are that, with effect from the 1st April 1921. Sub-Deputy Collectors should be paid on a time-scale as follows :—

Year of service.		Scale of pay per mensem. Rs.
1st year 2nd ,,	Probationers	150 175
3rd ,,	(on confirmation)	200
4th ,,	...	200
5th ,,	...	200
6th ,,	...	225

22nd ,,	...	350
23rd ,,	...	375
24th ,,	...	375
25th ,,	and over	400

The above scale will supersede the existing graded system of pay ; and outside this general scale a special grade will be instituted on Rs. 450 a month, containing posts equal to three per cent. of the cadre. Promotion to this grade will be made strictly by selection.

2. As in the Bengal Civil Service, the probationary grade of Sub-Deputy Collectors will be abolished, and probationers will be made full members of the service. The normal period of probation will be two years ; and the increment of pay at the close of the first year will depend on an officer's having passed the departmental examination by the lower standard, while his further increment and confirmation in the service at the close of the second year will depend on his passing that examination by the higher standard. Confirmation in the service will also be subject to an officer's general fitness ; and if confirmed he will reckon service for leave and pension from the date of his first appointment.

Order.—Ordered that the Resolution be published in the Calcutta Gazette for general information.

By order of the Governor in Council,

J. DONALD,

Chief Secretary

to the Government of Bengal (offg.).

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE

ROYAL BOTANIC GARDEN AND THE GARDENS IN CALCUTTA

AND OF THE LLOYD BOTANIC GARDEN, DARJEELING,

FOR 1920-21.

ROYAL BOTANIC GARDEN.

1. General.—The garden suffered from drought during the last five months of the year, but towards the very end some welcome storms of rain restored the balance. The cold weather display of annuals in the flower-garden was up to the usual standard, but the show of orchids about the beginning of the hot weather was poor, owing to the conditions referred to in the 1918-19 report. The plant-house to the east of Janardan Lake was replanted during the rains, and the collections in the house to the north of that lake overhauled. In the report for 1903-04 the beginning of the breakup of the Great Banyan Tree was noted. Since then, little by little, the natural process of decay has gone on, and during the past year it was found necessary to remove a considerable section from the central part of the tree, owing to the decay of several of the large branches having reached a dangerous stage. This decay is inevitable, but the tree as a whole should last for many years to come. Only a small number of additions were made to the outdoor collections of living plants, about a dozen of which were new to the Garden. The Economic Garden is still in an undeveloped stage and is likely to remain so until the garden staff is strengthened. It is impossible for an effective staff of a Curator and an Overseer to do more than try to keep the garden from deteriorating.

Many of the garden roads can be described only as bad, and the problem of making and keeping them fit to withstand motor traffic, as it is at present, is a difficult one. All the garden roads are built of broken hard-burnt bricks, laid on a brick soling and bound with rubbish from the kilns. This type of road served very well when wheeled traffic was composed only of comparatively slow-moving light horse carriages, but cannot stand up against heavy fast-moving motor cars, which loosen the binding and ultimately reduce the road to a collection of loose metal The root of the trouble is the inability or the unwillingness of many motorists and taxi-drivers to recognise that the garden roads are not racing tracks. Unless all motorists adjust their speed in the garden to garden conditions it will very soon be necessary to recommend either the application of a legal special speed limit for the garden or the entire exclusion of motor traffic. During last cold weather it was necessary to close some of the roads and relay them. About 64,000 square feet of road were picked up, relaid and consolidated. The wide intersection of the Banyan and Hooker avenues—a particularly bad portion—has been relaid with a cement surface. Oil has been used as freely as funds permitted to keep down dust and help to consolidate the roads. About 100 barrels of oil have been used, but 500 barrels would be annually required to treat all the roads, a quantity quite beyond the garden funds.

Work on the river bank was continued during the year and nearly 600 feet of a substantial river wall has been built west of the landing-stage, and the top of the bank sloped, bricked and grassed. This, so far as it has gone, has vastly improved the previously dilapidated appearance of the river bank, and the work is being continued on the same plan.

While the garden financial allotment remains practically at pre-war level, the wages of the labour force have advanced with the increased cost of living, with the result that the garden has to get along as best it can with a diminished coolie muster. This with the road and river bank work has grievously impeded development of the garden proper, but there is no help for it. As conditions are, development is a thing one may continue to hope for but not expect. Despite these disadvantages the general appearance of the garden has been—apart from the roads—reasonably satisfactory.

2. Plant and seed exchange.—Nearly 49,000 plants were distributed of which over 25,400 were trees, over 16,000 shrubs and over 7,000 palms, ferns and annuals. Of the total about 17,000 were sent to District Boards, over 15,200 to Government departments and officials, over 6,600 to charitable institutions, over 3,400 to railways and municipalities and over 3,200 to private persons. Over 41,000 of the total were distributed within Bengal, including nearly 3,200 plants for the Victoria Memorial grounds. Over 2,150 plants were received. Of seed 1,677 packets and 291 lbs., including 128 lbs. to New Delhi, were distributed, and 338 packets in addition to the usual consignment of Mahogany seed from Kew were received. The foreign distribution included Great Britain, France, Spain, French Morocco, Nigeria, Egypt, the Sudan, British East Africa, South Africa, Mesopotamia, the Straits Settlements, the Philippines, Java, the United States of America, West Indies, Chile, Hawaii, Australia and New Zealand.

3. Herbarium and Library.—The extra work thrown on the Curator of the Herbarium by his also officiating as Superintendent, and the absence for a considerable time of one of the two Government of India Systematic Assistants, left no time for research work, but the usual routine was carried out. About 4,000 specimens were added to the collection, the chief contributions being from the Philippines, the United States Department of Agriculture, the Gray Herbarium United States of America, and the Botanic Gardens of Zurich, Singapore and Buitenzorg. Distribution has been resumed to a limited extent and a large number of specimens have been assembled for ultimate distribution. As usual, valuable help has been given by Messrs. Debbarman and Narayanswami of the Botanical Survey of India. Library work has been carried out on wonted lines.

4. Publications.—The plates for Vol. XII, Part II of the Annals, which up to near end of the year had remained unsorted, were arranged in volume sets, and distribution cases made for them. The work will be distributed as soon as possible.

5. Financial.—On the allotment of Rs. 1,19,000 there was a saving of Rs. 26,116-6-8, over Rs. 24,100 of which was on salaries, owing to officiating incumbencies in some posts and vacancies in others. The revenue was Rs. 3,893-14.

6. Staff.—Superintendent.—Mr. C. C. Calder, officiating to 16th January 1921, thereafter Lieutenant-Colonel A. T. Gage, I.M.S., substantive. Curator of Herbarium.—Mr. C. C. Calder, throughout the year. Curator of Garden.—Mr. P. V. Obsborne.—officiating up to 13th December 1920, thereafter Mr. G. T. Lane, substantive. Assistant Curator.—Mr. W. V. North.—up to 30th April 1920, thereafter Mr. N. Mitra, officiating. Overseers.—Messrs. N. Mitra and M. Jones, throughout the year. Head clerk.—Babu D. N. Basu, throughout the year.

CALCUTTA GARDENS.

The removal of restrictions as to employment and rates of payment of labour has enabled these gardens to recover to a considerable extent from their last year's unsatisfactory condition, but there is still difficulty in obtaining suitable labour. In addition to routine work, the Eden Gardens ride was entirely re-levelled and re-grassed. Mr. S. N. Basu, Overseer, and Babu K. C. Maity, Head Mali, officiated, respectively, as Assistant Curator and overseer throughout the year. There was a saving of Rs. 10,290-1-8 on the allotment of Rs. 41,002, more than half the saving being on salaries, due to the vacancy in the Assistant Curatorship.

LLOYD BOTANIC GARDEN, DARJEELING.

The work of this garden was carried out on the usual lines, and there is nothing special to report. Mr. G. H. Cave, the Curator, went on leave from the 20th June 1920, from which date Mr. W. V. North has officiated as Curator. There was a saving of Rs. 877-3-9 on the allotment of Rs. 15,744.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, BENGAL.

Preliminary Forecast of the Jute Crop in Bengal, 1921.

(NOTE.—On an average of five years ending 1918-19, the area under jute to which this forecast relates represents 88·2 per cent. of the total area under jute in British India.)

The present forecast deals only with the estimates of area sown and the present condition of the crop, based on information received through the agency of the panchayats, as in previous years.

Area sown.—The district returns shown a total area sown of 1,343,202 acres, being a decrease of 862,121 acres or about 39 per cent. over the final figures for 1920. The decrease may be attributed chiefly to the low price of jute obtained for the two preceding crops and the large carry over; also to the high price of food-stuffs which induced cultivators to grow more paddy in place of jute.

Character of the season.—During the latter part of January good rain fell throughout the province. The preparatory operations were, in consequence, carried on favourably in North and East Bengal, with the result that a good deal of sowings commenced in the low-lying tracts during the month of February. Excessive rain fell in the first half of March and retarded both the ploughing and sowing operations for a while, but dry weather followed up to the first week of April and enabled a large area to be brought under cultivation. Continuous rainfall during the latter part of April made weeding difficult in North and in parts of East Bengal and consequently stunted the growth. The dry spell that followed during the first part of May, however, helped the plants to recover from the effects of wet weather in the water-logged tracts, but it affected the crop on high land. The early rise of the rivers later on caused damage to the low-land crop in parts of North and East Bengal and has necessitated premature harvesting in those tracts. The high land crop, on the other hand, is reported to be faring well. In the Western districts, deficient rainfall in May delayed sowings, but rainfall in June facilitated the operations generally.

Present state of the crop.—The present condition is fair in East and North and poor in West Bengal.

Stock in hand.—A large balance of last year's crop is held in the districts.

G. EVANS,

Director of Agriculture, Bengal.

APPENDIX I.

Preliminary Jute Forecast of 1921.

District.	Estimated area under jute—		Whether much, little or no jute remains in the district from the crop of 1920.	Date by which the sowing of the crop generally commenced this year, and whether the date was early, normal or late.	Remarks by District Officers.
	Last year. (Final figures.)	This year.
1	2	3	4	5	6
	Acres.	Acres.
24-Parganas	47,712	23,158	Little	End of May and beginning of June; late.	Decrease in area is due to want of timely rain and to preference given to the cultivation of food-crops, especially paddy, of which the market price is high. Owing to unfavourable weather at sowing time, the cultivation and growth of the crop was greatly impeded, but the conditions are favourable now.
Nadia	68,163	31,025	Much in Kushtia, Ranaghat and Meherpur subdivisions and little elsewhere	Beginning of June; late.	Decrease in area is mainly due to late rain and partly to low price during the last two successive years and to uncertainty about its future price. The weather was not favourable at sowing time, but the recent rainfall has done much good.
Murshidabad	15,111	4,768	About half of last year's crop.	June; late	Decrease in area is due to prevailing low price of jute. The effects of weather on the cultivation and growth of the crop have been favourable and the present condition is good.
Jessore	59,350	38,548	Much	April-May; late in Magura and Narail subdivisions and normal elsewhere.	Decrease in area is due to fall in price of jute and to undisposed of stock from last year's crop and also to generally unfavourable weather at sowing time in some places. The recent rainfall has considerably improved the condition. Slight damage was done by insects in parts of Magura and Jhenaidah subdivisions.
Khulna	9,880	5,876	Little	April	Decrease in area is due to fall in the price of jute and also to want of timely rain. The weather has not been favourable. The present condition is not good.
Burdwan	5,721	1,396	Much	.....	Decrease in area is due to want of rain at sowing time and to great difficulty experienced by the cultivators in disposing of last year's stock. Some damage was done by drought in the beginning. The present condition is fair.
Midnapore	7,983	5,413	Much in Ghatal subdivision.	May and June; late ...	Decrease in area was due to drought at sowing time. Want of sufficient rainfall has done much damage to the crop. The crop is poor on high lands. On the low lands, the plants also have suffered from drought.
Hooghly	26,259	19,422	Much	Sadar—End of April; normal. Serampore—April and beginning of June; late Arambagh—Beginning of June; late.	Decrease in area is large and is due to the following causes:— (1) Dullness of jute market and low price of jute obtained last two years. (2) Large stock of unsold jute of last year. (3) Extension of aus rice cultivation to supplement the low stock of rice. (4) Want of adequate rain at sowing time. Nearly half the crop sown has been damaged in the sadar subdivision for want of rain. The recent rain has improved the condition much.
Howrah	9,674	4,595	Much	First week of June; late.	Decrease in area is due to bad weather conditions this year and to most of last year's produce remaining unsold. There was a little rain at the commencement of sowing. Subsequently there was a long drought, and the crop has suffered a good deal. Since the last fortnight, however, there have been good showers and the present condition is fair.
Rajshahi	20,407	47,490	Little	Beginning of April; normal.	Decrease in area is due to the continued low price of the crop. More rain was needed at sowing time. About a fourth of the crop was damaged in the Nator subdivision by drought. The present condition is promising.
Dinajpur	66,619	43,547	Some	April; normal.	Decrease in area is mainly due to low price of jute. The weather has been favourable and the present condition is fair.
Jalpaiguri	55,289	19,840	Much	Middle of April; normal.	Decrease in area is due to dull market last year and to untimely heavy rainfall. More than half the crop was damaged by heavy rainfall. The present condition is bad.
Darjeeling	2,803	1,951	Little	April; normal	Decrease in area is due to low price obtained last year. The weather has not been favourable. Incessant rainfall in April and May has stunted the growth of the crop. The present condition is not good.

District.	Estimated area under jute—		Whether much, little or no jute remains in the district from the crop of 1920.	Date by which the sowing of the crop generally commenced this year, and whether the date was early, normal or late.	Remarks by District Officers.
	Last year (final figures).	This year.
1	2	3	4	5	6
	Acres.	Acres.
Rangpur	241,454	140,326	Much	March; normal ...	Decrease in area is due to — (1) prevailing low prices; (2) want of a ready market; and (3) large stocks in hand remaining unsold for some time. The weather has been favourable on the whole. Occasional rains have slightly affected the growth and caused premature ripening. Flood has also caused some damage in certain low-lying areas. The present condition is fair.
Bogra	74,730	50,600	Much	March; normal ..	Decrease in area is due mainly to low price of jute. The weather was favourable at first, but drought afterwards affected the growth. The present condition is bad.
Pabna	96,138	61,476	Much	Normal ...	Decrease in area is due to low price of jute. At sowing time, the weather was favourable, but a long period of drought intervening has retarded the growth of the crop. The crop may recover owing to favourable weather later on. Sudden rush of flood-water has damaged the crop a great deal in low-lying areas of the district. The present condition is fair on the whole.
Malda	19,000	14,200	A little	Middle of June ...	Decrease in area is due to the following causes — (1) Continued drought at sowing time. (2) Fall in price of jute. The weather has not been favourable. The sowing was much delayed and the growth of the crop much retarded owing to want of rain. The present condition is not good.
Dacca	244,211	140,060	Much	Middle of February to end of April; normal	Decrease in area is due to low price of jute and to considerable stock remaining over from last year. The weather was favourable at the beginning of the sowing time, but owing to continuous drought later on the plants could not thrive well. Excessive rain recently has retarded the growth and early flood has damaged the plants on low land. The present condition is not good.
Mymensingh	538,351	332,293	Much	Beginning of April; normal.	Decrease in area is due to contraction of jute cultivation owing to stock of jute remaining in hand. The weather at sowing time was favourable, but subsequently drought and heavy rain have checked the growth. The flood has damaged the crop on char lands. The present condition is fair.
Faridpur	219,100	143,000	About two annas ..	Middle of March; normal	Decrease in area is due to low price of jute and high price of rice. There was drought at sowing time but the weather has been subsequently favourable. Sudden and early rise of water, however, has caused premature harvesting to some extent and also heavy rainfall in April last affected the crop in some places in the Gopalganj subdivision.
Bakarganj	37,623	19,412	Much	Beginning of March to middle of April; early.	Decrease in area is due to low price of jute and to high price of foodstuffs. Excessive rainfall in March damaged the crop to a great extent. Subsequently drought has retarded the growth of the crop. The present condition is fair.
Chittagong	200	200	.....	... ..	...
Tippera	218,280	175,000	Little	Sadar—End of March; normal. Elsewhere—Beginning of April; normal.	Decrease in area is due to low price of jute and to unsold jute remaining with the cultivators. The weather was favourable at sowing time. Subsequently untimely flood caused by excessive rain has damaged the crop in the Sadar and Brahmanbaria subdivisions. About 40 per cent. of the crop has been damaged in the latter subdivision. The crop would have been a bumper one but for the recent heavy rain. The present condition is good.
Noakhali	36,144	6,559	About a fourth of last year's crop.	Early in March; normal.	Decrease in area is due to fall in price. There was heavy rainfall at sowing time. In May there was not much rain and the effects on the growth of the crop are not very favourable. The present condition is fair.
Total for Bengal ..	22,169,202	1,330,055
4 d—for Cooch Behar	36,121	13,147	Much in Mathabhanga and Mekliganj subdivisions and a little elsewhere.	End of March; normal.	Decrease in area is due to low price of jute and to unfavourable weather at sowing time. Constant and untimely heavy rainfall has retarded the sowing and stunted the growth. Owing to incessant rain there was an early flood this year which has destroyed the plants in places and prevented weeding in others. The present condition is bad on the whole.

NOTE.—The figures given above are the averages for all the rainfall-registering stations in each district.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, BIHAR AND ORISSA.

Preliminary Forecast of the Jute Crop of Bihar and Orissa, 1921.

(NOTE.—On an average of the five years ending 1918-19, the area under jute to which the Bihar and Orissa forecast relates represents about 8·3 per cent. of the total area under jute in British India.)

The present forecast deals only with the estimated area sown. It gives also a general survey of prospects, but makes no reference to the probable outturn either in percentage figures or in bales.

2. Acreage.—The estimated area sown during the current and four preceding years in round numbers is given below:—

Year.	Acreage.
1917	223,300
1918	149,300
1919	203,400
1920	178,800
1921	106,400

3. Weather conditions.—In March the rainfall was above the normal in Champaran and Purnea and below the normal in the rest of the jute districts. In April it was above the normal in Purnea, Bhagalpur, Champaran and Muzaffarpur, but below the normal in the remaining three districts. In May it was below the normal everywhere. The rainfall in June, though somewhat below the normal everywhere, has done immense good to the crop.

4. District returns.—The total area under jute, as reported by the District Officers, is estimated in round numbers at 106,400 acres, as compared with 177,800 acres shown in the corresponding forecast of last year and 178,800 acres reported in the final forecast of last year. The decrease in area sown this year was mainly in Purnea, where it is attributed to the heavy fall in the price of jute and also to the non-co-operation movement. Short rainfall at the time of sowing is responsible for the shortage in area in the Santal Parganas, Cuttack and Balasore. Sowings were still going on in parts of Muzaffarpur, Bhagalpur, the Santal Parganas and Balasore at the time of report.

5. Condition and prospects.—The condition of the crop is, on the whole, fair.

6. General.—The quantity of jute which remains from the crop of 1920 is reported to be much in Purnea and Balasore and small in the remaining districts.

The statement below compares the area under jute in this province this year with the preliminary and final figures of last year:—

APPENDIX I.

First Forecast of the Jute Crop of Bihar and Orissa, 1921.

Division.	District.	Total area of the district.	Estimated total area under cultivation	Estimated normal area under jute (This figure has been arrived at by taking the average of 10 years immediately preceding the year to which this forecast relates.)	ESTIMATED AREA UNDER JUTE.		Whether much, little or no jute remains in the district from the crop of 1920.	Date by which the sowing of the crop generally commenced this year and whether that date was early, normal or late.	REMARKS BY DISTRICT OFFICERS.
					Last year (1920). (Final figures.)	This year (1921).
1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10
		Acres.	Acres.		Acres.	Acres.
Tirhut	Champaran	2,203,840	1,430,200	2,000	1,400	1,300	A little ..	Middle of April to beginning of May	The weather and rainfall conditions are now favourable for the growth of the crop. They were not quite favourable in the beginning. The condition of the crop is good now. The date of sowing was normal in the Sadr subdivision and somewhat late in the bettiah subdivision; they have been completed. The decrease in area sown this year is due to low prices obtained by the cultivators last year.
	Muzaffarpur	1,942,324	1,627,000	1,900	2,300	2,925	Nil ..	Last week of March.	The weather and rainfall have not been favourable. The condition of the crop is fair. The date of sowing was normal. Sowing has not yet been completed, it depends upon the condition of the weather and rainfall The figures are under investigation and an explanation of the increase will be submitted in the next forecast.
Bhagalpur	Bhagalpur	2,661,020	1,684,100	1,257	1,150	1,173	Very little ...	June ..	Sowing has not been completed.
	Purnea ..	3,196,153	1,694,400	206,800	153,000	86,000	Much ...	March ...	Owing partly to heavy fall in the price of jute and partly to non-co-operation movement much less area has been cultivated with this crop during the current year The recent rain has done immense good to the crop and a favourable outturn is expected. The condition of the crop is fair.
	Santal Parganas.	3,490,400	1 717,900	3,100	900	500	Little remains in Pakaur, but much in Rajmahal.	First week of June.	Decrease in area in comparison with the normal area is due to want of rain at the time of sowing Now that the rains have set in there is likelihood of more lands being sown
Orissa ...	Cuttack ...	2,340,307	1,223,500	18,100	18,000	13,500	Very little ...	First week of May.	The weather and rainfall have not been favourable for the growth of the crop. The condition of the crop is fair. The date of sowing was late. Sowings have been almost completed. The decrease in area sown this year is due to want of rain in April and May last which affected the preparation of lands for the crop. The area under the crop is likely to increase hereafter.
	Balasore ..	1,332,621	932,200	2,500	2,100	1,000	Much jute remains in the hands of the cultivators owing to low demand for export.	Second week of June.	Jute is generally sown in the month of April, but this year, as there was no rain, the sowing was much late and also on small area as the outturn of last year could not be disposed of owing to less demand for export
	Total ...	17,222,665	10,300,300	235,657 or in round numbers 235,700	178,750 or in round numbers 178,800	106,398 or in round numbers 106,400

DEPARTMENT OF LAND RECORDS AND AGRICULTURE, ASSAM.

Preliminary Forecast of the Jute Crop in Assam, 1921.

(NOTE.—On an average of the five years ending 1918, the area under jute in Assam represents some 3·5 per cent. of the total area under jute in British India.)

1. Character of the season.—Following a dry February the weather at sowing time was wet, especially in the Assam Valley; since then there has generally been continuously heavy rain seriously affecting the growth of the crop. Floods in Cachar, Sylhet, Goalpara, Kamrup, Lakhimpur and Garo Hills have damaged the crop considerably in low lands. The prospects are everywhere worse than last year, except in Nowgong.

2. Area sown.—The total area under jute, according to the Deputy Commissioners' estimates, has decreased by over 30 per cent. from that of last year, i.e. from 124,600 acres in 1920 to 87,200 acres in 1921. The decrease occurred practically in all districts, owing mainly to the very low price of jute and the unfavourable weather conditions.

3. Stock.—As reported by the Deputy Commissioners much jute still remains in Goalpara, which is the chief jute-growing district, while in the other districts there is little stock.

Cachar ...	300	300	200	. ...	100	Nil ..	Middle of April, normal.	The decrease in area as compared with the actual of last year is due to the fall in price of jute and unfavourable weather. There was drought in February followed by excessive rain afterwards, which stopped growth. The condition of the crop is worse than last year.
Sylhet ...	16,000	14,200	12,100	..	2,100	Little	Beginning of April normal.	The wet weather at sowing time and the low price of jut account for the decrease in area as compared with last year, heavy rain at the beginning of June submerged the crop in the low lying tracts.
Goalpara ...	42,400	56,900	29,200	...	27,700	A great quantity of jute remains in the district owing to low prices in Calcutta	Mid-March normal.	There was a great decrease in the area from that of previous year owing to the poor prices of jute last year and to wet weather at the time of sowing; subsequent further heavy rains and floods which affected cultivation and growth have caused considerable damage.
Kamrup ...	8,100	15,800	12,300	.....	3,500	Little remains ...	Twelfth March; early.	The excessive rainfall at sowing time is responsible for the decrease in area. The constant heavy rainfall and early floods has retarded growth and caused serious damage.
Darrang ...	7,000	11,400	9,300	... .	2,100	some still remains in stock	Middle of April normal.	The decrease in area is due to wet weather at sowing time and very low prices. The weather continues to be unfavourable up till now.
Nowgong ...	5,700	21,300	20,300	.....	1,000	Little	20th March; early.	The decrease is due to the low price of jute. The weather up till now has been good and the outturn is expected to be better than last year.
Sibsagar ..	300	300	400	100	.....	Little jute remains	Middle of April; normal.	The difference is due to ordinary fluctuations. The condition of weather continues to be wet, affecting growth to some extent. The outturn is not likely to be better than last year.
Lakhimpur ...	200	200	100	.....	100	Nil	1st April normal	The weather has been rainy and unfavourable for the cultivation and growth of the crop. Rain and floods have done damage in North Lakhimpur. The outturn is likely to be worse than last year.
Garo Hills ... (Plains portion).	4,100	4,200	3,300	.....	900	Very little .	5th April normal	The very low price of jute last year accounts for the decrease in area. Weather was rainy at sowing time, but there was bad drought in May followed by heavy rains at the beginning of June. Floods caused serious damage in the low-lying villages. The present condition except in high lands, is very bad and outturn is expected to be below normal.

RESOLUTION ON THE REPORT ON THE POLICE ADMINISTRATION OF THE TOWN OF CALCUTTA AND ITS SUBURBS FOR THE YEAR 1920.

GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL.

POLICE DEPARTMENT.

CALCUTTA, THE 18TH JULY 1921.

RESOLUTION—No. 2230Pl.

READ—

The annual report on the Police Administration of the town of Calcutta and its suburbs for the year 1920.

MR. R. CLARKE, C.I.E., the Commissioner of Police, was on leave from the 12th March to the 9th November, and Mr. Roddis acted for him during this period.

2. One of the outstanding features of the year's administration was the growing dissatisfaction of the subordinate staff with their pay and prospects. A small increase of pay had been granted to constables in 1918, but the cost of living continued to increase, and wages offered by private employers rose correspondingly, with the result that the standard of pay in the Calcutta police again fell below the point at which there is a reasonable equilibrium between the demand for and the supply of recruits. Resignations and desertions, and the failure of recruiting measures, showed that an amelioration of the economic conditions of the subordinate ranks was an imperative and immediate necessity. The pay of constables, head constables and sergeants was accordingly raised further in October 1920. Subsequently further increases were sanctioned for constables and head constables, together with the grant of railway warrants to men proceeding on leave. It is satisfactory to note that recruitment has since improved and resignations are fewer. The pay of the upper subordinate ranks was raised after the close of the year.

3. The Commissioner draws attention to the increase in the number of cases of robbery and to the connected problem of dealing with the goonda or hooligan element Representative opinion was consulted on the proposal to confer power on the executive to remove from the city desperate and dangerous characters of this class, the majority of whom are foreigners to Bengal, but the suggested remedy was not viewed with entire favour. Meanwhile a special police staff has been appointed to investigate the problem more thoroughly and to co-ordinate measures for dealing with it so far as existing difficulties will allow. The considerable increase in the number of bad livelihood cases is due to the more vigorous action directed against goondas. The rise in the number of prosecutions for gambling and cruelty to animals is also noticeable, as also the absence of serious rioting, although the industrial unrest led to a very marked increase in the number of strikes.

4. The work of the Public Vehicles Department, comprising motor vehicles and hackney carriage branches, which was established during the year, continued to grow in magnitude and complexity. The number of motor vehicles registered was 3,701 as compared with 1,745 in 1919, and 741 in 1918, while to enforce compliance with the traffic and motor vehicles rules, 12,176 cases were reported as against 2,891 in 1919. Even so, the number of persons killed or injured in the streets by motor vehicles in 1920 was nearly double the number in 1919. The ministerial staff of the department was strengthened during the year, and an increase in the executive staff has since been sanctioned. The revision of the rules, particularly with reference to taxi-cabs, which is now under contemplation, and the increased supervision and control rendered possible with the larger staff will, it is hoped, succeed in raising the stan lard of the motor car service and in rendering the streets more safe.

5. For financial reasons, little was done during the year towards solving the problem of accommodation for the police in Calcutta. The new hospital is approaching completion, but it was not found possible to construct much wanted buildings for police stations and staff. The yearly rent paid to private owners rose by Rs. 92,468 to Rs. 4,01,958, and the total must continue to increase as leases fall in and are renewe l at higher rates owing to the rise in the value of house property. The Commissioner's proposals for a house building scheme to be financed from a loan were examined by Government, and further details are awaited.

6. The Governor in Council has read with pleasure the list of officers who have been commended for good work by the Commissioner of Police. The conduct and discipline of the force were satisfactory. The thanks of Government are due to Mr. Clarke and Mr. Roddis for maintaining a high standard of efficient administration.

ORDER.—Ordered that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Commissioner of Police, Calcutta, the Chief Presidency Magistrate, Calcutta, and the Commissioner of the Presidency Division for information.

Ordered also that a copy of the resolution and a copy of the report be submitted to the Government of India in the Home Department.

Ordered also that the resolution be published in the Calcutta Gazette.

By order of the Governor in Council,

J. DONALD,
Chief Secretary
to the Government of Bengal (offg.).

DISTRICT REPORTS ON WEATHER AND CROPS.

For the week ending on the 13th July 1921.

Summary.—During the week rainfall was general throughout the province. The fall was heavy in North and in parts of East Bengal and generally light to moderate elsewhere. Transplantation of winter paddy is proceeding. Cutting, steeping and washing of jute are going on in low lands of Eastern Bengal. Weeding continues in the western districts. The prospects of ripe autumn paddy are generally reported to be satisfactory in East Bengal, but those of other crops are fair. The average price of common rice for the province has risen by about 0·11 per cent. as compared with that of the previous week.

POLITICAL.

Simla, the 19th July 1921.

No. 190.—The report submitted by the Committee appointed in the Home Department resolution No. 534-Political, dated the 21st March 1921, as subsequently amended, to examine and report on the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867, the Newspapers (Incitements to Offences) Act, 1908, and the Indian Press Act, 1910, is published below for general information.

H. D. CRAIK,
Secretary to the Government of India (offg.).

Report of the Committee appointed by the Government of India to examine the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867, and the Indian Press Act, 1910, and the Newspapers (Incitements to Offences) Act, 1908.

In accordance with the instructions contained in the Home Department resolution No. 534, dated the 21st March 1921, we the members of the Committee appointed by the Government of India to examine the Press and Registration of Books Act, 1867, the Indian Press Act, 1910, and the Newspapers (Incitements to Offences) Act, 1908, have the honour to report for the information of Government and such action as they may think desirable, our conclusions on the questions referred to us for examination.

2. These conclusions have, we may state, been reached after a careful survey of the political situation, an exhaustive examination of witnesses who appeared before us and a scrutiny of voluminous documentary evidence including the valuable and weighty opinions of local Governments placed at our disposal by the Government of India as well as of the memoranda submitted to us by various members of the public. Many of these memoranda were sent in response to a general invitation issued by the Government of India to those interested in the subject under discussion to communicate their views to Government for the information of the Committee. We have examined orally eighteen witnesses, all connected with the Press, and we also invited eight other prominent journalists to give evidence; to our great regret, they were, however, either unable or, in some cases, unwilling to accept our invitation.

3. Of the Acts referred to us for examination, the Indian Press Act, 1910, is by far the most important, and it will therefore be convenient if in the first place we record our conclusions in respect of that Act. This is the more desirable because our recommendations in respect of the other two Acts referred to us, must be largely dependent on our findings regarding this measure.

It is unnecessary to discuss in this report the reasons which induced the Government of India to place the Indian Press Act on the Statute Book. Those who are interested in the subject will find the facts fully explained in the reports of the discussions on the bill in Council. It is apparent, however, that the main object of the Act was to prevent the dissemination of incitements to violence and of sedition, although the scope of section 4 of the Act is much wider. Since 1910, however, circumstances have changed very materially and we have to consider the necessity for the continuance of this law in the light of a political situation entirely different from that in which it was enacted.

4. The chief questions that have to be examined in our opinion are, firstly, whether the Act has been effective in preventing the evil against which it was directed; secondly, whether legislation of this character is now necessary for the maintenance of law and order; and thirdly, whether on a comparison of the advantages and disadvantages which the retention of the Act would involve, its continuance is desirable in the public interest. We may say at the outset that on a careful consideration of these points, we are of opinion that the Act should be repealed.

5. As to the effectiveness of the Act, it is generally admitted that direct incitements to murder and violent crime which are specifically referred to in section 4 (1) (a) of the Act are rarely found in the Press to-day. This was not the case in 1910 so far as a certain section of the Press was concerned, and it is the view of at least one local Government that the Press Act has contributed to the elimination of such public incitements. We are not, however, satisfied that the cessation of such incitements is due solely or even mainly to the Act or that in present conditions the ordinary law is not adequate to deal with such offences. Further, it must be admitted that in so far as the law was directed to prevent the more insidious dissemination of sedition, of general misrepresentations of the action of Government, of exaggerations of comparatively minor incidents, of insinuations of injustice and of articles intended to exacerbate racial feeling, the Act has been of little practical value, for we find that a section of the Press is at present just as hostile to Government as ever it was and that it preaches doctrines calculated to bring the Government and also occasionally particular classes or sections of the community into hatred and contempt as freely now as before the Act was passed. Moreover, we believe that the more direct and violent forms of sedition are now disseminated more from the platform and through the agency of itinerary propagandists than by the Press, and no press law can be effective for the repression of such activities. In our opinion, therefore, it must be admitted that the Act has not been wholly effective in securing the object which it was enacted to achieve. We observe that one witness before us went so far to as say that it had both been futile and irritating.

6. Turning to the question of the necessity for such legislation we find that it was an emergency measure enacted at a time when revolutionary conspiracies, the object of which was directly promoted by certain organs of the Press, were so active as to endanger the administration. We believe that this revolutionary party is now quiescent, that the associations supporting it have been broken up and that many members of the revolutionary party have realized that the object which they had in view can, under present conditions, be achieved by constitutional means. Further, the political situation has undergone great changes since 1910 and the necessity for the retention of the Act must be examined in the light of the new constitutional position created by the inauguration of reforms. Many of us feel that the retention of this law is, in these circumstances, not only unnecessary but incompatible with the increasing association of representatives of the people in the administration of the country. We believe also that the malignant influence of seditious organs of the press will in future be, and in fact is already beginning to be, counteracted by the growth of distinct parties in politics, each supported by its own press, supplemented by the activities of a properly organised Bureau of Information, the value of which was admitted by many witnesses. It is true the scope of the Act is not limited to the prevention of sedition but it if not necessary for us to discuss in detail the subsidiary provisions included in section 4 of the Act as we believe that these provisions have seldom been used and that the evils against which they are directed can be checked by the ordinary law. We think, therefore, that under present conditions the retention of the Act for the purposes for which it was enacted is unnecessary.

7. On an examination of the third aspect of the case, viz., the comparative advantages and disadvantages of retaining the Act, we find that, while many local Governments advocate its retention in the interests of the administration, on the other hand the Act is regarded with bitter hostility by nearly all shades of Indian opinion. Most of the witnesses examined before us believe it to be indefensible in principle and unjust in its application. It has been said that the terms of section 4 of the Act are so comprehensive that legitimate criticism of Government might well be brought within its scope; that the Act is very uncertain in its operation; that it has been applied with varying degrees of rigour at different times and by different local Governments, and in particular that it has not been applied with equal severity to English-owned and Indian-owned papers. A general feeling was also apparent among the witnesses that the Act is irritating and humiliating to Indian journalism and that the resentment caused by the measure is the more bitter because of the great services rendered to Government by the Press in the war. Many witnesses indeed are of opinion that the Act is fatal to the growth of a healthy spirit of responsibility in the Press and that it deters persons of ability and independent character from joining the profession of journalism. Finally it is maintained that the Act places in the hands of the executive government arbitrary powers, not subject to adequate control by any independent tribunal, which may be used to suppress legitimate criticism of Government, and that such a law is entirely inconsistent with the spirit of the reforms scheme and the gradual evolution of responsible Government.

8. There is in our judgment great force in many of these criticisms. We find, as already noted, that the Act has not proved effective in preventing the dissemination of sedition and that it is doubtful whether it is necessary to retain it for the purpose of preventing incitements to murder and similar violent crime; further in view of the cogent criticisms made as to the principles and operation of the Act, we have come to the conclusion that it would be in the interests of the administration that it should be repealed. In making this recommendation, we have not overlooked the opinion expressed by various local Governments that the retention of the Act is desirable in the interest of law and order. We observe, however, that there is a considerable divergence of opinion among those Governments on this point, and while we realize that the views of those who are opposed to repeal of the Act are entitled to great weight, and indeed that these views have been accepted by the Government of India frequently in times past, we are satisfied that there is a genuine popular demand for its repeal and we consider that in the altered circumstances created by the reforms, the advantages likely to be secured by repeal of this measure outweight the benefits which could be obtained by its retention on the Statute Book.
